THREE WAYS

A Socialist Government has been elected in Saskatchewan. The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation is now the Official Opposition in British Columbia, Ontario, and as far as there is an opposition, in Manitoba — and in power in Saskatchewan. The victory in Saskatchewan was won in spite of the most bitter newspaper opposition. The Regina Leader-Post carried on an unremitting heavy bombardment day after day. Now that the results are known, something like consternation has seized the older parties, and the business community. The trouble with both these latter groups is, that they failed to read the signs of the times. Now having seen what has happened, one of three policies should, at once, be adopted. The victory can be ignored, opposed or met. To oppose it is to act like King Canute — stand on the shore and try to brush the waves back. That is one way. Another is to oppose the Socialist trend in the world. This has been done in Canada. Following the Ontario election, Gladstone Murray was provided with ample funds and set adrift on his campaign to turn public opinion away from Socialist trends into the old channels, with which we have been familiar. Then, too a highly financed propaganda agency with headquarters in Toronto, regularly sent pamphlets and broadsides to moulders of public opinion all across Canada. Here again the results, as demonstrated in Saskatchewan on June 15th, hardly justify the effort and expense of this form of approach to the problem.

The third way is the third approach. We advocated it eleven years ago. We can do no better than to suggest it again. Governments and business organizations should recognize that we are living in a new day, that we are hammering out a new form of economic, political and social life. Recognizing that, then, these leaders should, at once, seek to adjust their programs to suit the new conditions. The C. C. F. is a new party. It is made up of many people from many walks of life. They represent the new order. They have a plan, a program, clear cut and definite. For a long time it has been said that the only difference between the Liberal and the Progressive Conservative Parties is that one is in power and the other is out. Well here is a new party with a sharp distinction in its program between itself and the older parties. Surely it is clear as crystal that it cannot be ignored. If Mr. Bracken's New Party hopes to win the confidence of the public he must have a program which will match that of the C. C. F. So far as the Liberals are concerned, it may be too late to make the necessary adjustments. So long as the Liberal Party could carry Saskatchewan and Quebec, they were sure of election. The picture looks different now. The Dominion Liberal Party cannot bank on Saskatchewan, and there may be difficulty in holding Quebec. The trial of popular support may rest in the next Dominion election between the Progressive Conservative Party and the C. C. F. If the former hopes to win it dare not ignore the social and economic changes on which the Saskatchewan Co-operative Commonwealth Federation rode to power.

DeGAULLE AGAIN

We have received a letter from one of our valued readers in the United States, who takes a somewhat different view on the failure of the United States to recognize General deGaulle than was taken by this paper. The writer says:

"I think you will find the probable reason for hesitancy is not as much caution economic or social, but due to the feeling that, as President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull have so often said — when a country is liberated that country will have free choice to name its own government. You see how that happened in Italy with Badoglio. DeGaulle has nanped himself, and many think he has created that right, and here they still feel the way should be left open, and I am inclined to to think the Government here is right, and pretty wise."

We appreciate the temper of this letter, and yet we must point out that the writer is hardly justified in making such a sweeping statement that, "here they still think the way should be left open." "Here" meaning of course, the United States, is not of one opinion by any means. Indeed there is a very strong section of public opinion which favors recognition of deGaulle. Both Dorothy Thompson and Walter Lippman, two of America's most brilliant and penetrating columnists, take this view. Dorothy Thompson has to say:

"The diplomatic crisis with France has now reached a climax, and, as numbers of publicists have warned,

The Development Of Flinton Continuation School

WRITTEN BY VIOLET LOYST NOYES
FLINTON, ONTARIO

A few years ago, the community of which Flinton is a part, was without any educational opportunities beyond an Entrance Certificate, and if the parents could afford it, one year of Preparation School work.

The town of Napanee, the villages of Tweed, Newburgh and Madoc all maintained good High Schools, and in addition to their own, could accommodate a few outside students at $40 a year per person. Only about 20 per cent of the students in the community were financially able to continue.

In 1928 a new school had to be erected at Flinton. It was then that Mr. J. Davidson, secretary-treasurer, and Mr. Joseph Yanch, both serving on the board of trustees, suggested that room for a Continuation School be also included. At the next board meeting the suggestion was placed before the trustees; but the idea went down for the moment under a deluge of fears of a raise in taxes and plunging the village in debt. The meeting closed however, with one ray of hope. R. J. Campbell, Reeve of Flinton, offered to present the suggestion to the County Council and lend every assistance toward carrying it out. On his return from the meeting, Mr. Campbell proudly presented the secretary-treasurer with a grant of $300.

No, a new menace had to be disposed of before the work could begin. At Northbrook, five miles distant, a new school was also being erected, and many of the people in that district felt that the Continuation School should be located at that point. The approval of the public school inspector at Sharbot Lake for a Continuation School at Flinton was first obtained by Messrs. Davidson and Yanch and as a final effort they drove to Parham to enlist the support of W. D. Black, Member of Parliament for Frontenac-Addington riding. From the Board of Education at Toronto Mr. Black not only secured a grant of $500, but an Inspector of Continuation Schools was dispatched to Flinton with outlines of plans, and diagrams to assist in making the project more easy and sure. The work was soon under way, and in 1930, a new school proudly opened its doors to the many students who came in from all parts of the country, with Miss Warren, of Cornwall, Ont. and Miss Fronties, of Finch, Ont., capably in charge.

In 1940, a banquet was held in the Town Hall at Flinton, with members of the school board both past and present contributing a few remarks. Mr. Moffett, Principal of Tweed High School, guest speaker of the evening, commended the good work done by the school, as graduate nurses, lawyers stenographers, school teachers and many others who had attended the school took their place in the business and professional life of the country.

Now, in 1944, the school is operating under full equipment. It has all modern facilities and only the most efficient teachers. No debts have been incurred against the village or the community, and at a saving of approximately $500 per year per person, the Department has hundreds of dollars to its credit.

Conway - Sandhurst

Conway - Sandhurst, June 19. — The showers of the last few days have been helpful for gardens, but not for the haying, which many have begun. Reports are that the hay crop of this year is not a very heavy one, although few are fearing any serious shortage.

Seeley, M.A., D.D., Dean of Ontario. Mr. Wallace Havelock Robb, of Kingston, spoke in connection with the "Bristol Bell", which was made in 1690, and was the first used in Upper Canada. Special music for the occasion was given by Mr. G. Maybee and the cathedral choir.

A gloom was cast over the community on Monday of last week when word was received of the death in the Kingston General Hospital of Mrs. J. McConnell, of Sydenham. For the past few years Mrs. McConnell, who was in failing health had made her home with her sister, Mrs. W. H. Phippen, Conway. While here she made a large circle of friends, who were grieved to learn of her sudden passing. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to Quite a number from here attended the wedding of Mrs. Nora Leaver, of Forest Mills, and Mr. Geo. Light, of Kingston, which was conducted in Kingsford Anglican Church on Saturday afternoon.

The service was commemorating the 160th anniversary of the landing of the Loyalists and the 60th anniversary of the building of St. Alban's Church. Mr. Havelock Robb, the poet and naturalist, of Kingston, attended the service and afterwards spoke to the congregation on the lawn of the church, on the subject of bells, and particularly of the bell of this church, which came from England so many years ago. The honor roll of the enlisted men and women of the Anglican Church was also unveiled by Rev. H. Secker, rector. Many from Kingston, Belleville, Picton and Napanee, attended the service.

BATH

Bath, June 17. — The dance sponsored by the gentlemen members of the Bath War Services, held on Wednesday evening in the Masonic Hall, was a grand success. The proceeds at the door were very encouraging. There were two draws. The lucky ticket on the velvet quilts was held by Mr. Albert Thompson, and the one on the satin cushion was held by Mrs. C. F. Young, Jr. The money received from the various projects for the evening will be used to send food and comforts to our boys overseas. These boxes will be on their way very soon, as the need is very urgent.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Lauretta McQuin was held on Sunday afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Young, to the United Church. Rev. Jas. Robinson conducted the service. The deceased lady suffered a stroke during the night and was unable to receive food. She lay helpless for a week, but, in spite of loving care, she passed away. She was the former Lauretta Buck and was married to William McQuin, who predeceased her some years ago. She spent many years in Bath, and was well known for her cheery smile and goodwill. She leaves one daughter, Mabel, Mrs. Young, and two sons, Fred, of Sault Ste. Marie, and Clarence, of Bath. One older son, Percy, passed away some time ago. There were several grandchildren, one in particular, William, who, after the death of his father, made his home with his grandmother. There are several sisters and brothers. The floral tributes were many and very beautiful. Interment took place in the family plot in the church cemetery.

A very pretty June wedding was solemnized in St. John's Church on Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, when Reg. L. G. O. Walker conducted the sacred rite of matrimony between Helen Isabel, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richt. Lockhee, of Ernestown, and Donald Bertram, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Morrow, R.R. 1, Bath. Mrs. Walker played the wedding march on the violin, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Thurlow, as the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She looked charming in a white printed satin floor length dress and veil, and carried an armful of red roses and carnations. The two bridesmaids, Miss Blanche Locking, sister of the bride, and Miss Doris Morrow, sister of the groom, looked very sweet, gowned alike in floor length gowns of white over silk, carrying bouquets of pink carnations. The groom was supported by a close friend, A.C.2 Andrew Miller. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Locking received the guests, dressed in a black ensemble trimmed with white, and a corsage of roses and sweet peas. Mrs. Morrow received with her, in a blue ensemble with a corsage of roses and sweet peas. A delicious buffet luncheon was served to about 50 guests on the lawn. Mr. Walker proposed a toast to the bride. The groom responded. Later, amid showers of confetti and good wishes, the young couple left for a trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls, and Owen Sound. The good wishes of the community go with them for a very happy future.

Bath's grand old lady Miss Patience Williams, celebrated her 91st birthday on Friday, June 16th. As has been her custom for years, she made a delicious birthday cake and had it decorated for the occasion. During the afternoon and evening she was at home to her many friends, who called to wish her "Happy Birthday". There were many messages from far and near, as she has lived her entire life in the village. She taught Sunday School for over 40 years, and is beloved by all who have known her. She is familiarly known as "Aunt Pate". We are proud of this dear old girl, and wish her much happiness for a much longer time.

ROBLIN

Roblin, June 19. — What might have been a serious accident occurred near here on Thursday afternoon, when Ed Jordan, of Maribank, overturned his truck, which was loaded with marl, in order to avoid crashing into a car driven by Mr. Coulter of Moneymore. Fortunately no one was injured, but the truck had to be towed to a garage for repairs.

Mr. Hinton was guest speaker at the United Church on Sunday evening. His address, which was on the temperance cause, was inspiring.

Miss Marjorie Hawley, of Reidville, spent the week end with Miss Lois Kimmett.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Richmond and Tom were in Kingston on Thursday and visited Mr. and Mrs. Palmer.

The June meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Volney Woods. The business meeting was presided over by the President, Mrs. J. Kimmett. Mrs. Kimmett gave a report of the District Annual, which was held in Napanee on May 25th. Mrs. George Barringer had charge of the program on "Home Economics".

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Schamehorn, and Mr. and Mrs. Wray Young attended the camp meeting at Bethel on Sunday.

Mr. James Richmond was able to return to his home from Kingston General Hospital on Thursday, much improved.

Mrs Jane Doidge visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McFarland on Wednesday. The following day she accompanied Mrs. Fred McFarland, Mrs. Moore Sanford and Mrs. Fred Armstrong to Belleville, where she spent the day shopping, and later had supper with Dr. A. E. Miles. After spending Friday with Mr. and Mrs. Durland McFarland, Mrs. Doidge returned home.

Having extended her visit longer than she meant to, the old lady was going home after dark—and it was dark. Presently, in spite of all her care, she bumped into a dimly-seen man and they both crashed on the pavement. At once the man was all apologies.

"So sorry" he murmured. "Careless of me. Let me help you up. So sorry."

"Never mind all that," returned the old lady, curtly. "Will you please tell me which way I was facing before I was knocked down."

The leader of the party visiting a mental institution went up to a group of inmates standing near the gate. Quietly he addressed one of them.

"Why are you all here, my good man?"

The other grinned, pointed to the party, and gave the simple reply: "Because we're not all there."

JUVENILE SOFTBALL LEAGUE

FOUR TEAMS WILL CONTEST AN INTERESTING SERIES — GAMES PLAYED AT GIBBARD BALL PARK

The first of a series of softball games was played on Monday, June 12th, with Culhane's team winning a well contested game over Roffey's team by a score of 16 to 17. This league is sponsored by Gibbard's Recreation Committee and is well supported by a number of Napanee's coming ball players. There are four teams in the league, each of which is managed by a senior.

Highlights of the above game were second baseman Porter playing on Roffey's team, hit a home run with two men on bases, and Cooper, for Culhane's team connected for a homer with one man on base.

Jones, who pitches for Culhane, was out to win his own ball game and connected for a home run with one man on base, and batted in two other runs.

In the second game, played at the Gibbard Memorial Park Huffman's team defeated Bentley's team by a score of 14 to 13. There were no home runs but Glen Wagar came close when he hit the ball over the centre fielder's head, but in trying to extend a three-base hit was put out at home plate. There was plenty of action in the game and the two teams are fairly well matched.

The standing up to Monday of this week, is as follows:

WEDDING BELLS

LIGHT - LEAVER

St. Jude's Church, Kingsford, was the scene of a pretty early summer wedding at 2:00 p.m., Saturday, June 10th, when Rev. V. P. Heaven united in marriage Nora May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leaver, Forest Mills, and George William Light, son of the late Mr. Frederick Light, and Mrs. Light of Kingston, Ont. Mrs. Heaven, of Shannonville, played the wedding music, playing the Bridal chorus from Lohengrin as the bridal party entered the church, and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Leslie Mellow sang "Oh Perfect Love."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in her wedding gown, a floor-length model of white sheer, with a floor length veil, and carried a bouquet of red roses.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Leaver, who wore a dress of powder blue sheer and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Fred Light, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Hugh Clarke and Mr. Isaac Frovins.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother received her guests wearing a handsome gown of flowered jersey, with white accessories, and a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Light, mother of the groom, also received, wearing a dress of mauve figured crepe, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Later the bride and groom left, on a motor trip to Ottawa and points east. The bride travelled in a navy pin-stripe tailored suit with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Kingston.

WOOD - PETERSON

The Standard Church, Napanee, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Monday, June 19, at 2 o'clock, when Edna Madelin Raith, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Peterson was united in marriage to Samuel Orloff, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Wood, Carrying Place, formerly of Wilton, Ont. Rev. G. Kelly performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Rev. N. Wagar, wore a floor-length dress of white crepe sheer and a shoulder length veil. She carried red roses.

Miss Evelina Peterson, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a Copen blue floor-length dress with pink roses. Mr. Barney Wood, brother of the groom acted as best man.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for approximately thirty-five guests.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride wore a suit of royal blue, with white accessories. On their return they will reside in Napanee.

Flo-glaze Paint is made with a specially treated linseed oil which causes it to flow evenly and smoothly leaving no brush marks.

Brush marks are really hundreds of tiny grooves in a paint film. The grooves collect and hold dirt which not only spoils the appearance of your paint job but may cause early peeling and cracking.

When you paint with Flo-glaze, there is no place for dirt to catch and hold on top of the smooth film, which washes clean with the natural rains.

THE BEST KNOWN SPOT TO MEET AND SHOP

Free Shots ON Local Sport

The Bayshore League continues to run very smoothly . . . up-to-date, anyway.

-:-

The Mohawk Reds are still tops as far as wins are concerned . . . That is up to last Monday.

-:-

Deseronto Redi-Heats are still putting the pressure on and only a break or two kept them from a win last week, from the Reds.

-:-

The Mohawk Blues are not shaping up as well as the fans would like. They lack the pep and team-work of their fellow airmen.

-:-

This was proved last week when the Gibbard Kids trimmed them soundly — 16 to 12, or something.

-:-

The Hunter's Cleaners are still disorganized, but from all accounts, their weak spots are being filled and they promise to give all and sundry a run for their dough.

-:-

Since writing the above they apparently are proving their statement . . . they pounded the Mohawk Blues at Deseronto on Tuesday to the tune of 20 to 3 . . . or around there.

-:-

We pause to comment on a few remarks we overheard in the stands at the Gibbard Park, last week . . . One was the grounds. At Deseronto, the hay in the outfield was ready to cut last week . . . At Napanee, no foul lines beyond first and third — all shots to be called by 'guess-and-by-gall' . . . Also the foul ball into the stands — three or four strings of fairly good chicken wire from roof to edge of railing would allow the fans to sit behind the play and see the game at the proper angle.

-:-

We also heard at Deseronto, that a piece of rope around second base would do wonders in regard to keeping it in place . . . and very few players will take a chance on sliding into home plate . . . the way it looks now it could be used for a seat.

-:-

We doubt if these remarks will bring any change in the "state of affairs" . . . But it's worth a try!

SPECIAL SERVICES IN GRACE CHURCH

At the morning service in Grace United Church, fifty members were received into the congregation on profession of faith and by certificate from other congregations. A reception service was held for twenty-one members of the Sunday school who have been taking weekly instruction from the minister, Rev. C. D. McLellan, and certificates of membership were presented to these young people. The service followed the order for the administration of the Lord's Supper in the United Church. The minister spoke briefly on the subject "Salvation and Communion," taking his text from the 24th chapter of Exodus "Also they saw God, and did eat and drink."

In the afternoon Howard George, and George Donald, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Creighton, received baptism.

The evening service was a memorial for William James Buchanan, who died of wounds on June 8th. Mr. McLellan paid tribute to the many excellent qualities of this fine son of Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan, and a commemoration hymn was sung in his memory. The sermon was based on the text found in Isaiah 2: 2 '3, and the speaker compared the real Jerusalem and the ideal Jerusalem. The real and the ideal are in fact, one and the same, and men are urged to strive for the ideal in church life, political life and personal life. We should keep climbing, and those who die climbing are not really dead. They live, on and we can look forward to a glorious reunion with them in the future. The sympathy of the congregation was conveyed to the bereaved parents and family, and many beautiful flowers were placed in the church in memory of Bill, by relatives and friends.

A Union Prayer service will be held in Trinity Church on Wednesday at 8:00 p.m. (to-night) for intercession for our troops.

WEDDING BELLS

HART - WILSON

A noon wedding of interest took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, Dundas Street, Monday, June 19th, when their only daughter, Anna Jean, became the bride of Vincent O. Hart, M.D., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Hart, Napanee.

The ceremony took place in the living-room which was attractive with large bouquets of early summer flowers. Rev. H. R. Whiting, of Meaford, officiated, and Miss Mary Rogers, Desoronto, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music.

The fair-haired bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in traditional bridal satin. She wore a finger-tip veil which fell gracefully from a sweetheart halo edged with seed pearls, and carried a crescent bouquet of Rapture roses and bouvardia, with ballin streamers.

The maid-of-honor, Miss Evalena Clarke, Reg. Nurse of Kingston, wore blush pink taffeta with calot of blossoms and carried a colonial bouquet of Johana Hill roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Hester Cook, Belleville, wore rainbow blue taffeta with blossom calot and colonial bouquet of Delight roses.

The best man was Corporal Richard C. Rogers, of Peterborough a cousin of the bride, and Donald Williams was usher.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Supper Tea Room, where dinner was served to 100 guests. Mrs. Wilson received, wearing a gown of Delphi Paconne sheer, with corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, dressed in orchid crepe with white accessories and corsage of red roses.

For travelling the bride chose a suit of blush pink sheer wool, with small hat of Alice Blue.

On their return Dr. and Mrs. Hart will reside in Napanee.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Lewis, of Flint, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. G. McMartin, Miss Mae Fleming Miss Sarah Miller and Mr. and Mrs. George Hartman, all of Toronto Miss Lillian Johnston of Ottawa, Earl Kimmett, Hamilton, Mrs. H. Whiting and son, Meaford and Mrs. Minaker, Picton.

Telegrams of congratulation were received from friends, including one from Capt. C. Hart, R.C.A.M.C., a brother of the bridegroom, who at present is stationed in Wainwright, Alberta.

CALDWELL - WARTMAN

A pretty summer wedding took place Tuesday afternoon, June 20th at three o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Wartman John St., Napanee, when their daughter, Hester Phyllis, became the bride of Harry A. Caldwell, Belleville, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Caldwell.

The ceremony, performed by Rev. B. E. Stevenson, Kingston, was conducted in the drawing room, which was beautifully decorated with baskets and bowls of pink and white peonies.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a white slipper satin floor-length gown, inset with Chantilly lace and a finger-tip veil of lace. Her bouquet was a shower of pink roses and pink and white sweet peas. The bride's sister, Miss Alice Wartman was bridesmaid and she was in pale pink silk jersey floor-length dress, with white accessories. The maid-of-honor, Miss Sarah Madden, wore pale blue crepe with white accessories. Both attendants wore corsages of roses. The groomsman was Mr. Douglas Ellis, Belleville.

The wedding music was played by the bride's sister, Miss Carolyn Wartman, and during the signing of the register, the bride's aunt, Mrs. Bruce Finlay, sang "Because."

At the reception following the ceremony the bride's mother, received wearing British tan sheer with white accessories and a corsage of roses.

Later a buffet supper was served in the dining-room where the bride's table was centred with a three-story wedding cake surmounted by a miniature nosegay of flowers and surrounded by white tulle and pink bowls of pink and white sweet peas. The refreshments were served by the bride's sister, Mrs. Harry Moore and Miss Grace Caldwell, bridegroom's sister-in-law Mrs. Alvin Wartman and friends, Miss Doris Kilem, Kingston, Mrs. Harry Bennett, Mrs. W. E. Ellis and Mrs. Bruce Norris.

Following the reception and supper the bride changed to a two-piece printed blue and white silk dress with white accessories for the wedding trip, to Rockport Provincial Park. Later the bride and groom will reside at 38 Bridge Street, W., Belleville.

The Late Mrs. J. H. Fitzpatrick

The unexpected death of Mrs. J. H. Fitzpatrick, wife of the proprietor of the Fairview Hotel, Napanee, occurred at the Kingston General Hospital on Friday, June 16th, following a short illness. Mrs. Fitzpatrick was taken to the hospital on Thursday in a critical condition and failed to rally to treatment.

She was formerly Bertha Woodridge and was born about 63 years ago on the Fairview Road. She came to Canada when a young woman and married Mr. Fitzpatrick at Banff, Alberta. She and her husband came to Napanee in 1919 since when they have operated the Paisley Hotel.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick was a member of St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Ch., and for many years was a member of the choir and the women's organization. She was well known to a wide circle of friends.

She is survived by her husband, and one sister, Mrs. George Moreland, Smith's Falls. Her funeral was conducted at St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church, by Archdeacon R. J. Dumbrille, the rector on Monday afternoon. Interment was in Riverside cemetery.

UTH ADDINGTON DISTRICT W. I. NUAL MEETING

Annual Meeting of the South ington District Women's Insti- was held on Friday, May 26th United Church Hall at Cam- t. The session opened at 9.30 the district president, Mrs. Earl presiding. After the minutes read and approved, the secre- ead cards of thanks from Mrs. ilin and Miss Mary Clark, in reply to letters of sympathy sent to them at the time of their bereavements.

The President then called on Rev. Canon Spencer to extend a welcome to the delegates, Mr. Spencer, in a most interesting address, reviewed the history of the village and then complimented the Women's Institute on the good work they are doing. He said he regretted the increase in juvenile delinquency and thought it was not all, as some think, caused by mothers doing war work and thus leaving their children alone. This did not all happen lately, but went further back than the war. He blamed careless parents, who are engrossed in society, etc., leaving children alone, letting them attend excitable movies with robbery and shooting, and letting them read trashy books and crime magazines. He thought that wholesome amusements should be provided for young people and dances, etc., should be supervised. He appealed to the Women's Institutes to get such movies banned and to get wholesome pictures. He wished the Institutes every success in their good work.

After community singing of "O Canada" and "The More We Get Together," reports were given on Publicity Social Welfare, Home Economics, Citizenship, Historical Research, War Work, and Agriculture.

Mrs. Keyes, Wolfe Island, Addresses Meeting

Mrs. Keyes, of Wolfe Island, the representative from our convention area to the Federated Board, then gave an interesting address. There are 1,327 local branches in Ontario, where it was organized by Mrs. Hoodless 47 years ago. It was transplanted from Ontario to England, where it has the honor of having three members of the Royal Family as members, the Queen Mother, Queen Elizabeth and the Princess Elizabeth. She asked each branch to have its federated dues sent in to the district secretary in February, and also to send the Tweedmuir Village books to the Kingston Convention in the Fall.

She considered the war work report was a wonderful one and urged all members to continue their efforts. She showed a beautifully executed copy of the Mary Stuart Collection and told us a copy can be obtained by writing Miss Evelyn Campbell, Box 805, Station 'F', Toronto.

A humorous recitation was given by Mrs. Wilson of Strathcona, in her usual pleasing manner.

Mrs. C. A. Baker gave the report of the Courtesy Committee, thanking all who helped make the meeting a success.

Miss Margaret Henry, of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, spoke briefly on her work and distributed literature on remaking clothing etc.

Afternoon Session

After lunch Mrs. C. Hyland gave a gracious welcome to all, which was responded to very ably by Mrs. D. Hannah, of Reidville.

Miss Jean Scott then spoke concerning her work. After thanking the Camden East ladies for their hospitality she stated that twenty girls attended the Achievement Day in Napanee, having completed the making of sleeping garments and slippers. Next year the girls study the subject "The Club Girl Entertains." Seven girls from the class at Macrow then gave a song and skit, wearing the pyjamas and slippers they had made.

Mrs. Richmond of Tamworth then gave a demonstration of wall plaques, trays and fruit bowls, made of paper, made by Miss Margaret Mitchell, of Tamworth Continuation School and her pupils.

Mrs. Anton Robinson then explained how to obtain new wool blankets made from old woollen garments.

Music was then contributed by Mrs. Ware, of Tamworth, after which Mrs. Keyes conducted the election of officers. The following officers were returned to office: President, Mrs. E. W. Miss Semmens, Speaker O.R.E.C. Convention Selby United Church

The Annual Convention of the Religious Educational Council of Richmond and North Fredericksburgh Townships and Town of Deseronto was held in Selby United Church on Wednesday, May 31, 1944, with afternoon and evening sessions. Due to the illness of the president; the vice-president Mrs. James Haggerty presided for the sessions. Theme of the convention "The Church Helping Every Home."

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session opened at 1:30 with registration of delegates and visitors. Vivian Henderson of Selby was appointed Press Reporter. Rev. W. R. Merrick gave the address of welcome, which was followed by the worship service conducted by Selby Sunday School.

Rev. C. D. McLellan introduced the guest speaker, Miss NeTannis Semmens, Children's Worker for the United Church of Canada. She gave a very interesting and helpful address. Miss Semmens stated that there is no evangelist in the world like a parent, emphasizing the fact that the atmosphere exposed to the children in the home will determine the concetp they have of religion. Once a child learns the Christian way of life from his parents, he never forgets it.

Miss Semmens outlined several problems with which the parents of to-day find themselves faced:

1 How to help children acquire a growing knowledge of God, and find a satisfying relationship with Him.

Answer: By surrounding them with adults who live a Christian life.

2 How to help children acquire a love and understanding of Jesus, leading to a personal commitment to His way of Life.

Answer: By reading Bible stories which tell about Jesus' live and care for His children.

3 How to help children take an active part in the work of church, and look forward to intelligent church membership.

Answer: Make them feel they have a definite part to play in the work of the Church. For example: Contributing to a special fund such as the Missionary Fund.

4 How to help children develop a growing Christian attitude toward other races and nations, as members of God's Family.

Answer: By always speaking kindly of other races and nations, and by making special mention of them during family prayer.

At this time an inspiring vocal trio was contributed by members of Forest Mills Sunday School.

During the business period the secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved.

In the discussion: "Things we would like to see done in our Township" Rev. A. C. McCallum stressed the importance of enlisting the members of the Sunday School into the membership of the Church, and also of endeavouring to enlist the boys and girls of the Sunday School to attend public worship.

Following this discussion the afternoon session adjourned. Supper was served in the basement, by members of the W. M. S.

Evening Session

Worship service in charge of Deseronto Sunday School opened the evening session.

The outstanding feature of the evening session was the answering of questions handed in at the time of registration. These questions to be ones which had been asked by boys or girls in Sunday School.

1 A class would like to know "If when the Sunday School teacher goes on an all-day picnic or excursion on Sunday is it alright for the class to take the Sunday off, too?"

2 Why is it that so many Sunday School teachers never or seldom attend the public worship service of God? Should the class follow their example — do as they say and not as they do?

3 If we attend Sunday School on Sunday, is it necessary to attend the worship service when our teacher doesn't attend?

Miss Semmens, in answering these questions grouped them and answered them collectively. First, she said no teacher should teach a class unless the teacher was a real Christian and observed the laws of God. In replying to a question from the audience "If a Sunday school couldn't get Christian teachers what would you do?" she said she would rather do away with that class or even close the Sunday school rather than have a teacher who was not consecrated. Second, she said no one should hide behind the teacher's conduct, and because the teacher went on a picnic or excursion on Sunday and did not attend public worship was no excuse for any of the class to follow the teacher's example. We are each responsible for ourselves before God. She also stated that she didn't know how any teacher could get along without the inspiration and help that comes from the public worship service of God.

4 Do you think the International Temperance lessons are any good?

Miss Semmens replied that she thought that whenever the opportunity presented itself each Sunday during the lesson that some thought of temperance should be brought in rather than have a temperance lesson once in two or three months. Miss Semmens pointed out that by intemperance she meant self-indulgence of any kind.

Officers Installed

Rev. H. A. Bunt of Deseronto conducted the installation of officers, who are as follows: President, Mrs. James Haggerty; Vice-President, Mrs. S. Baird; Secretary, Vera McFarlane; Treasurer, Maude McLeod; Supt. of Children's Division, Vivian Henderson; Supt. of Girls' Division, Mrs. A. Valleau; Supt. of Boys' Division, Mr. Clare Sexsmith; Supt. of Adult Division, Mr. William Joyce; Supt. Young People's Division, Marjorie Price; Supt Home Department, Mrs. Harold Dupre; Supt. Teacher Training, Rev. W. R. Merrick; Supt. Missions Dept., Mrs. Sidney Pringle; Supt. Temperance Department, Rev. W. H. Clark.

In the report of the Resolutions Committee read by the secretary, Rev. W. H. Clark, appreciation was expressed to the officials of Selby United Church and also the ladies of the W. M. S. for their welcome and hospitality.

In view of the evil influences of gambling devices such as bingo, slot machines, raffles and lottery, on youth, it was resolved that we put forth earnest efforts to abolish any of these in all organizations of our church in which we may be associated.

A vocal solo was rendered by a member of Roblin Sunday school at this interval.

During Miss Semmens' address of the evening, "The Home as an Agency of Christian Education" she pointed out that the home is the channel through which religion is mediated to the children. She also impressed the fact that children learn religion as it is taught and practised in the home.

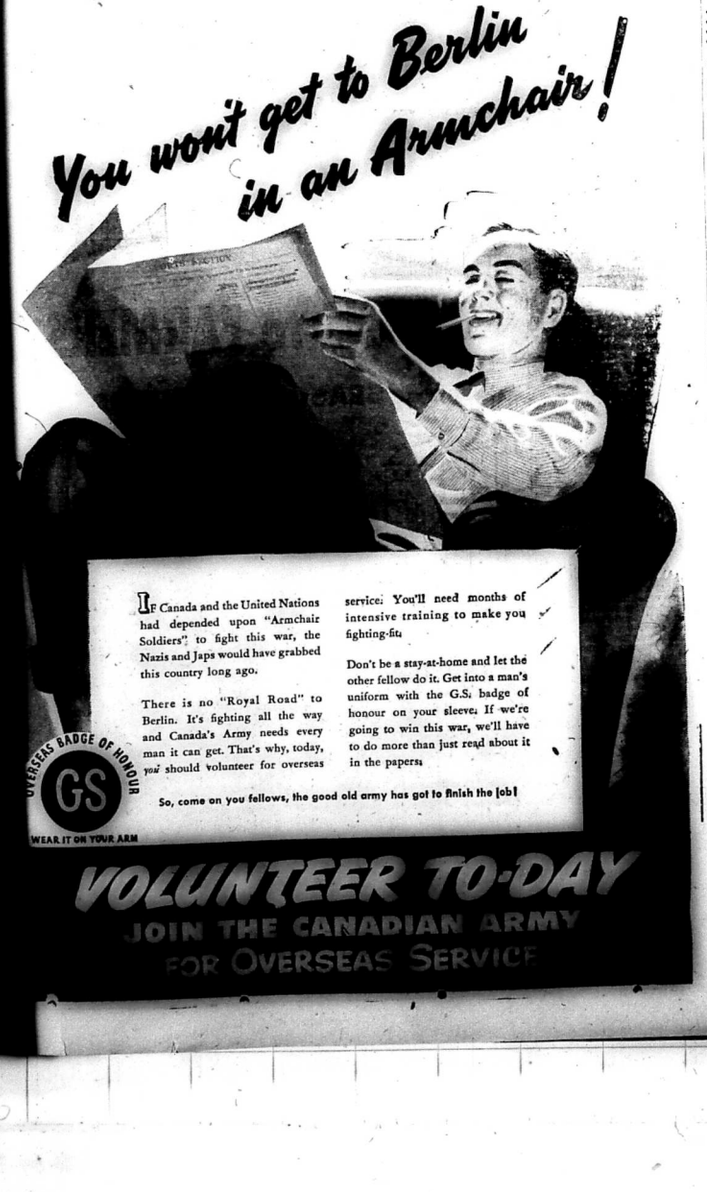
. . . If the United States ever gets a system of governmental regulation, labor will suffer most. — William Green.



You won't get to Berlin in an Armchair!
IF Canada and the United Nations had depended upon "Armchair Soldiers" to fight this war, the Nazis and Japs would have grabbed this country long ago.
There is no "Royal Road" to Berlin. It's fighting all the way and Canada's Army needs every man it can get. That's why, today, you should volunteer for overseas service. You'll need months of intensive training to make you fighting-fit.
Don't be a stay-at-home and let the other fellow do it. Get into a man's uniform with the G.S. badge of honour on your sleeve. If we're going to win this war, we'll have to do more than just read about it in the papers.
So, come on you fellows, the good old army has got to finish the job!

COAL Is Essential

SO IS A WELL-INSULATED HOME

SUMMER HEAT IN THE COLD OF WINTER

The Coal Administrator asks you to "save coal for the Weapons of War" — and what more practical method than thoroughly insulating your home with Rock Wool. It will save coal (and, incidentally, cut down on your fuel bill) because proper insulation holds heat in; helps to prevent heat escaping through walls and ceiling. With Rock Wool insulation, less heat is needed to maintain a comfortable temperature. Rock Wool insulation also helps to decrease fire hazard and to keep your home cooler in summer.

THIRTY GRADUATES FINISH RED CROSS NURSING COURSE

Thirty graduates of the Red Cross Home Nursing Course gathered in the Red Cross rooms, Napanee, Wednesday afternoon, June 21st, to receive graduation certificates and pins. The ceremony was conducted by Miss Beatrice Moreland, District Officer in charge of Red Cross Home Nursing and Emergency Reserve. Kingston Red Cross Command was assisted in the presentation by Miss Lenore Herrington, President of Napanee Branch. Following the graduation the class photograph was taken at The Skitch Studio and later a dinner was held in the Red Cross rooms.

Mrs. Victor Cowling has been the able and enthusiastic officer in charge of the course since last June and it was due chiefly to her efforts that there was such a large and diligent class. On several occasions Mrs. Cowling has entertained the class at social functions, and there has been a fine spirit of co-operation and of friendliness evident at all times.

Mrs. Cowling was assisted in the course by three graduate nurses who gave voluntarily one evening a week to training the members of the course. They are Miss Vine, Mrs. Cowle and Mrs. Asselstine. Great credit is due them for their faithfulness and enthusiasm all through the year, and for the way in which they inspired their pupils and kept up their interest. Practical work was arranged in a room procured for the purpose and furnished as a hospital room through the co-operation of the local branch. When this room was not available some of the nurses taught in their own homes. Many difficulties were encountered but all thirty graduates were able to complete all requirements and have justly earned their certificates. A cup and saucer was presented to Mrs. Frink for her kindness to members of the course during the time when the hospital room was being used.

Following is a list of the graduates: Mrs. Baldree, Mrs. Norman Clark, Mrs. Gordon Giroux, Mrs. Amanda Haggerman, Miss Olive Hambly, Mrs. Wilbert Hart, Mrs. Donald Holmes, Mrs. Kenneth Huffman, Mrs. Lionel Howes, Mrs. Frank Johnston, Mrs. Fred Knox, Mrs. Herb Knuth, Mrs. Glen Lander, Mrs. Mel Lowry, Mrs. Ivy McAllister, Mrs. C. D. McLellan, Mrs. C. McDonald, Mrs. Ernie Marshall, Mrs. Muriel Muir, Miss Mary Nolan, Mrs. Claude Percy, Mrs. Gerald Pollard, Miss Jean Russell, Mrs. Percy Thompson, Mrs. George Van-Kroughnet, Miss Irene Vanslyck, Mrs. Walter Storey, Mrs. Delbert Winter, Mrs. John Woods, and Mrs. Roy Woods.

CITIZENS ARE ASKED TO HOLD LINEN SHOWER IN AID OF RUSSIA

Individual Contributions May be Left at Dominion Stores

The Canadian Aid to Russia Fund is appealing to people in Ontario to share towels, sheets, blankets or quilts with the suffering people in devastated Russia. Such gifts will be shipped to the Soviet Union at once, so that their hospitals, orphanages and families will have them before winter.

Please run a "linen shower" for Russian orphans! Ask your friends to give what they can spare. Good, used bedding will be most welcome.

Each donor will get in exchange for linen, sheets, blankets, etc., tickets for a draw for forty prizes, ranging in value from $50 war bond to a $7.00 mink coat, to order. All prizes were donated by Ontario merchants.

The need in Russia is very great. There are hundreds of thousands of orphans many of them crowding the hospitals, and they have no sheets or blankets or towels. Many little ones have not slept in beds for three years. They have been hiding in dugouts and forests in the occupied areas while their parents fought the enemy.

For almost three years, Russian children have suffered hunger and torture. They saw their parents killed and tortured by the Germans. Countless numbers of young people in Russia have been used as slaves by the Nazis. Many little ones have been shattered in body and mind. They need our help badly!

This year, the Russian armies liberated many cities and villages. These liberated areas need bedding. When the people came back to their native towns or farms, they found gaping, charred holes where their homes once stood. Many are now living in dugouts, without bedding.

Sick children in Russia's hospitals have no bedding. Sick, emaciated aged people in Russia have no bedding. Russian women are working till they drop from fatigue in war plants and on farms, and many have no beds with sheets or blankets to sleep on.

That's how much the Russians are sacrificing for this war. Mrs. Churchill has said we must help them in a spirit of thankfulness, because we owe them a debt we can never repay.

Many Canadians will want to share some of the things they have, with the suffering Russian people who have lost everything in this war. Here is a chance to do it.

And when you donate a towel, sheet or blanket, you will get tickets for the draw for forty valuable prizes.

Take your gifts for Russia to any Loblaw or Dominion Store in the province, and tickets for the prizes will be issued there.

Or else run a private "linen shower" for Russia. Clubs, factories, private stores, organizations that plan to make a "linen shower" for Russia can obtain books of prize tickets at the Aid to Russia Linen Shower office, 16 Bloor Street, W., Toronto.

The Allies continued to make steady gains in Burma.

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Family allowances proposed by the Federal Government would become effective July 1st, 1945, and would range from $5 to $8 a month depending on the age of the children, Premier King revealed in a resolution to the bill placed on the House of Commons' Votings and Proceedings.

The resolution proposed that allowances be paid from that date for each child in Canada under 16 years of age on the following scale:

$5 a month for each child less than six years old; $6 a month for each child of six or more but less than 10; $7 a month for each child of 10 or more but less than 13; $8 a month for each child of 13 years but less than 16 years old.

The resolution provides that the rates should be reduced by $1 a month in respect of the fifth child, by $2 in respect of the sixth and seventh and by $3 in respect of the eighth and additional children.

It also provides that the income tax exemption allowable for children should be reduced "by an appropriate amount based upon the family allowance payable under said measure."

PTE. C. JACKSON OF NAPANEE, KILLED IN ACTION, FRANCE

Mrs. Clayton Jackson, Napanee, received word, last week, that her husband, Pte. Jackson, had been killed in action. The message read: The Minister of Defence regrets deeply, C53508, Pte. Clayton Jackson officially reported killed in action, ninth of June, 1944. Further information follows when received. Director of Records, Ottawa.

The late Clayton Jackson was born in Deseronto in November, 1917 and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Jackson, Mechanic Street. He received his education in Deseronto and was a great lover of sport and played ball and hockey from school days as did most of his brothers.

With his brother, Arthur, he played hockey with Napanee and Belleville and was one of the champions of the Junior Team, 1934-35 and in 1936-37 with the O.H.A. Intermediate B Champions. After going overseas he toured Scotland with a hockey team. He was a member of St. Mark's Anglican Church, choir and Sunday school Deseronto.

He and his brother, Arthur, enlisted in the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders on June 29, 1940, and after being stationed at Kingston, Ottawa and Debert, N.S., he went overseas about a year later.

Two years ago he was injured in a mine explosion which killed a comrade with him. He could have come back to Canada at that time due to the injury to his eyes but did not wish to leave his brother.

He was married in 1938 to Viola Airhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Airhart, who survives with two children Harvey and Shirley, residing in Napanee.

Besides his parents, three sisters, Mrs. Henry Doran, Toronto, Misses Laura and Alice and six brothers remain, Ernest of Whitby, Tom, Bill, George, Gordon of Deseronto, and Arthur, overseas.

FURTHER GASOLINE CUT PROBABLE FOR PUBLIC

Ottawa. — Already tight supply in gasoline can be maintained only if the Allies are able to win a reasonably quick overpowering victory, Munitions Minister Howe told Parliament. Otherwise further curtailment for the public is probable.

In the most extensive review of the position in petrol products yet made to the House or country, Mr. Howe warned that armies — it takes 2,000 gallons to move an armored division one mile—and airmen — a fleet of 5,000 bombers and escort fighters raiding Germany uses 5,250,000 gallons — "must not lack fuel one single instant because of our carelessness, selfishness or waste."

Stocks of crue, he said, were too far below normal to carry us any distance without replacement.

"This" said Mr. Howe, "is not a time for other than the most essential driving. Everyone should let his conscience be his guide in using gasoline of any kind, and this applied to the armed forces, the farmer and everyone else in the country."

PTE. PHILIP JEFFREY WOUNDED IN FRANCE

Mrs. Fred Jeffrey, Napanee, received word last week that her son, Pte. According to word received his wounds were in his right arm.

Pte. Jeffrey enlisted four years ago and has been in England for the past three years.

Two Fires In Cars

The Napanee firemen were called out twice in the past week to extinguish car fires. In both cases very little damage was done.

On Friday evening Gerald Plumley's truck, parked on Dundas St., was found to be on fire and a call was put in for the firemen, who quickly extinguished the fire.

Monday morning about one o'clock, a call was put in for the firemen when smoke was noticed issuing from a car parked in a driveway by Kilborn's Pool Room. Apparently some wires had shortcircuited. The owner of the car was attending the midnight show at the theatre. Very little damage was done.

NOT ACCORDING TO PLAN

Hitler made it a prime axiom of his war strategy, that Germany should never fight on two fronts. He maintained that it was impossible to win against strong forces operating simultaneously on two fronts. That is the reason why the Nazis divided the enemy, made terms with each country separately, and then deliberately broke the treaty obligations and smashed into one after another of the nations with which they had signed treaties of peace. To protect his flank before a complete all-out drive on the British Mediterranean front, Hitler attacked Russia, hoping to have that nation out of the way before turning all his attention to the West. What happened in Russia is now history, and the condition which Hitler dreaded most, has now come to pass. Germany is fighting on two fronts. Indeed Germany is fighting on four fronts. Germany is facing the United Nations in Normandy. This is no longer a beachhead operation. It is a full-fledged front. Men and materials have poured into Normandy at an unbelievable rate. The Germans are hesitating a bit to throw their whole Western reserves into this for fear that the United Nations will effect a landing somewhere else after the German forces have been moved up. The point is that the whole of Germany's western armed forces are held. They cannot be moved to the eastern front.

Just as this point, when the Germans are deeply concerned over the strategy of the United Nations, Russia strikes from the East. Beginning last Friday, the anniversary of the date when Germany broke her treaty with Russia and attacked the U.S.S.R., the Red Armies struck with tremendous power and succeeded in capturing, within three days, the key city of Vitebsk. The reports are that the Nazi forces are retreating in disorder. It is estimated that the Russians have three million men on the East front; that they are well equipped and well supplied with all the necessary armament, air force, and munitions. This is the situation which Hitler sought to avoid. It is the one thing, he said, that Germany must avoid at all costs. He thought he had managed it by his "divide and conquer" policy, but he failed.

The situation, however, is really worse than Hitler anticipated, when he sought to avoid a two-front war. For the forces of Russia are keeping German divisions hemmed up in Finland. Not only so but day and night the Air Force from Great Britain continues its sorties over Germany. As many as 6,000 planes are sometimes sent out in one day, bombing, blasting and disrupting rail centres, arms factories, aeroplane fields and harbour installations. This is another front.

Then, from the South Germany is attacked. The United Nations are pursuing the Nazi forces in Italy, so fast, that the enemy has had little time to stop and make a prolonged stand. Over 165 miles since the fall of Rome have the United Nations chased the enemy. This is another front. Thus, instead of two fronts, which Hitler feared and which he sought, to avoid, he is now fighting on five or six. Indeed, the Germans will probably be quite surrounded with a stell ring before too long and the end which Hitler envisioned in a two-front war will be accellerated.

V

MOVING FAST

Political parties do not, as a rule, move with the speed of lightning. Indeed they are notoriously cautious in making any new moves ordinarily. Every phase of the question at issue must be studied, every possible reaction on public opinion must be anticipated. The speed, therefore, the unseeming haste, with which Senator Bouchard was removed from his post as Chairman of the recently formed Quebec Hydro Electric Power Commission, following his maiden speech in the Senate, shows how keenly the politicians felt the impact of the address on Quebec public opinion would be.

Politicians are only interested in power; they are interested in votes. Anything that would lose votes must be avoided at all costs. The Party in power figured that the Bouchard speech would cost them a lot of votes, so Premier Godbout of Quebec, made a hurried trip to Ottawa and, as a result of this trip, Mr. Bouchard was fired.

The situation for the King Government becomes more critical every day. The Liberals were always sure of being returned to power if they could hold Quebec and Saskatchewan. They, therefore, had to do nothing to alienate the vote in those two provinces. Indeed, they had to do more than nothing, they had to do a lot for the people in those provinces in order to hold them. But now Saskatchewan, after having had a Liberal Government for all but five years since the Province was formed in 1905 has left the fold. If Saskatchewan votes in a Federal election as it did in the Provincial election, the master strategy of the Liberal Party will be shot to pieces. The Liberals fear that. It becomes increasingly necessary for them to hold Quebec—a solid Quebec. So when Senator Bouchard dropped his bomb in the Senate, its noise reverberated on Parliament Hill. So Premier Godbout disassociated himself with Mr. Bouchard's remarks and charges, and ordered that the Chairman of the Hydro Electric Commission be relieved of his post.

This quick action on the part of the Liberal Government in Quebec will enable the strategists in Premier King's Party machine to breathe easier for a while. They hope that the public will be mollified and that their action will make it clear that they are not going to do anything that would antagonize their political anchor.

Of course there is always the possibility that this sort of action and others like them, will back fire. Just before the Saskatchewan election, vast moneys owing to the farmers for some time were paid, and certain restrictions on farming operations removed. But the vote was not influenced thereby. Sometimes people think for themselves, in spite of efforts on the part of politicians to ingratiate themselves into their favour. If that should, by any chance, happen in Quebec—that is, if the people should begin to think and act for themselves, the solid Quebec vote which has been the bulwark of the Mackenzie King Government would, in all probability be badly shaken — much, however to the advantage of the political health of Canada.

V

A FRUITFUL MINISTRY

With the close of this month, Rev. A. C. McCallum leaves the community. Coming from the West a few years ago, Mr. McCallum was a total stranger to this town and community. In the time that he has been in our midst, Mr. McCallum has won his way into the confidence and affection of the people of this whole area. He is a man of kindly manner, with a scholarly approach to life. He is a preacher acceptable to all classes, and a gracious, sympathetic pastor. In the larger church life of the town and county Mr. McCallum has taken his part well and effectively. On boards, church and public committees, he has served faithfully and well.

He leaves Napanee with the best wishes, not only of his own pastoral charge, but of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances who have come to appreciate his qualities more with each passing year.

V

OUR SOUTHERN NEIGHBOUR

Probably before this is read the Republican Party in the United States will have made its choice of a candidate to contest the Presidential election. We find it somewhat perplexing, at times, to keep up with political conditions across the border. But our perplexity is usually over the preliminaries; when the test comes and voting day arrives most Canadians know a bit about the candidates who are in the field. The Republicans will probably choose as their candidate Governor Dewey of New York. At least that is the general opinion on this side of the border. Up until the present time he has not said that he would stand for election. He probably concludes that he would be in a stronger position before the electorate if he should be drafted by the convention. Some commentators are just mean enough to say that he already has the acceptance speech all prepared.

At the 1940 convention, Wendell Willkie secured the nomination. His selection was generally interpreted as a victory of the ordinary voter over the powerful Republican machine. Willkie made a good run, but he also made a lot of enemies in his own party. This party which is reputedly representative of the big financial interests, did not take kindly to Mr. Willkie's frank approach to modern problems. So the choice, this time, will fall on somebody else. Probably Willkie was too much like President Roosevelt in ideas, to suit the powers in his own party. At any rate he declines to let his name stand.

Governor Dewey has made a good Governor of New York State. But what his plans are, if nominated, nobody knows. He has been careful not to say anything that could be used against himself. He has given no indication as to his foreign policy. All of this may come out in the acceptance speech. Politics are a rather complicated business and it is always possible for a man aspiring to office to injure his election chances by saying too much, too soon. An honest man of convictions can not say something contrary to his own mind on the matter, so, lest he may say something that might cause a difference of opinion among convention members, he can scarcely be blamed if he its tight until the nomination is in the bag.

"DON'T DEAL WITH STOOGES AGAIN"

BY SIMON HARCOURT-SMITH
In The Daily Mail
Transatlantic Edition

At the end of last year, it has been reported from Ankara, certain peace offers from Germany were dispatched to the British Government through a neutral channel.

It has also been rumored that the Cabinet examined the terms for more than two days before turning them down.

What truth there is in the story goes far beyond pre powers to judge. Certainly we would never fall for so crude an attempt to create discord among the United Nations.

At the same time, there is nothing wildly extravagant about the terms as described in the Ankara message.

"The eventual evacuation of all occupied territory, including Czecho-Slovakia; the disbandment of the German Navy, the Luftwaffe, and the virtual committing of the Reich's foreign relations into British hands."

Not a word about the fate of the Army or the Nazi Party. And here, in most people's opinion was the real inadequacy of the offer, even if remotely genuine.

For were not Prime Minister Churchill and Mr. Eden publicly committed, were not most British people resolved only to sheathe the sword when Hitler has been overturned?

CURSE OF FRANCE

In all the circumstances a very understandable sentiment. And yet, when I hear it uttered, when there is talk of "unconditional surrender", I cannot keep my mind from flying back to an extraordinary inkpot I once saw.

It was decorated with an ormolu bust of Louis XVIII, King of France by God's grace and Wellington's enemius. But the bust was no more than a shell. You pressed a button, the shell opened, and inside was another bust, the bust of Napoleon — the god whom officially Royalist France still secretly worshipped.

For me this inkpot symbolized the ghost of that unfortunate militarism which was the curse of French politics during most of the last century.

Now in Germany there still rules a figure no less legendary than Napoleon.

At this moment the inhabitants of the shattered German cities may well doubt whether she is quite such a blessing to Germany as Goering would have them believe. But how will they regard the legend of him in twenty years' time?

When Napoleon dashed back from the Russian winter to the Paris of 1812 a listless indifference greeted him. Frenchmen were tired of watering the four corners of Europe with their blood.

But the martyrydom of St. Helena, the brutalities of Hudson Lowe soon set all France dreaming of the Corsican fondly recalling the glories of Austerlitz and of Jena.

"If we are not careful, the German people of a generation hence will be sentimentalizing yet more passionately over the triumphs of just on four years ago."

I am aware that the Nazi Party is the enemy of peace. In the good days it organized the German people for war with such a perfection as drew forth the grudging praise of the German General Staff.

In these days, too, defeat almost inevitably brings a change of political regime. But Hitler has made the war; Hitler, or his creatures if he is not still alive at the end, must, I submit, be made to bear the peace.

Let us take a lesson from last time. At the Conference of Paris in 1919 the Allies slipped by almost imperceptible stages into the position of dictating the Versailles Treaty — an instrument mild enough by Hitlerian standards, I suppose, but a humiliation for all that.

And when that June morning old Clemenceau, in his harsh voice commanded, "Faites entrer les Allemands," there glided in not a Hindenburg or a Ludendorff. Oh no! Those gentry were gone to ground as simple Prussian squires. Two miserable civilians, Herr Muller and Herr Bell, one of them a second violinist in a Brunswick orchestra, signed the Treaty for a new German Republic.

They shouldered the consequences of militarism, and by their action they doomed the democratic regime in Germany from its very birth.

Just because of those two signatures, democracy in the minds of most Germans became associated with national humiliation. We saw to it that the Weimar Republic started life with a load on its back such as no policy could safely bear.

"Don't let us make the same mistake again. If we are to fight until the Nazi regime disintegrates, let us, then, take one of two clear courses."

Either let us negotiate a lenient peace with a Democratic Germany, or let us impose a Carthaginian peace upon the Nazis—and nobody else.

We do not, I fancy, take Germany psychology enough into our consideration.

I am not one of those who believe that the Germans have been a race of unredeemed fiends ever since the days of Tacitus. But I do know that we will know no peace until a Liberal German Party thrives again.

We are inclined to think of Germans as the unwilling victims of a monstrous tyranny. Such a view completely disgards the lessons of modern German history.

Worship Success

There have been great German Liberals, but all too rarely have they maintained their convictions with firmness.

When Hitler seized power in 1933, the majority of Germans dislked him. As late as June 1939 you heard whispered criticism of him anywhere you liked to look for it in the Reich.

By the autumn of 1940 even those who had stood out most staunchly against him were converted. He was Germany's god—and they among his happiest worshippers.

The truth is, the Germans worship success with a passion fiercer than the English passion for the Law.

"We will never break Hitler's spell if we allow some other German to bear the odium of defeat."

For that reason I believe, that far from saying we will never make peace with the Nazi regime, we ought to insist upon that regime, and no other, receiving our terms.

When the fateful moment of Germany's collapse at last arrives Hitler and his cronies may well make their get-away.

Let there be no hysteria about hanging this time, nor should we leave them to fell trees in the Holland of their choice.

"Instead, they should be brought back to their dilapidated Wilhelmstrasse and made responsible for the humiliations of their own creation"

That, I believe is the only way to scotch any legend.

Let Hitler become for the Germans not a symbol of triumph, followed by august martyrdom — rather let their last impression of him be one of absurd and slightly shabby failure.

— NORMANDY — IS PATHWAY

Normandy jutting out along the English Channel opposite British invasion bases forms a natural peninsula pathway into France, and from the first Allied commanders have recognized it as one of their best bets for beachheads.

The gun-bristling coastline, rock shoals and in some places bad tide make initial landings hazardous, but once a foothold is established the Allies can attack along either side of the peninsula, protected on the flank by the sea.

The Cherbourg peninsula — old Normandy — thrusts out to the Cape de la Hague and Cape de Barfleur 88 miles from the Isle of Wight.

The peninsula is 70 miles long and ranges from 25 to 60 miles wide, with the port of Cherbourg at the tip as a keypoint of coastal defence. Cherbourg is 75 miles from Bournemouth, England.

From German accounts, the Allied objective appeared to be establishment of a broad beachhead along the curving coast between Le Havre and Cherbourg.

Penetrations inland would clear all of Normandy with its good air field sites, and provide a pathway down the Seine valley to Paris.

Le Havre, 109 air line miles northwest of Paris on the Seine river estuary, is France's second seaport and has 14 ship basins and eight miles of docks.

One of France's main transatlantic terminals for peacetime trade, the city itself lies mostly on a level strip of ground except on the north where a great bluff overlooks the entrance to the Seine estuary. Before the war it was France's 11th city in population with about 163,000 persons.

Until 1516 it was only a fishing village. Its name Havre (harbor) de Grace was given it by King Francis I. It has been bombarded before. The English bombarded it in 1563, 1759, 1794 and 1795, and in this war it has been attacked by Allied planes because of its importance as a Nazi submarine base.

NAZIS DRAW "LAST BATTLE" LINE

BY J. V. GUERTER

The Nazis fear that civil war is inevitable once the Home Front cracks under the weight of the Allied air attack and invasion. They believe that the final struggle will be between the SS. Army and the people. Here Mr. Guerter, who knows Germany intimately from the inside, discloses how they are preparing.

* * *

In the Ogdensburg, Sonnhofen is a small town whose streets are torn by explosive and fire. Not the explosives of Allied bombers, but the explosives of German SS. troops have blackened these brick walls which were, in fact built for no other purpose.

For this sham town was constructed for the sole purpose of training the SS. in street fighting. Grenades, flame-throwers and even poison and tear gases have been used by SS. troops for whom this course is now compulsory. As a most critical period in the fighting on the Russian front SS. officers were brought back to Sonnhofen to act as instructors.

The construction of this mock town and the training given there in street fighting are typical of the thoroughness with which the Nazis are preparing for the civil war which they believe must surge over Germany.

The Nazi leaders have always contended that Germany, in 1918, was defeated by civil strife and not by defeat in the field, that but for the outbreaks of rebellion at home, far more favourable armistice and peace terms could have been obtained. From the first they have set out to ensure that if there were to be armed conflict behind the lines in the new war, there would only be one possible victor—the Nazis.

Their instrument has been the SS. and it is significant that at this moment, when every man is vital, large units of special SS. are being concentrated in Germany. All through the war Hitler has been reluctant to comply with the demands of his generals and send the SS. units to the front.

The last year has forced him to give way, and SS. regiments have fought on the Russian front with publicity out of all proportion to their numbers. But the Nazi leaders have been careful to keep back crack regiments like the SS. Totenkopf Verband (the notorious Skull and Crossbones units) SS. Verfuegungs Truppen (special disposal units) and SS.K. units (the K on their collars stands for Konzentrations-Lager — concentration camp guards) and the so-called SS. Security Police squads (SS. Sicherheits Polizei). These last men have given the task of special "security service" after raids.

The SS. units form an independent army of at least 400,000 picked men whose sole purpose is preventing outbreaks and quelling them. But they are not a mere police force as we understand police. They have their own flieger regiment, aviation units with bombers and fighters, artillery, engineers, signal corps, medical and ambulance units, and include several powerful armoured units.

They are highly privileged and by far the best equipped German troops. The fare, for instance, is much better than, for instance, contrasts with the comparatively poor quality of the uniform cloth of the Regular Army. Their pay is twice that of the Regulars. The lowest rank is equivalent to lance-corporal in the Regular Army, and promotion is much quicker.

The Nazis have aimed at a well chosen, well - equipped force which would be able to overawe a much larger one and, if necessary, overpower it.

The SS. has not suffered from the effects of prolonged fighting in the East and, comparatively, is fresh. It is particularly strong in technical troops who, by taking over public services, would avoid a "big stick". There are specially trained squads of SS. Technische Nothilfe (S.S. Technical Emergency Corps) who know every gas, electricity and water works in Germany.

It is now compulsory for every such works to have a SS. technician standing by 24 hours a day. At a signal the corps could take over in a matter of minutes.

The S.S. has its own food stores and, equally important provides the guards for the stores of the German Food Ministry. At a signal they destroy the stores and thus make it impossible for a revolutionary directorate to distribute food.

On the other hand, in districts under their control, they would be able to distribute food, making "loyalty" the test.

They have their own fortresses and defences in all large German cities. These consist of the so-called "street centinels," fortified houses and light flak towers.

It is significant that the strassen sonder posten — the sentinels—which are virtual pillboxes, are specially numerous in the working-class districts of the cities. Many have been destroyed by Allied raids but they have been on the priority list for repair.

The fortified houses are mostly at street corners, with reinforced cellars, sometimes with passages communicating underground with other houses, concrete walls and machine-gun posts on the roof or upper storeys.

Information before the last heavy raids was that there were at least 200 such positions in Hamburg, Munich, Stuttgart, Cologne, Leipzig — anywhere the spark of revolt might be kindled.

The raids must have played havoc with the plans for defending the residences of Berlin Gauleiter Goebbels Himmler, Police President Helldorf and other Nazi and S.S. leaders.

But those damaged have probably been replaced by others equally cunningly placed, each with its own radio transmitter for keeping in touch with the various S.S. headquarters.

The S.S. believe that a handful of men in these places could hold out long enough for the main body of S.S. troops to do their work.

The plans are that the Nazis and S.S. are prepared to go to any lengths in their civil war. So far no poison gas has been used in the war. It would be ironical if its first appearance were as a weapon for Germans in the streets of Germany. The S. S. has special chemical warfare units, and the S.S. Flieger several squadrons of Stukas, suggesting that the Nazis will not hesitate to do to their own people what they did to Warsaw, Rotterdam and other cities.

Whom do the Nazis and the S.S. expect to fight. Originally, undoubtedly, anti-Nazi elements among the populations, possibly some of the foreign workers. The workers are unarmed, but there are some 12,000,000 of them—a formidable force.

There have been none of the elaborate preparations described in Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland or even in some of the West German areas. It was obviously not against an invading force that the S.S. was expected to fight, but rather against innumerable small units in the big towns.

Recently, however, the indications have been that it may be the Regular German Army that the S.S. may have to fight. The Regulars returning from the fronts have been the only people in Germany who have aroused the contempt of the S.S. and Gestapo. The Red Ribbon of the man who has served on the Russian front has become an ominous badge of their "frontschwein" (literally "front-pig") and they have openly shown their contempt for any discipline but the strictly military.

This may not have been the civil war the Nazis foresaw. Subduing 60,000,000 German civilians and even 12,000,000 foreign workers is one thing. Trying to stop some millions of armed soldiers who believed the time had come for peace would be quite another.

But even for this purpose, 400,000 comparatively fresh, well-armed fanatics might be sufficient. It would certainly be a bloody clash.

There are no signs of civil war in Germany yet. But elaborate preparations have been made to prevent it, and if it comes to ensure that the Nazis remain in control long enough at least to negotiate a peace that would "save Germany."

The Germans have made fatal blunders in their war against the rest of the world. They have probably made equally big mistakes in their preparations for war among themselves.

The "Farmer Dennings" Have Their Innings

BY RICHARD L. TOBIN

Air losses inflicted by improved British air defence against 75 German Luftwaffe attackers recently were not only a near record percentage of the total attacking force, but also the second highest German air loss over southern England since the blitz.

The most important factor in recent German air raids over England has been the enormously improved anti-aircraft barrage. It is simply amazing, with guns of every calibre, enormous lights, flares, star-shells and droning planes, exploding Hollywood in sight and sound.

Farmer Harry Denning, whose home is in the South England bomb area, heard a knock at his door between two and three a.m. When he answered it he saw a German airman standing outside. The German said nothing, but just held up his hands. The farmer let him in. The Nazi could not speak English and the farmer could not speak German. There was another Nazi airman out on the front lawn, still attached to his parachute. He did not show any resistance either, and he too was brought into the farm house. Both men had knives and revolvers which they immediately handed over.

So Farmer Denning phoned for the police in his quiet British way, and while the three men waited, the Nazi airmen took out cigarettes and started smoking. One of them kept muttering something about the Germans, but just what was said went undiscovered, both were young and apparently too happy to be safe and out of the war.

Farmer Denning's story was repeated many times over throughout the South of England in the dark hours of the morning. Most of the farmers reported Nazi airmen down, said that the Nais seemed dazed and exhausted. They all seemed surprised at being treated so kindly, and they were all very young, none of them older than twenty.

Another German airman was captured by two colored American soldiers, who put him in their jeep and made off with him to a polite station. Another was captured by the Home Guard. "Captured" is too strong a word, since in no case did any German airman offer resistance. Still another Nazi was captured by an Italian prisoner who works on a farm. All the Nazis followed a pattern of being utterly sick of the war and glad to be rid of it.

Two of the German bombers shot down fell to Czechoslovakian flyers who have flown together in the same Beaufighter squadron for three years. Altogether it was a busy night over southern England, and a very bad night, for the very stout Nazi with all the medals and uniforms.

JAPS WORKING ON SYNTHETIC RUBBER

The Japanese, of all people, now claim to be developing a synthetic rubber industry — despite the fact that they have conquered 90 per cent of the world's resources of natural rubber in Malay, The Netherlands East Indies and other parts of Southeast Asia. A Nipponese broadcast, last week, stated that the manufacture of rubber on a large scale by five plants in Japan. "This product excels natural rubber" the Japan home radio claimed. "It is manufactured in accordance with a simple process than those used by other nations. Already mass production is under way."

This strange development can be interpreted in two ways. First, a reduction of the Japanese merchant fleet through Allied submarine attacks to one - third of pre-war tonnage makes transport of raw rubber by the so-called Southern region increasingly difficult. And secondly, in anticipation of the loss of Malaya and the Indies, Japan is preparing to fight on in its own territory, the home islands, Korea, Manchuria and northern China. This would necessitate the use of substitutes for rubber and other tropical products.

That there is a certain amount of plus of natural rubber in the Japanese-held Southern region, however, is evident from a recent Tokio broadcast in which it was announced that rubber was being used in the manufacture of tires for the imperial army. Also, it is known that synthetic gasoline is being produced from coal, and that Japanese scientists are making talks divulging the secret of producing synthetic rubber from petroleum. Petroleum is known to be plentiful in Japan and Manchuria, and it is also known to be plentiful in Japan and Manchuria, and it is also known to be plentiful in Japan and Manchuria, and it is also

THE GREEN LIGHT

The Green Light shines ahead,
But on the way — a Red;
To stop, and think, and ponder slow
The road to right, or wrong we go.

We need the Red on life's highway,
To do our deeds from day to day;
A helping hand, a kind remark
May keep a creature from the dark.

And by this act, and slowed up pace,
We are in the checkup for the race;
The Green Light shines — we see our goal,
And God is the keeper of our soul.

A Scot called at a cat's-meat shop one morning, gave his address and asked that a pennyworth be left there in the afternoon.

Some time later the vendor was surprised when the man rushed in and told him to cancel the order. "What's the matter?" inquired the butcher. "Is your cat dead?"

"No, no, no," puffed the man, he's caught a mouse."

MacTavish was very shy. When he went to his first dinner party he made frantic efforts to begin a conversation with the lady at his elbow.

"Does your brother like cheese?"

She turned with a smile and replied, "I haven't a brother."

Then he said: "If you had a brother, do you think he'd—he'd like cheese?"

WEDDING BELLS

AMEY—STEWART

St. Luke's Anglican Church, Kingston, was the scene of a lovely summer wedding at 4.00 p.m. on Saturday, June 24, when the Rev. Rural Dean S. E. Harrington united in marriage Mary Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Stewart, Kingston, and John Ivan Amey, Kingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Amey, Odessa. Mrs. Maley played the wedding music and during the signing of the register, Mrs. T. Lushby sang delightfully, "Because."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was a lovely figure in her wedding gown, a floor length model of white chiffon, fashioned with a full skirt with satin appliqued flowers on the fitted bodice and the front of the skirt. The bodice, buttoned to the waist, had a small satin collar and long sleeves coming to points at the wrists. She wore a finger-tip veil, which fell from a fitted cap trimmed with gardenias, and her flowers were a cascade of roses.

The bride was attended by Miss Edythe Carter, of Bowmanville, as bridesmaid, wearing an effective floor length frock of pale blue, with a full net skirt and a brocaded satin bodice with a sweetheart neckline and short puffed sleeves. She wore a matching blue ribbon half hat with veiling and carried a colonial bouquet of roses and summer flowers.

Mr. Gerald Marchen was best man and Mr. Glen Stewart, brother of the bride, was usher.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in St. Luke's Parish Hall, where Mrs. Stewart, the bride's mother, received, wearing a smart blue printed silk suit with white accessories and a corsage of Ophelia roses. Mrs. Amey, the groom's mother, who also received, wore an effective two-piece gown of navy blue with white accessories and a corsage of Bettertime roses.

Later the bride and groom left for Toronto and points west, the bride wearing a smart blue wool suit with white accessories and a corsage of sweet peas.

A NEW DISEASE

There is a disease, not uncommon among sportsmen, known as "Buck Fever," which strikes suddenly and violently, but seldom fatally. It leaves very little in the way of ill-effects and the victim soon recovers, although he occasionally is reminded of the illness by sharp barbs which get under his skin.

But a new disease has been reported by a Napanee sportsman, as having struck an experienced hunter, who is employed with a lumber company on Smith Lake. Ernest Rendell is said to be the victim of "Bear Fever" but at the time of writing he is almost completely recovered and no serious results are expected to result from the attack.

It seems that the cookhouse and storeroom at the lumber camp was being frequently raided by an unknown marauder, who was suspected or being a bear. Rendell offered to lay in wait for Mr. Bear and promised to get him. So he went to the cookhouse and started his vigil, leaving the door open. Time passed and nothing happened until the watcher heard a noise overhead and on looking up, saw a large bear about to make an entry through the ventilator in the roof. It was then that the "Bear Fever" showed its first symptoms and manifested itself in a twitching of the trigger finger and the discharge of a shell in the floor. Mr. Bear made a hasty retreat. The victim of the fever recovered about as quickly and rushed out of the door, where he was able to get Mr. Bear, a large specimen, with the next shot.

Napanee and Deseronto game on Friday night, postponed on account of rain.

The fans are reminded to watch for the posters for playing places and dates, as there will be changes made in some cases.

The Mohawk Blues are rumored to be playing their home games at Deseronto.

The games are improving considerably in so far as playing is concerned.

On Wednesday last at Deseronto, the Redi-Heats had all they could do to ease a 9-8 win from the lowly "Blues".

The game was full of surprises. You could never tell what would happen next. Heavy hitting, coupled with fragile error on both sides kept the fans on the edge of their seats nearly all night. The hay had been harvested on the field and the fielders sure had a busy night chasing the long flies that came out nearly every frame. The pitching was not as smart as in previous games and as a result plenty of base-on-balls were tabulated . . . and in some cases smart fielding kept the score from being much larger than it was.

On Monday, Gibbards were in Deseronto . . . the guests of the Blues.

The score was 24 to 4 or thereabouts.

Fourteen runs in one frame apparently was the downfall.

During the playing season, last year, very little bunting was done.

This year it's different. . . Almost every other player tries his hand. . . As a result plenty of rules have had to be thrashed out — and some of the 'umps are getting a panning for their efforts.

In some cases instances that rarely occur in a ball game have cropped up and "rye olde bookе" gets thumbed plenty. However, no serious damage has resulted and after all someone has to be wrong.

We have had enquiries in regard to the 1944 official rule books.

There were none printed this year and those interested will have to use their 1943 issue. — There were no changes made for this season.

Games This Week:

Wednesday, June 28th — Redi-Heats at Mohawk Reds.

Thursday June 29th — Mohawk Blues at Mohawk Reds.

Friday, June 30th — Napanee at Hunter's Cleaners.

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. A. MAGEE

Ida Teresa Love, eldest daughter of the late George Love and Gertrude Minaker, was born near Milford in Prince Edward County, on September 11, 1870. On July 5th, 1892, she married Andrew Magee and moved to Adolphustown, where she resided until her death, on Wednesday, June 14. Mrs. Magee has been in failing health for several years. A few weeks ago she went to visit her daughter, Mrs. Ercell Foster and her family and while there she became seriously ill and despite loving care and medical attention, failed to recover. Until failing health prevented, she was a willing and cheerful worker in the women's organizations of the Methodist, and later United Church.

In Loving Memory

CLOSE — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Mr. Stewart Close, who passed away July 3, 1943.

No one knows how much we miss you,
No one knows the bitter pain;
We have suffered since we lost you,
Home has never been the same.
In our hearts your memory lingers
Sweetly tender, fond and true —
There is not a day, dear husband,
That we do not think of you.
But we'll join you some day yonder
Where the toils of life are 'er,
For we know you'll greet our coming
On that bright and golden shore.

Lovingly remembered by
WIFE and FAMILY.

H. M. ROBINSON REMEMBERED BY FRIENDS ON HIS BIRTHDAY

On Thursday, June 22nd, a number of friends and relatives called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Robinson, Sandhurst, to offer birthday wishes to Mr. Robinson, on his 94th birthday. Mr. Robinson is in fair health and still takes a very keen interest in his farm. He received many messages of congratulations from his out-of-town friends. Among them were greetings from his brother, Mr. Ceylon Robinson, of Detroit, who is in his 84th year.

A little girl was taken by her father to an old-fashioned church for the first time. She stared for a while at the old Highland minister shut up in a box pulpit, thumping the Bible and waving his arms about.

Then, unable to stand it any longer, she whispered in a frightened voice: "Father, what'll we dae if he gets oot?"

Cards of Thanks

The family of the late Mrs. Hugh Haggerty wish to extend their thanks to their friends for their kind expressions of sympathy at the time of the death of their mother. 26ap

TAMWORTH

FAREWELL TO REV. AND MRS. A. W. SEATON

Tamworth, June 26. — The congregation of the United Church, Tamworth met in the Religious Educational Building on Wednesday evening to bid farewell to Rev. A. W. and Mrs. Seaton, who are leaving this week to take charge of Gracc United Church, Sydenham.

After all enjoyed community singing for a time, a short program was rendered, and consisted of: Solo by Mrs. Clarence Lochead; duet by Jillian Sedore and Joyce Amey; recitation by Valoria Allison; duet by Mrs. Frank Carscallen and Mrs. Ronald Glenn.

Mr. and Mrs. Seaton were then called to the platform, and Mr. Oliver Clark, Chairman of the Board, read an address of appreciation of the splendid work done by Mr. and Mrs. Seaton, and Mrs. J. E. Huffman, President of the Woman's Association, presented them with a purse of money.

Mr. and Mrs. Seaton thanked the congregation for their thoughtfulness and kindness.

Hymn, "Blest be the Tie that Binds", was sung, and prayer offered by Mr. Seaton closed the meeting.

Lunch was served by the ladies.

MISS MILDRED RICHMOND HONORED

On Friday evening a miscellaneous shower was given by Mrs. Ronald Glenn, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Huffman, in honor of Miss Mildred Richmond.

The dining-room table was attractively decorated with colorful pendent pink and white streamers.

The evening was spent in games and songs, followed by delicious refreshments served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. E. Harlton and Miss Norie Aylsworth.

At the close of the evening Master Teddy Glenn wheeled in a basket decorated in pink and white, and filled with beautiful gifts for the bride-to-be. After opening the parcels, Miss Richmond thanked her friends both for the gifts and the pleasant evening, after which all joined in singing, "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow".

W. A. JUNE MEETING

The June meeting of the Woman's Association of the United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Melborne Kirkpatrick, with 23 members and visitors present.

Mrs. A. W. Seaton had charge of the devotional part of the meeting, and gave a talk on "Mary", continuing the series of talks on "Women of the Bible".

The President, Mrs. J. E. Huffman, thanked Mrs. Seaton for the many wonderful talks she had given at the W. A. meetings for the past two years during their pastorate here.

Minutes of the last meeting were read, and the roll called.

The President said the Church Board was in need of funds. It was moved by Mrs. T. Milligan, seconded by Mrs. H. Millar, that the sum of $100.00 be given to the Board.

Mrs. Thomas Milligan gave a report of the morning session of the convention that had been held in Napanee, and Mrs. W. G. Richmond gave the report of the afternoon session. Mrs. Huffman thanked the two ladies for the splendid reports given.

The meeting closed by all repeating the Mizpah benediction.

Lunch was served by the hostess and her committee.

CONFIRMATION SERVICE

A large congregation attended the confirmation service at Christ Church on Sunday afternoon. Six candidates were confirmed. They were Mrs. Walter Howes, Mrs. Alex. Kennedy, Mrs. Robert Williams, Mrs. Gordon Kennedy, Mrs. Rex. Woolgar, and Miss Ellen Edge.

Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario, was present and conducted the service, and was assisted by Rev. F. O. Ware of this parish.

PERSONALS.

Mr. James Melville Good, of Parham, and Miss Doris Marion Graham, of Enterprise, were married on Saturday at the rectory here. Mr. Donald Good, of Parham, and Miss Ruth Graham, of Enterprise, were their attendants. Rev. F. O. Ware performed the wedding ceremony.

Sgt. Wm. York, of Marlbank, and Miss Clarie Young Norrad, of Peterborough, were married on Saturday afternoon in the United Church here. Rev. A. W. Seaton officiated. Sgt. York is now stationed at Camp Borden, where he is taking a course.

Rev. A. W. Seaton preached his farewell sermon at the three appointments, Tamworth, Reidville and Marlbank, on Sunday, and will be leaving on Wednesday for Sydenham.

Miss Margaret Marlin, of Napanee, spent the part of last week at the home of her brother, Mr. Nelson Marlin, and Mrs. Marlin.

Mr. George Spratt has accepted the office of Chief-of-Police in Tweed, and expects to move there with his family some time this week. Mr. Spratt has been constable here for the past three years. To date, no one has been appointed to fill his place in the village.

Pte. Thomas Watters has returned home, after having been in England for the past three years. He was with the Stormont Glengarry Highlanders, and arrived at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Watters, on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Richmond received word that their son, Orval Richmond, is a patient in the General Hospital, Guelph, having undergone an operation. Mr. Richmond is doing as well as can be expected.

The heavy rains are making it hard for the farmers to harvest the hay; but what is best for the hay crop is good for the gardens. There are a number of gardens in this village that are exceptionally good, and show thrift and good management on the part of the owners. There are a few unsightly plots of land, however, where the rains have caused a bumper crop of weeds to grow. Speaking about Victory Gardens, there is still room for some additions to improve the surroundings by growing something else besides weeds.

MADE IN CANADA

"Doctor," said the patient, "I'm afraid my wife is getting crazy."

"What seems wrong?" asked the doctor.

"She wants to buy a goat."

"Let her buy a goat."

"But she wants to keep it in the house."

"Well, let her keep it in the house."

"But a goat stinks."

"Open the window."

"What! And let all my pipes out!"

The best measure of tire value is still the maker's name!

In the happy days when you bought tires without restriction, you had one infallible measure of true tire worth . . . the maker's name. If you were like the majority of motorists, that name was Goodyear.

Today, a few unthinking folks say "Synthetic rubber will make all tires the same." That is far from the truth! To believe it is to ignore the fact that in prewar days, tires varied greatly in quality . . . yet all makers used the same kind of rubber.

You'll understand why this happened when you remember that TIRES ARE NOT "MADE OF RUBBER." There's rubber in them, of course, but equally important in their construction are cotton, steel, carbon black and a dozen or more chemical compounds. Each one of these "ingredients" must be of top quality, and used in the right proportions, to produce a tire of high performance. Rubber by itself (either synthetic or natural) will not make a satisfactory tire.

Prewar tires varied in quality, too, according to the amount of knowledge, skill and experience possessed by the maker. The advent of synthetic rubber does not alter that fact. Actually, the successful use of synthetic rubber demands the full use of ALL PREVIOUS TIRE-BUILDING ABILITY . . . AND MORE.

Therefore, when your turn comes to buy a new tire, remember that while rubber, to some degree, may be "standardized," quality is not. Now, as always, "More people ride on Goodyear tires than on any other kind"—because motorists know that the best measure of tire value . . . is still the maker's name.

Goodyear's research in natural and synthetic rubbers, begun 17 years ago, resulted in the first practical all-synthetic tire. Today, Goodyear's continuing research program is carried on according to the most modern of all rubber research laboratories.
Over 200 employees of Goodyear Canada, have served 25 years or more with the company. Here alone is represented better than 5,000 years of experience, one of several priceless, yet unseen, ingredients in every Goodyear tire.
This is a Goodyear ALL-WEATHER Synthetic Rubber Tire!
Goodyear dealers have it . . . for eligible drivers only. It is the result of Goodyear's forty years' experience in tire-building plus Goodyear's specialized knowledge of synthetic rubber . . . gained through unceasing research and testing.

Just how much canning sugar do we to get? There seems to be a great deal of controversy over the exact amount.

Everyone in Canada is to have 20 lbs. of canning sugar. D coupons may be turned in at the rate of 5 half-pound of sugar per coupon if more is required.

• • •

What amount of honey can be purchased with one D coupon.

One D coupon is worth 24 fluid ounces (2 lbs.) of honey.

• • •

Has there been a reduction in the price of some cuts of beef?

• • •

The other day the ice man delivered my ice and left it on my doorstep. Is there not a law against this kind of thing?

Due to the shortage of help in some towns, ice companies are forced to confine their deliveries to the door-step instead of the ice box. It is a problem now prevalent in Canada and your help and co-operation at this time will enable the ice companies to continue their home-to-house deliveries.

• • •

Are there restrictions regarding the resale of used goods?

Yes. The WPTB announces in a new order that people who have since 1941 begun to rent used articles such as household furniture, cameras or bicycles must have their rent charges approved by the Board.

Q. My daughter sent me some butter coupons she didn't need. May I use them?

A. No, it is against the law for dealers to accept loose coupons. It is also against the law for dealers to accept coupons that are not yet valid or ones that have expired.

Q. I want to use my D coupons for sugar. Must I exchange them for F coupons?

Three Orders-in-Council tabled in the House, to be effective June 1st, are significant of the trend towards a maximum of better security for members of the Armed Forces in the early discharge period. Briefly, increases for allowance under the post-discharge re-establishment order for those who would like to take a course in vocational training, or continue their education will be: for single men from $44.20 a month to $60, and for married men to $80 from $62.40. There will be increases for those waiting returns from small business or farms, and this includes men who are fit and for whom suitable jobs cannot be located, or for men temporarily incapacitated. Widows of pensioned vets of the First Great War can get pension or allowance if married before May 1, 1944; a disability pensioner may receive allowance for wife and children is marriage took place and children were born before the same date and there is provision for increase to $30 from $15 in pension for a dependent parent.

The Canadian Navy, Army and Air Force with the Department of Pensions and Public Health are pooling their surgical resources to set up regional treatment centres in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver in special fields of plastic surgery, neuro-surgery and orthopedic surgery, to which cases from overseas will be sent. The men are to be brought whenever possible to centres nearest their homes.

An idea which might do much towards developing closer unity and certainly more understanding between English and French speaking Canadaians was proposed in the Senate by Senator A David of Sorel, Quebec. He would have prepared with all provincial governments consenting and advisable as to content, a text-book on Canadian history which would stress equally the history of all sections of Canada, and emphasize the development of the nation as a whole. Sounds meaty and a step in the right direction.

The poultry business in Canada is a big one, and affects a lot of people. Poultrymen know there is a large quantity of dressed poultry in storage today, but they will be glad to hear from the Department of Agriculture that 1944 exports to date total nearly five million pounds; that private firms will soon export 1,300,000 lbs. of Grade C fowl, chicken, turkey, ducks and geese of all grades except "D" to private buyers in the U.S.A. The Special Produce Board is exporting 345,000 pounds of dressed poultry to the United States from British Columbia alone. In addition two million of dressed chicken, fowl and turkey are going to the British Ministry of Food. But the warning is that its getting more difficult to find a market for birds that are under finished, improperly killed and unattractively packed. It's advisable to spread marketings by more systematic culling of farmers' flocks.

Finance Minister Ilsley has announced reduction from 5 to 4½ per cent in the interest rate on new loans under the National Housing Act. to assist prospective home owners building new dwellings. Legislation to be introduced will also provide financing up to the value of $5 000 instead of $4 000, with the time limit for repayment extended from 20 years to 25 or 30 years. This all envisions, for a lot of people in the hiways and biways of Canada, something for postwar consideration.

Pressure is on to get a full view picture of the acute manpower shortage, focusing the need for 175,000 workers in essential industries and war plants. A three-way program has been launched with plants making and filling shells heading the priority list; farming, metal, mines, packing plants are also in the top brackets. For instance, it is known that our railways need 7,000 track workers, and transport in wartime is an essentiality. There will be personal interviews with men rejected as medically unfit for military service; survey of plants to combat manpower hoarding; extension of compulsory transfer orders to industries now affected. About a million men were examined for military service, half of whom were found unfit; these now will be depended on to fill some of the jobs.

The recent conference of the National Council for Physical Fitness held in Ottawa made a number of significant recommendations for a well rounded programme which will tackle a very important job, the future fitness of Canadians. Dr. W. C. Ross of Halifax, director for Nova Scotia, hit the nail square on the head with this observation: "Juvenile delinquency can be combatted by the three-fold program of a virile belief in God, an energetic school programme and after-school activity so engrossing and interesting young people will have no chance to go astray.

Special — Farmers are urged to check binders carefully and to order needed repairs in time to have them installed before harvest. The binder knife should be replaced if worn down because, while the 1944 twine will be the best that can be manufactured in wartime, still it will contain 12½ per cent. jute in the fibre.

Announced in the House of Commons: Old Age pensioners may now receive an outside income of $125 instead of former $65 limit. With maximum staying at $300 a year a pensioner can now receive up to $425 annually.

Religion — Canadians enumerated in the census showed 43.3 per cent as Roman Catholics; 19.2 per cent reported at United Church; 15.2 per cent as Anglicans; 7.2 per cent, as Anglicans; 7.2 per cent, as Presbyterians; 4.2 per cent as Baptists; and 3.5 per cent, as Lutherans. Over 97 per cent of the population of French origin were reported as Roman Catholics.

SEARCH STOREROOMS FOR WASTE PAPER

Ottawa May 27 — In thousands of store rooms, file rooms and basements of Canadian business establishments are countless tons of vital war material — waste paper and paper-board. Some of these files date back fifty to even one hundred years and are kept more for sentimental than any other reasons. Now this material has gone to war and it is needed. That's why the Federal Government has taken the lead in cleaning out some old files and from the Parliament Buildings here more than 50 carloads, each averaging 50-or-more tons of material, have been collected.

Today, National War Minister L R LaFleche appealed to business concerns in all parts of the country to follow Ottawa's lead. "I realize many businessmen will be reluctant to discard this material for fear records of their business might become known to their competitors. But I can assure them such will not be the case. Discarded files or ledgers will be regarded as strictly confidential and will be used solely for the purpose of providing vital material in the manufacture of containers for war use," he said.

Service clubs in various parts of Canada have already started their own drives to obtain this material and General LaFleche urged others to follow suit. "I can think of no more important work a service club can do at this time than to appeal to its businessmen members to clean out old files," he declared. "With the approach of D-day, we will need paper containers to be thrown over board for landing operations; to carry medical kits, blood plasma, emergency rations, war masks. We need paper parachutes to carry food and supplies to isolated men; containers to make package liners for such solvent vapors as naphtha and benzine."

"A high percentage of 'waste' paper and paperboard is used in the production of new material," he went on. "You can't make new paper without old, any more than you can make steel without a certain percentage of scrap iron."

In the high priority class right now, said Charles LaFerle, national director of the campaign, are wrapping paper, store bags, cardboard, cartons, corrugated board, old magazines and books, envelopes and letters and newspaper. "These represent the raw material for making the vitally needed paper containers."

Unemployment Insurance Fund Now Over $200,000,000

The Unemployment Insurance Fund has gone over the $200,000,000 mark. It was announced last week by the Unemployment Insurance Commission that the Fund, which is made up of contributions by employees, employers and the Dominion Government, has reached the total of $200,811,213 on May 9th.

The Fund has been accumulating since July 1st, 1941, when contributions by employers and employees started. Under the Unemployment Insurance Act, the Government adds one-fifth to the total amount contributed by employers and employees.

Amendments to the Act passed at the last session of Parliament raised the "ceiling" from $2,000 to $2,600 and also provided for including persons in certain specified wage categories even when total earnings exceeded $2,400 per annum. This was a factor in increasing the number of persons in the higher wage categories, to whom the Act applies.

On the first of next July, collection of Unemployment Insurance contributions will have been in operation in Canada for three years.

CANADA'S SIMPLE RATION - BOOK DISTRIBUTION

The announcement that another food ration book — No. 5 — is in process of preparation with a view to its distribution next October, holds no terrors for the consumers of this country, who have grown accustomed to the simplicity of this distribution under the system which is supervised by Local Ration Boards throughout the Dominion.

If in Canada, however, the distribution of ration books has been "reduced to little more than the formula of having consumers present their old books when they wish to obtain new ones, in Britain it remains a much more complicated piece of business for the 45,000,000 civilians who hold them.

The annual distribution of these ration books in the Old Country started on May 22 and a Ministry of Food advertisement indicates how involved such a process may become, even when every effort is made to simplify it.

In the first place, every British consumer, like every Canadian consumer, holds what is known as an "identity card," which corresponds to the National Registration Certificate in this country and it is possession of this card which entitles the holder to rations.

Before a new ration book can be issued, the consumer's "identity card" must be in perfect order. It must be signed and it must bear the permanent address of the holder. If it is not in order or it has been lost, there is no new ration book for the consumer until a National Registration Office has been visited and matters have been put straight.

Because consumers in Britain, unlike those in Canada, are bound to certain retailers in their purchases, a page in the ration book is set apart for their names and addresses and this must also be completed before a new book can be issued.

When the British consumer, after having carried out these preliminary manoeuvres, reaches his distributing centre and his documents are found to be satisfactory, he is handed not one but two books. One of these is his food book, to be used after July 23. The other is his clothing book, which will not become good until August 1st. Address and national registration number must be inscribed on the front cover of the food book and name, address and national registration number on the front of the clothing book.

But the consumer's responsibilities do not end there. After he has secured his books, he must register all over again with all his retailers, except for milk, that source of supply remaining unchanged. If this re-registration is not carried out, retailers are unable to serve him. He writes down on one page of his ration book the names and addresses of the retailers with whom he wishes to register and he then takes his book to each of them in succession so that they may cut out certain counterfoils. And finally, he is required to write his name and address in spaces against meat, eggs, fats and cheese.

Having read these details of ration book distribution in the United Kingdom, the Canadian consumer should appreciate all the more the relative ease and simplicity of similar distributions in this country as well as the relative lightness with which rationing bears upon him. The Ration Administration is we believe, to be congratulated upon having evolved a painless and almost foolproof system for distributing ration books which does not always receive the praise that is its due, and the Local Ration Boards form an essential and efficient link in its successful operation.

TAKE RATION BOOKS IN MAKING VISITS

Rationing officials suggest that it is the part of courtesy for those visiting relatives and others for more than a day or two to take their ration books with them and thus to enable their hostesses, who may be hard pressed for supplies of rationed goods to obtain the additional supplies that are required. Loose coupons should not, however, be taken as they are valueless in the hands of consumers and cannot legally be tendered or accepted for the purchase of rationed goods. It is further suggested that nurses and others continuously on duty in households should similarly take their ration books with them so that household stocks of rationed goods may be appropriately augmented to meet the extra demands made on them. Many people now make a practice of taking their tea and sugar with them when they are invited to even a quiet afternoon tea, and this practice also meets with the approval of both their hostesses and the rationing officials.

In a careless moment a laborer in a machine shop got entangled in an endless belt and was dragged round a few times before being thrown clear of the machinery.

His scared mate rushed to him and knelt down, saying in anguished tones: "Oh, Bill, speak to me; Speak to me!"

White and shaken, Bill raised himself on one elbow and replied coldly: "Why should I? I passed you four times and you didn't speak to me."

Yes, we need your help... and need it badly.

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

In order that reports of organizations may be printed the week following the dates on which the meetings are held, we find it necessary to request that all copy be in our office not later than Saturday morning. We ask for the co-operation of the reporters, so that we may continue to be of service. — Editor.

GRACE CHURCH W. A.

At the first meeting of Grace Church Woman's Association since the opening of the building, the theme of the worship service, prepared by Mrs. C. D. McLellan, was "Starting Afresh." This was carried out with prayer by Mrs. H. Armstrong, scripture reading by Mrs. R. Denison, meditation read by Mrs. W. Sexsmith, and a solo, "Today My Sail I Lift" by Mrs. S. Booth. The business period was conducted by the president. Mrs. Wilfred Smith, and the treasurer, Mrs. H. Vine announced that the society had paid the first instalment of $1,060 on the organ. A program followed consisting of a piano duet by Mrs. B. Seymour and Mrs. B. Black, a reading by Mrs. F. Correll, and a vocal duet by Mrs. Reg. Campbell, of Falconbridge and Miss Mary Elliott, of Toronto.

The meeting closed with a hymn and benediction by the president. Refreshments were served by group leaders and a very happy social time was enjoyed by members and friends.

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

Mrs. M. Schamerhorn was hostess for the Tyendinaga East Women's Institute on the evening of June 9. The president, Mrs. Robt. Tucker, presided and opened the meeting with the Ode and Lord's Prayer. The roll call "uses for common salt" was answered by twelve members and eight visitors. The secretary read the minutes and correspondence. The guest speaker, Mrs. H. Harrison, of Plainfield, gave a splendid talk on "Now is the Time." Interesting current events were given by Mrs. S. E. Winter. Mrs. F. Hutchinson had the topic on "Health" and chose as her subject "Keeping Fit," which was very educational. Community singing was enjoyed and Mrs. R. Harvey gave the report of the District Convention held in May. Mrs. Tucker read "A Prayer in Time of War" and Mrs. Garry Provins moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, the hostess and all those who contributed to such a pleasant evening.

Singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting and lunch was served by the hostess and committee.

NAPANEE W. C. T. U.

The May meeting of the W. C. T. U. was postponed till June 7, that we might have a full report of the County Convention Mrs. W. Howitt, 1st vice-president, was in the chair and led in a beautiful devotional service, with Faith as its theme. The minutes of the April meeting were read and approved, and a very full and most encouraging financial report for the year ending in April was given by the treasurer, Mrs. Reddick. A motion was passed that our annual meeting for Mothers and Little White Ribboners, be held in Grace Church on Friday afternoon, June 23rd. Miss Parks gave a most interesting report of the County W.C.T.U. convention, held at Belleville in May, and some thoughts from this report we wish to emphasize. Plans were discussed for a crusade enrolling all women of the churches against all forms of social drinking. Great praise was given to Miss Ruff, field secretary, for the splendid work she is doing. Mayor Rollins, Belleville, in giving a warm welcome to convention, commended the W. C. T. U. on its work, both as an influence for good in these trying times and for endeavours to build a better world for soldier boys to return to.

Dr. Semple of Bridge St. Church presided at the supper meeting and urged an aggression campaign to secure enforcement of liquor laws, awakening public opinion.

Mrs. Seymour, in a splendid address, challenged the women not to turn away from life, face it. Live courageously, she said, create a contagious Christian personality.

Dr. Little's address gave information that should alarm and rouse to action all who heard. Liquor conditions in Ontario, he said, are the worst in the history of the province. At least one-third of the drinkers are women. If the Christian people do nothing the liquor traffic will work havoc with the people of Ontario.

Speaking of advertisements by liquor firms, Dr. Little said that many of them were exquisitely ludicrous, though professing highest patriotic concern. If said he, you want to know the widespread effect of drinking on our young people, check our delinquency lists, check institutions, our insane asylums and jails, our brothels and morgues.

Speaking for the Youth Movement, Don Williams told briefly of some of the accomplishments of this organization in regard to temperance work, stressing the plans concerning the building of billboards advertising temperance, to be erected throughout the province.

REIDVILLE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The monthly meeting of Reidville Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. D. R. Hannar, newly elected president, Mrs. Fenwick, presiding. Roll call was answered by hints for the coming year's program.

Mrs. Donald Hannar gave a splendid report of the Women's Institute convention held at Camden East on May 26th. At the close of the meeting the hostess served refreshments.

NAPANEE W. I.

The monthly meeting of the Napanee Women's Institute was held on Tuesday afternoon of last week and owing to the absence of Mrs. James Raggerty, president, Mrs. E. I. Boyle, vice-president, presided. The meeting opened with the Ode, the Prayer for Peace and the Salute to the Flag. The treasurer, Mrs. Robert Lucas, presented her report which showed a balance on hand. It was decided to have a social afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alcott Jaynes, River Road, on Friday, June 30th. Mrs. Fred Richards, the delegate to the Navy League meeting held in Napanee, presented her report. Mrs. Bert Seymour brought in her report re the advisability of forming a new hospital in Napanee. Mrs. Alma Alkenbrack presented her report of the district annual held in Napanee. Mrs. France Nicholson was the convener of the programme and presided. An instrumental selection was played by Mrs. B. M. Black, a reading was given by Mrs. Fred Richards, and a paper by Miss Hazel VanAlstyne.

Capt. W. W. Exley, who recently returned home from overseas, having been wounded, gave some of his experiences in England and Italy.

A vote of thanks to all who had contributed to the programme was voiced by Mrs. T. S. Moore and Mrs. C. E. Jamieson. The roll call was "Have you a hobby and what is it?" The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

SILLSVILLE W. A.

The Sillsville Woman's Association of which Mrs. L. McLean is the president, met at the hall on June 3, with seven in attendance and two little visitors, the Misses Marion Tibbett and Doris Windover. As war work is always the order of the day at Sillsville, two quilts were about finished. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by scripture reading and the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison. The minutes of the last meeting were read and accepted and the roll call was answered. There is $36 in the war work fund and it was decided to send $5 to help fix up the recreation rooms for soldiers in Napanee and $10 to the Red Cross. It was moved by Mrs. Windover and seconded by Mrs. McLean, we pay $4.85, our share towards repairing the parsonage at Conway. The benediction closed the meeting and lunch was served.

"STRATEGY" AND "TACTICS" TWO WORDS OFTEN CONFUSED

Strategy, the science and art of employing a nation's armed forces for victory, comes from the Greek verb strategein, "to be leader of an army" from strategos, "a general," which in turn comes from the two words tratos, "army," and agein, "to lead." The English strategy has the same origin.

But modern strategy is the direction of the whole war theatre, rather than personal leadership of fleets or ships, which is included in it. The actual disposing and maneuvering of troops or ships in battle is "Tactics" comes from Greek tasso, "to put in order," from tatteln, "to put in order."

Strategy and tactics are often confused and misused.

FURTHER PROGRESS MADE IN PLANS FOR DUNDAS STREET

Gov't Engineers Inspect Pavement and Offer Suggestions

Mayor D. R. Hall presided over a special meeting of the Town Council on Friday evening. All the members were present.

A communication was read from Mr. Mayhew concerning the removal of a tree in front of his residence, if given permission he was willing to have the tree removed, or the work could be done under the supervision of the Streets Committee.

On motion the Clerk was instructed to write Mr. Mayhew granting him permission to have the tree removed.

Reeve Daly, chairman of the Finance Committee, presented the monthly report of the treasurer on the town's financial standing for January 1st, 1944, to June 30th. Ordered fyled.

Reeve Daly also presented a statement from the treasurer of accounts paid by him since the last meeting of Council and for which he asked that vouchers be granted. The amount of accounts paid was $1,803.43.

Councillor Luffman, chairman of Streets Committee, presented a report on matters which had been referred to his committee as follows:

Re sewer on the Newburgh Road, asked for by C. N. Lourks, they recommended that the construction of the sewer be deferred until such time as more labor is available.

Re the complaint of C. H. Knight regarding the approach to the Beer Warehouse property on Mill Street, they recommended that the approach be made more accessible and that the Hydro Commission be asked to move two of their poles back to the street line — Report adopted.

The Streets Committee also presented the following report re repairs to Dundas Street:

The Treasurer, while in Toronto, attending the meeting of the Assessors' Association, interviewed the Deputy - Minister of Highways as to the repairing of Dundas Street and as a result a representative of the Highways Department, Mr. Robbins, came to Napanee Thursday together with Mr Noonan, District Engineer, Highways Department. These gentlemen went over the road and came to the following conclusions:

They recommended starting at the westerly limits of the Town, that a distance of approximately 1,000 yards, that the present surface of the pavement be burnt off to a depth of about three-quarters of an inch and that hot mixed asphalt be applied, covering this area.

From that point easterly to West Street, there are a number of depressions or bumps which should be levelled up with the same type of material and that all holes be filled and cracks filled with crack filler. It was agreed that Mr. Noonan would bring in his equipment from Kingston, and his own men to fill the cracks, and the estimated cost of same would be from $200 to $300.

From West Street to Adelphi Street, where the road has settled in the centre, they advised that these depressions should be filled in to bring the road to the proper contour and that drill holes be put down to ascertain whether it would be necessary to break out the pavement and put in a new concrete base before applying asphalt. All further repairs required in this section to be carried out.

From Adelphi Street to the intersection of Bridge Street, that all holes and depressions be filled in with hot mix asphalt and all cracks filled.

From the intersection of Bridge Street and Dundas Street around through under the railroad bridge, that the asphalt top be completely removed and a new surface of hot mix asphalt be applied covering this area.

The estimated cost of this work as advised at by the engineers is approximately $10,000. The Highways Department are prepared to pay 50 per cent of the cost of the work and before any tender is accepted, it has to be approved by the Department. It was recommended that tenders be called for covering this proposed work and a copy of such advertisement is attached hereto, and is to be published in the Daily Commercial News, Toronto, and tenders to be received four p.m. on July 10th, 1944.

We recommend the adoption of this report and would request the Mayor to call a special meeting of Council to consider tenders, for the evening of July 10th.— Report adopted.

Councillor Kimmerly presented the annual report of Chief of Police Moore in regard to the activities of the police department for the month of June. The report showed: Complaints received 8, complaints investigated 8, accidents investigated 1, doors found unfastened 7, gas pumps found unlocked 4, summons served 1, arrests 4. During the month of June the following charges were obtained in court for the Town: Three charges under the Liquor Control Act, two charges under the Criminal Code, and one charge under the Highway Traffic Act.

Councillor Kimmerly also reported that the police chief had made application for the usual two weeks' holidays from August 14th to 27th inclusive, also that he be granted permission to attend a convention of Chiefs of Police at Windsor, on August 28th to 31st, and that a grant of $25 for expense money be made.

Report adopted.

Councillor Robson presented the monthly report of Relief Officer Matt. Taylor which showed the amount to be paid by the town was $204.80 and by the government $208.35. The report also showed those on relief are 4 heads of families, dependents 15, single persons 7 — total 26.

Mayor Hall gave a very interesting verbal report of his trip to Montreal where he was in attendance at the convention of mayors. He stated that there were over 500 in attendance and that they came from all across Canada. He explained that considerable time was spent in discussing post-war conditions in Canada, and the steps which should be taken to make Canada prosperous and a good country for its returning soldiers to come home to.

He stated that one of the most important resolutions passed at the convention was one that was enacted and will be forwarded to the Federal Government setting forth the opinion of the members of the convention assembled that all reestablishment projects should be sponsored by the Federal Government and that it would be unwise for any municipality to undertake any big jobs, because if the Federal Government would sponsor them as per the resolution of the convention, the municipalities would be relieved of any large expenditures.

He expressed his pleasure in having the opportunity of attending the convention.

M. P. Graham, town assessor addressed the Council and stated that he did not intend at the present time, to give a detailed report of his attendance at the assessors' convention held in Toronto recently, but would present to Council a complete report at a special meeting to be held on July 10th.

Mr. Frank Miley, in a communication, asked the Council if the Stevens lot on Union Street, owned by the town, was for sale — Referred to the Town Property Committee to report.

Following the passing of accounts, the Council adjourned until Tuesday, September 5th or at the call of the Mayor.

It happened at the training camp of a major league baseball club. The Gatekeeper to the Manager — The umpire in baseball game is at the gate with two friends. Shall I pass them in?

NO EARLY DANGER OF GASOLINE CUT

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Munitions Department officials said last week, there was no immediate danger of a cut in the value of Canada's gasoline ration coupons, now worth three gallons each.

"Of course, we can't predict very far into the future," said a spokesman. "but for the moment we are not even thinking of it."

Munitions Minister Howe told the Commons in a review of the petroleum situation recently that Canada's supply position had not improved.

New Tax Rule Aimed To Remove Hardship On Taxed Couples

Ottawa, (C.P.) — A provision for avoiding heavy taxation by giving money to the government will be written into the Income Tax Law under the new budget. It applies to a particular situation and is designed to remove hardship where both husband and wife have incomes.

The present law provides that if the husband or wife of a taxpayer has investment income of more than $660 both shall be taxed as single persons. That is said Mr. Ilsley in a man losing his tax credit of $150 and becoming subject to much higher rates if his wife's investment income moved just more than $660.

The proposal is that to avoid this the wife can make a gift to the Crown of the excess with the result that unless her income is sufficiently more than $660 to equal the difference between the tax paid by the husband as a single man or as a married man he can continue to enjoy the credit for marriage status.

F. BROOKS DIED HEART FAILURE WHILE SWIMMING

Fred Brooks, aged 42, an employee of The Napanee Motors, died suddenly from a heart attack while swimming in the Salmon River, about 50 yards west of Roblin bridge, on Sunday afternoon last, about four o'clock.

Mr. Brooks had gone to the Salmon River with a party of friends, to spend the afternoon, and shortly after arriving went in swimming. His friends saw him swim across the river and after noticing that he seemed to be in difficulty, went to his assistance and found him floating face downward on the water. He was taken to shore and Dr. Stratton of Napanee was called. The doctor pronounced death due to heart failure.

Mr. Brooks came to Napanee from Prince Edward County and his body was taken to Picton, where the funeral was held on Tuesday.

DOUBLE-CHECK ON TAXPAYERS

Ottawa, (C.P.) — The nation's tax-collectors will be provided with facilities for a closer check on interest payments on savings deposits under this year's budget.

It is proposed to amend the law to require persons authorized to accept deposits to file returns showing interest credited to depositors in 1944 and subsequent years.

Hitherto corporations paying dividends to shareholders or interest on registered bonds have been required to report such payments.

Now banks, trust and loan companies, provincial savings offices and other concerns taking deposits will have to report the amount paid in interest to each depositor which will give the tax gatherers a double check on the returns made by individual taxpayers.

NAPANEE BOY INJURED SATURDAY AT HORSES RACES

While riding his father's horse, "I Wonder" in the horse races at the Kingston Fair grounds, last Saturday, July 1st, Norman Babcock, son of Gordon Babcock, Napanee, was painfully injured when the saddle girth loosened causing him to slip under the horse.

Young Babcock's foot caught in the stirrup and he was dragged for several feet before he could extricate himself. He narrowly missed being struck by other passing horses. It was thought at first that he had several broken bones, but examination in the hospital, where he was taken, proved that he was suffering from cuts and bruises.

Spectators at the races took up a collection for the injured boy, which was said to amount to over $200.

Making Alterations at Napanee Armouries

Extensive alterations and repairs are now being made at the Napanee Armouries. The work, which is the first undertaken on the building in many years, is under the direction of the Army Engineers and will be done with the assistance of local labor.

A four-foot strip of the asphalt flooring through the centre of the building will be torn up in order to install new drain pipes, which will allow the floor to be flushed frequently. Toilets and washrooms in the west end of the building, will be repaired and decorated. The room in the east end of the building used some years ago as a mess kitchen, will have its present equipment removed and will be used in the future as a wash room. The front doors of the building will be widened to allow heavier trucks to be driven in from the street.

Some of the offices will be redecorated and the roof will be painted.

It is estimated the work will take six weeks to complete.

Recruiting for Air Force Suspended Until Oct. 1

Ottawa, (CP) — The R. C. A. F. has suspended recruiting until October 1st it was stated last week. There was no official comment from air force headquarters, but it was understood Air Minister Power would make a statement in the Commons on the subject.

It was understood the chief reason for the halt in recruiting was the fact casualties have been much under the estimates of operational commanders.

It could not be learned whether volunteers would be routed to one of the other services or held on a waiting list for entry into the R.C. A.F. after October 1st.

Air Force recruiting has been based on an estimated intake of 2 000 men monthly. The army intake for active service was given as 4,000 monthly and recruiting activity in that branch has been stepped up to ensure a steady flow of reinforcements to divisions engaged in Italy and France.

Defence Headquarters reported a "definite upswing" in recruiting for the army, with the intake for the week ended June 17th, totalling 1,169, highest for this year to date. An official statement said the invasion was "a factor" in the increase.

Of the 1,709 volunteers, 975 were from other call-up units, 7707 from the public and 87 from the Reserve Army.

The statement said:

"The need for recruits to fill the growing requirements of the Canadian Army overseas is being stressed in the new recruiting drive and it is anticipated that the initial successes of Canadian troops in France will spur voluntary enlistments considerably."

I had an awful headache last night.

Yes, I saw you with her.

Uprisings have spread in Nazi Europe in Denmark, France and Yugoslavia.

• • •

Chinese troops were hurled against a strong enemy spearhead, 46 miles south of the encircled city of Hengyang which still remained in Chinese hands.

Minister Munitions, C.D. Howe, Reveals Huge Output

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Hon C. D. Howe, Munitions Minister, announced last week, that by the end of this month Canada will have produced 2,000,000 000 worth of war vehicles in the greatest single production job in the Dominion's history, with output reaching 650,000 units.

In a statement, Mr. Howe said the output includes 25,000 universal carriers, which rolled off the assembly lines at a rate of more than 725 per month during the last four months; 6,000 armoured vehicles such as scout and reconnaissance cars, armored cars and snowmobiles, and 3,500 tanks and self-propelled gun mounts. Nearly 150 gun mounts a month are being made.

In addition, said Mr. Howe, Canada is providing substantial quantities of railroad equipment for the United Nations under the mutual aid agreement. Two thousand flat cars will be made for Russia, which already has received 40,000 tons of rails.

An order for 145 locomotives for India has been completed and a second contract calls for the delivery of many more of the same type. Orders have been placed by the Indian Government for some thousands of other items of rolling stock.

Other large India contracts call for 75 000 components such as axle boxes, buffers, draft casings and couplings.

A SERIOUS MATTER

The Government at Ottawa has recently passed a bill which contains some iniquitous features. One of the clauses in the Bill takes away the right to vote from any member of a race with which we are at war, if that right is denied by any province. The purpose of the legislation to to deprive the Japanese in Canada of the right to vote. Being denied the right to vote in British Columbia, they will, by the new piece of legislation, be deprived of the vote in Canada as a whole. This is racial discrimination right enough. It is perfectly true there are some Japanese who ought not to be permitted to vote, but the Mounted Police know these men, and there is little likelihood of them being able to do any harm in Canada.

But the great majority of the Japanese in Canada were born here; they went to school here. They know no other language, no other form of government. The Emperor of Japan means nothing to them. Indeed, not many of the second and third generation Japanese know the language of their race. In every respect they are Canadians Recently we visited one such family—hard working public-spirited Canadian farmers. They have lived on an Ontario farm for thirty-five years. They take an active and deep interest in the local church and community. They know nothing about Japan, more than the rest of us. They wish simply the right to work and to serve in church and community. Now these people and twenty thousand more like them will be deprived of their citizenship even though they have been exercising their franchise for a generation or more.

It is hard to see why there was no opposition to this Bill from any Member of the House. There was no debate on this clause, no protest, no question. The most charitable interpretation we can put on such laxity, is that the full impact of the Bill may not have been clear to the House. We have a suspicion, however, that there was something political about it. To disfranchise 20,000 or 25,000 people, means that a lot of votes will be shelved in the meantime, votes that might have proved an embarrassment to a party which was none too popular with the Japanese.

BORING FROM WITHIN

Reports trickling past European censors indicate an internal condition which bodes ill for the Nazis in the not too distant future. The strikes and riots in Copenhagen are indicative of a serious feeling of unrest which is liable to blow up at any time. Over 700 people were killed and scores more injured in the riots in Copenhagen. They were quelled only when the Nazi overlords surrounded the city and prevented food from going into the people and by shutting off water and electricity. Faced with starvation, the Danes went back to work and ended the general strike. That the Danes showed open revolt must be a sore point with the German leaders. While they had occupied the country, yet they interfered less here than in other places. They pointed to Denmark as a sort of model state under the Nazi rule. But matters have not been going any too well lately. More and ever more food has been shipped out to meet the needs of the German army. Apparently there were other causes of unrest at work, though accurate information as to what these were is not available. It may have been just the growing resentment of a people having to live under the heel of the German overlords. Whatever the cause, the results are there for all to see and not the least to be impressed will be the Nazis themselves.

In Munich, a report tells of an uprising and of the imposition of martial law. This is unusual, too. For Munich is a sort of national shrine for the Nazis. It is here that the Nazis made their first bid for power. The Germans of the present regime have always regarded Munich as a stronghold of the Nazi Party. If trouble should break out there, it would greatly weaken the hold of th Nazis all through the State.

It is possible to put too much stress on these incidents. They may be but isolated events. Nevertheless they are straws which show the way the wind is blowing. If a few riots were to start across Germany, the whole underground of Europe would be encouraged to spring into action. That would be a a signal for the beginning of the end.

MINSK

Minsk, which was captured by the Russians, on Monday, is the capital of White Russia. White Russia is the smallest of the Federated Republics making up the R.S.F.S.R. The present writer visited Minsk in 1935. The country round about is somewhat like our Northern Ontario—scrub, bogs and unproductive land. The nature of the soil forced the people to live in crowded conditions in the better parts of White Russia. The consequence was that before the Revolution, White Russia with Minsk and Vitebsk, were poverty-stricken, dirty, illiterate areas. About 55 per cent. of the arable land belonged to the gentry. The peasants were virtual slaves. The Jews constituted eleven per cent. of the population, and were forbidden to own land or practice agriculture.

After the Revolution all this was changed. The Jews were permitted and encouraged to live on the land. Natural resources were developed. Factories were started at strategic points. Education went ahead by leaps and bounds, so that at the time the present war broke out, there were twice as many students in the universities in White Russia, per capita, as there were in either England or France.

Before the Revolution, Minsk, which had a population of 200,000 when the Germans took it over in 1941, was a dirty, neglected provincial town. It had no drainage, no paved streets. When the writer visited it there were electric lights, paved streets, modern transportation and waterworks. There were seventy factories in the city. Around the suburbs, land had been drained and collective farms were producing good crops. There were theatres, clubs, museums, a public library and the White Russian Academy of Science.

This city is only a few miles from the border of Poland, where the visitor enters the U.S.S.R. The port of entry is Negoreloye, a small customs station. The Russians have prided themselves on the transformation that has been made in Minsk since the Revolution in 1920. Now that it has been won back there is great rejoicing in Moscow and throughout the whole nation, not only because of its own worth, but because it is the most important city between the Russian Armies and Warsaw.

V

A GOOD FEATURE GONE

The best feature of the Income Tax Law was wiped out with the recent amendments to the Act. The compulsory savings feature of the Act was one which met with almost universal satisfaction. It forced the wage earner to put away a certain amount of money every week against the day when jobs and money may be less plentiful than they are at the present moment. There can be no doubt but that men and women were willing to forego the present enjoyment of goods and services that money can bring for the sake of future security. And now that the Government has removed that, without any apparent demand for such a change, the people who were saving something for a rainy day, are none too happy about it.

But the worst feature of the new legislation is the way in which it will tend to defeat the Government's efforts to curb inflation. It is well known that besides the necessity of getting money to finance the war, one of the main reasons for heavy taxation particularly among the wage earners, is to drain off surplus funds. As the amount of money in the hands of the people increases, and consumer goods either decrease or remain more or less stabilized, the tendency is to shoot prices up to higher levels. People with money bid against each other for goods and services. The Government has done a good job in holding down inflation. That has been one of Canada's great achievements, in which we are all justly proud. Why, in the face of this determined effort to keep down inflation and to drain off surplus funds the Government should reverse its policy and give the people more money to spend, is hard to understand.

It is argued in some sources that this is an election dodge. Premier King has announced that there will be a Dominion election within a year. There are those who say that the Government is willing to run the risk of a certain amount of inflation in order to win the support of the wage earner, by withdrawing the compulsory savings clause in the Income Tax Act. If that is true, if that is the motive, it may not work out as the Government expects. Just prior to the Saskatchewan election, wheat certificates to the Western farmers were distributed. But whether designed as an enticement to the voter to support the Mackanzie King Government at all events it did not work out that way. The Western farmer was doing a lot of thinking for himself. He accepted the cheques from the Government and then voted against it. That is the way it sometimes happens.

Speaking in the House of Commons on the bill to establish a federal Department of Reconstruction, Prime Minister King stated there should be no difficulty in securing money for reconstruction purposes. Having raised money during the war by loans and taxation to destroy lives and property his opinion was that: "When the whole picture is reversed, and it comes to the matter of carrying out constructive work, for the rebuilding of communities for the supplying of homes necessities and luxuries of life there is going to be a demand for employment the like of which could not arise at any other time." Greatest planning, he thought, was for the period following transition when full employment would be very necessary.

The men and women returning from war will bring back a great resurgence of things spiritual which should stand Canada in good stead at a critical time. It is so implied in many of the stories coming from battlefronts. Here as an example is a little paragraph from a story concerning the adventure of a famous Canadian destroyer which took part in the Invasion. "There were shell splashes in our vicinity; we saw craft hit, saw them burning, saw them sink, but you understood later the fleeting look that passed over men's faces as the ship's radio, tuned to invasion news, suddenly interrupted its program to say: "And now let us stop a moment to pray, to pray for the success of the Allied invasion forces, and the men in it."

Here was a tough nut for the Consumer Branch.

For many weeks there has been no end of discussion on the question of who should get the sugar coupons examining of the school teacher who is boarding in the community, shortly leaving on holidays. The director at Ottawa says she has no authority to rule one way or the other. If the teacher is leaving her boarding house to go home for the summer she should make arrangements to let her landlady have some of her canning sugar coupons. Otherwise she would not be entitled to any of the preserves which would undoubtedly be served her next winter. There is certainly a fair solution to the problem and it's up to the individual concerned to find it.

Among the many boons which will be the lot of civilians after this war over is a new insecticide popularly known as DDT. It is now used over all the world by fighting forces as well as in recently liberated countries to counteract the effects of lice, which spread typhus. A 5 per cent. solution of DDT in kerosene sprayed on walls of barns, stables, etc., is an effective fly killer good for several weeks at a stretch. It fatal to mosquitos in minute preparations.

Signs of inflation developed in 1941, before wage and price control was introduced. In the six months preceding, prices were rising three times as fast as in the earlier part of the war. This is a significant fact many have not known. If the cost of living had been allowed to rise unchecked living standards would certainly have been progressively reduced. You know, industry and agriculture have undergone tremendous changes in the war years. Food production skyrocketed from 40 to 59 per cent. About a million persons have been added to the labour forces More than 750,000 went into the armed forces. War expenditures have purchased more goods and services than Canada produced altogether in 1939.

Canada's pension bill in respect to this war will be enormous. The Minister of Pensions said in the House of Commons that pensions costing $6,975,000 a year were being paid to 12,215 veterans of the present war at April 30th. A federal department of Veterans' Affairs is being set up.

The increasing production of soybean in this country draws attention to the fact that the oil derived therefrom is used largely for edible purposes. The latest estimate of use by the Department of Agriculture indicates that about 90 per cent of the product goes into foods, including shortening salad oils and salad dressings. The oil cake and oil cake meal, by-products of oil production, are high protein feeds for livestock, and are greatly in demand.

Pierre Laval's Treasure At Chateldon

BY JOE ALEX MORRIS

There is one unique work of art that almost certainly has escaped the plundering Nazis in France. It is an oil painting, and while it may not be comparable as an artistic treasure to the works of Ingres or Daumier or Degas, it is not without value as a memento of these fearful days in Europe. It hangs on the wall of a castle in the tiny village of Chateldon.

The castle of Chateldon, at first glance, gives the impression of fantastic unreality. It is something that should not exist outside the pages of Grimm's "Fairy Tales," where it would be complete with a fair-haired princess, an ogre and a dragon. In the twentieth century it should be a tumbled and vine-covered ruin in which school children's impatient feet ate the dust dirt of a thousand years. Its massive gateway opens on a steep road twisting a hundred yards up the mountainside to the castle doors. The castle walls are ten feet thick. There is a wide, circular terrace that hangs like a balcony over the roof tops of the village—a terrace from which a princess might look for horsemen coming far down the hills or from which a man might toss a pebble at almost any chimney pot in Chateldon. Above the terrace the towers and battlements and parapets rise menacingly over the village.

Inside, the halls are dim, even with the benefit of electric lights and damp even when the spring sun is warm against the mountainside. The windows are originally designed with an eye to defense and when sunlight comes unerringly through them it falls upon the French equivalent of a Grand Rapids golden oak five-piece living room set arranged neatly against the scarred baronial walls. There is in one room, a great fireplace in which a man might stand erect were it not for the beam and naked hot water radiator (1915 vintage) firmly anchored on the lower ancient old hearth.

But in a way, the important thing about the castle is that it is now the home of Pierre Laval. You get the feeling that since the day when, as a little boy, he stood on the cluttered floor near his father's butcher shop he had always intended in his sharp Auvergnat fashion to own the castle. He must have had, even then, a goal and he never ceased to work and plan. He gained attention as a Socialist and a spokesman for the working men.

He watched which way the wind blew. He edged a peculiar path through the Hanau and Stavisky scandals and other less notorious affairs. He accumulated, somewhere, a fortune. He pursued the slick, insane trading methods familiar to Auvergne when dealing in the fate of nations on the international diplomatic exchange. He carefully evaded responsibility for either good or bad legislation. He climbed, calculatingly and by whatever device he could find to the top of the steps to power. No one could deny that he succeeded. The poor boy became a world figure and, eventually, many people came to regard him as the blackest traitor in all the history of France.

Laval was always something of a mystery man, a lone wolf, whether slyly sipping coffee with Leon Trotsky or publicly taking orders from Adolf Hitler. But he was always a realist too. There are those who say that he always figures carefully just what he could get away with and how. There are those who cruelly point out that he has never knowingly let ideals, patriotism or sentiment get the better of his calculating approach. He is even said to when turning over French hostages to be shot by the Germans.

But these critics are not always unprejudiced. Some of them, no doubt, are men who differed with Laval on political matters, such as whether France should fight for freedom or capitulate to tyranny. Some of them have, due to their differences with Laval's viewpoint, suffered some losses, such as a daughter, or a wife, or a son, or a baby or a home crushed in the turmoil that followed the fall of France.

Such prejudices are likely to give a distorted portrait of Laval as an almost inhuman figure. It would be unfair to accept that portrait because there is a distinctly human side of Laval's character. Even a casual visitor to Chateldon can see it. For instance, was it not significant that even a young Deputy representing a Paris constituency he always found time to push politics aside to talk to his birthplace? Nor did he ever forget or change his sentiments toward Chateldon; not even when he became a Cabinet minister dealing in vast human values, no Premier, with the fate of France in his hands. Even then he found time —at the right moment, of course — to buy up the most profitable properties along the village street, save one exquisite example of old Norman "architecture whose owner, a schoolmate of Laval, emphatically and profanely refused to sell. Laval found time to develop a little mineral-water bottling concern at Chateldon with such miraculous skill that it was quickly taken up and pushed by stewards on all French railroads, even to disadvantage of other, better known bottling works Chateldon profited—or at least, Laval profited — and who could say politics entered into a purely business deal? And surely it was common human impulse that prompted him to buy at last the ancient castle "that hangs like a feudal crown over his birthplace. If he got the million franc property for a mere 250,000 francs (less than the former impudent owners paid for modernization) that was a mere business detail, and who but a few critical neighbours would grumble that Laval's shadow instead of the castle shadow now fell across the whole village.

Some men, regardless of human impulses, might have been discouraged, but Laval was persistent and he eventually became a find a forward even from the aesthetic viewpoint. This, too, was human as well as rather cunning. Instead of enclosing the big fireplace in the castle removed a false front from the mantel and found an old, faded painting. It depicted the Auvergne mountains where their broad backs bend down to a pass south of the town of Allier, and it showed three knights on horseback pursuing a beaten army across the plain. The knights Laval was told, were men of an ancient feudal lord of Chateldon who grimly guarded the Auvergne mountains against invasion some six centuries ago. And those who fled so wildly were the English.

England had been a staunch ally of the French against the Nazis, but now Hitler has triumphed in Europe and it was only humane, perhaps, that the twentieth - century lord of Chateldon chateau (who had never been in the Louvre but also had never loved the English) should be delighted with his artistic find. Not only was the goal of his boyhood achieved in this old castle but it had yielded a symbol of success in far away affairs. He felt, however, that time had dimmed the artist's message, so a local dauber applied new colors to faded areas and detail, until the legend that told how the English had been so badly defeated they would never dare return to France. It was, when I saw it, a thing of gaudy and emphatic workmanship done with the finesse of a sign painter, and it hung in the place of honor above Laval's fireplace.

It is probably still there. It is not likely that Goering was interested in it when he looted the treasured spoil of Europe nor Himmler, nor Goebbels. The little lord of Chateldon can gaze upon it whenever he goes back to remind his neighbours that a home-town boy has done so much not only in the village but in all of France. Of course, the painting may not give him the same delight today that it did when the British were crushed against the Dunkirk beaches. As a realist, Laval knows that new battles are coming and that new armies from England will surge again over the plain of Allier which the 14th century English could not conquer and this knowledge may well bring out still another facet in Laval's character. Avarice, jealousy treason and greed for power which weave the black thread of his career from Chateldon to Berlin are, unhappily, human enough traits, but fear, too, is a human trait and a strong one. Laval knows that this time the armies from the North will not be just English, but also the men of France, coming home to pay a debt; men who well know in their agonized hearts what Pierre Laval has done in France.

English Channel Weather Baffled Napoleon

BY GEORGE EDINGER
In the Daily Mail
Transatlantic Edition

"Look to your ditch" was Cromwell's watchword in the hour of Britain's danger. And, in fact, the narrow sea which the British call the English Channel is just a ditch.

Wind and water, tides and eddies have dug it. The process is unfinished.

Shakespeare's Cliff at Dover has receded a mile since Julius Caesar landed in 55 B.C. The shores of Chesil Beach are still expanding.

On both sides of the ditch the land has the same features. The white cliffs of Kent have their counterpart in Artois; the rockbound bays of Brittany are reproduced in Cornwall.

Traditions of a sunken land between live on either side.

It is an uneven ditch. Nature is not precise in her craftsmanship.

At the south-west angle, off the isle of Ushant, it runs 630 ft. deep; and for 70 miles, off the north shore of the Channel Islands, there flows a stretch of deep water 600 ft. and more. Elsewhere the sea-bed is much lower; 120 to 180 ft. in the Strait of Dover, two-thirds the height of London's Nelson Column.

The ditch is 140 miles across at its widest south of Sirmouth; 21 at its narrowest, east of Dover. It covers 23,960 square miles, roughly the area of Norway.

All this is a tangled treacherous area of cross-currents, tides shallows, sandbanks and sudden deeps. It is swept by eight gales on the average a year, and two of every three break in November.

Fine weather in the Channel starts in March. It reaches its climax in May and ends in September. But between November 1803 and November 1804, when Napoleon was massing to invade Britain, there were not six consecutive fine days.

For three days in five the wind blows from the west. The current flows, parallel with the French shore from west to east at from one to four miles an hour.

The tides are a study in themselves. In places on the British side there are two, in some three, every 24 hours. There are fewer tides on the Continental side, but the tide rises higher.

The water of the ditch are rich in fish — 30 cwt. to every square mile of water.

But the Channel is not a favourite fishing ground. Its waters are too dangerous. They are the most dangerous waters in the world.

Ever since 1803 there have been projects for a Channel tunnel, noticeably more favoured on the French than on the British side.

Yet, so far as through traffic would be concerned, British rolling stock could, because of the gauge, use French railways, whereas Continental stock would be useless on British railways.

The Imperial Defence Committee rejected the Chanpel tunnel project in 1924.

Three and a half million people made the sea-passage by six routes in the year before the war. A like mass transfer of an army is another matter.

It is true that 8 000 000 fighting men were carried in large bodies—principally from Southampton, which has three tides—between 1914 and 1918. There was even a ferry which once took 700 guns across in 48 hours. But neither passage nor landing was contested.

The most recent successful crossing by an army against opposition was from St. Valery-sur-Somme to Pevensey between six at night and nine in the morning of September 27, 1066.

William Duke of Normandy succeeded in putting 12,000 men ashore from 696 ships. But the defending fleet had already dispersed, no longer expecting his arrival after the Norman army had been held up by a month of unbroken west wind.

And Harold's Saxony Army had been diverted by a Norwegian attempt to disembark in Yorkshire. And so it arrived after the Normans had effected their landing.

The precedent of William of Orange's landing in Torbay on November 5th, 1688, with 11,000 infantry and 4,000 cavalry in 700 transports, is even less helpful as a guide to calculating the chances. The actual landing was not opposed, for the invaders came by invitation.

Actually, however, winds played a big part in the operation. The fleet should have sailed on the first full moon after the autumn equinox, but a succession of west winds kept the Dutch in harbor and carried Irish levies over St. George's Channel to fight for James II.

Finally the west wind that did carry William's armament across confined King James's fleet to the mouth of the Thames, and when it dropped there was a two-days' calm in the Channel.

So while William was putting his men ashore at Torbay, King James's fleet lay becalmed off Beachy Head.

Julius Caesar, having command of the Channel, mustered 80 transports in Boulogne Harbour and 18 more at Ambleteuse, five miles north, on August 25th, 55 B.C.

Between dusk and midnight he embarked 10,000 men during the ebb tide. A light following wind and a waxing moon, well into its second quarter, sped him to Deal by midday of August 26th.

The Romans landed under cover of the heavy catapults on their warships, but the operation was not successful. The Ambleteuse squadron, carrying the cavalry, was too slow in loading the horses. It missed the evening tide, and when it sailed, on the morning of August 26, the wind changed suddenly to west and carried it back to port.

Caesar, unable to advance without his horses held a precarious beachhead till August 30th.

Napoleon planned to cross on the grand scale. One hundred and thirty thousand men of the Army of France, coming home to pay a debt; men who well know in their agonized hearts what Pierre Laval has done in France.

IS THE HIGHEST MOUNTAIN IN CHINA?

According to a dispatch from Chunking China, an American pilot from New York reports having sighted a mountain at least 2,000 feet higher than Everest among the vast ranges of westermost China. A military rule forbids disclosing the names of the pilots flying in this theatre, but he is an experienced pilot, having flown more than 4,000 hours.

He was flying off the course over the Chinese Province of Sikong in January, believing himself to be somewhere north of Tinchiang, when in an attempt at getting through the overcast his altimeter recorded 31,000 feet. Actual corrected reading was 30,070 feet. The pilot was surprised at finding that he was still flying parallel with the big mountain between 2,000 and 3,000 feet below its peak.

Various estimates have been made of Mt. Everest's height, ranging from 29,141 to 29,002 feet.

The pilot had no means of checking the height by other means, but the altimeter was found functioning properly when he landed.

The fliers consider it possible that the mountain was never seen before because, first, because the weather is so thick up there that it is probably clear only on odd days each year. Second, the mountain is so high that in by other vast heights it probably hidden from most people from lower levels. Normally, they would dream of flying over those peaks which are in the mid-air ranging flying country unattainable.

It has been proved before that mountains in Western China are not much land is unsurveyed and very roughly mapped. Several years ago pilots flying over the area reported that they had seen mountains which they estimated to be 24,000 feet.

A Modern City Inside a Giant Rock

Throughout the Gibraltar area it has been known for centuries that there were extensive galleries and chambers in the Rock, but the wealth in all parts of the fortress has been concentrated on the area on the south side of the fortress town in the direction of Spain. Within the last few years, however, it has been discovered that there is also a vast system of tunnels and chambers on the north side.

Now there are two main tunnels, one for use by motor road and the other for use by pedestrians, running along which tanks and guns are constantly pass each other. There are roadside filling stations, and there is a complete telephone system throughout the whole of the fortress. Hospitals, barracks, magazines, workshops, and hundreds of feet of rock-hewn offices can be found hospitals, barracks, magazines, workshops, and hundreds of feet of rock-hewn offices can be found hospitals. Electric lifts, together with the inevitable stairways, are served with modern electric power. Kitchens, fully fitted with the latest many divisions for the preparation of food, with refrigerators for the storage of food for replenishment. The whole of the fortress is provided with electric light, lasting two years or more.

The face of the Rock has been changed, too. Hundreds of feet of its surface, facing in all directions, are hidden thousands of guns. Many of them, after firing, can be drawn back into specially bomb-proof chambers in the rock face. They are then replaced by siege artillery expected to be able to throw an immense shell a long range of shell-fire in any direction anywhere round the Rock.

The natural bulk of the Rock and the depth of the bombproof chambers make the fortress completely invulnerable by enemy aircraft. Gibraltar is, indeed, one of the great military wonders of the world.

"What's that piece of wood you found your finger for?"

"That's a knot. Forestry is a fine job, you're outdoors all the time, and with bread you have to eat. That is to remind me to buy some pickles onion."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 9TH, 1944

TAKING POSSESSION OF CANAAN

Lesson Text: Joshua 14: 6-14. Judges 1, 20-21

When the United Empire Loyalists landed in this part of the country, the land was divided among them by Lt. Jessup's corps of 434 drenched sixteen 216 of the King's Royal and Colonel Rogers with 229 men, drew Frederickaburgh, and Major Vanalstine, with his party and some of Rogers' men about 400 in all, drew Adolphustown. That was the way in which the Israelites got their start in Canaan. There was bound to be some dissatisfaction. A tribe that thought it would like the fertile plains might draw rough pasture land, and people who wanted pasture land might get hilly and rocky scrub land So there was a lot of grumbling amongst the people, nobody wanted the hard, tough job.

Then Caleb came up for his allotment. He was an old man, eighty-six years old. I am just as strong as ever I was, he said, give me the hill country where the Anakins dwelt, a tribe of tall, fierce warriors, and where cities were easily fortified and turned into,a veritable fortress. Well, of course, Caleb was not as young as he used to be—it is sheer folly for a man of 86 years of age to talk this way. However, he showed courage, and faith, and fight.

It will be remembered that Caleb was one of the twelve men whom Moses sent to spy out the land 45 years before the children of Israel in to-day's lesson. Of the twelve all agreed that it was a great country. Ten, however, advised against immediate occupation, on the ground that the task was too difficult and that they were not prepared to undertake it. Two of the twelve brought in a minority report. They did not minimize the difficulties, but they were confident that these difficulties could be overcome. The majority report was a sore disappointment. That night, the people wept. But the plan suggested by the majority was carried out, and forty years passed before there was an attempt to subdue Canaan. Now, Caleb is talking to Joshua, the man who, with him brought in the minority report. "I'm just as young as I ever was," he said, "give me the hill country."

This time the people went and possessed the land. To be sure they had lived forty years or more in the wilderness and were now a coherent and disciplined people. Nevertheless, the minority were right. Indeed they nearly always are right! There is no guarantee in heaven or on earth that majorities have a monopoly of truth and righteousness. Often it only takes one man of faith and courage and determination to put the impossible achieved. One of the most outstanding examples in the present writer attended a meeting where the board of management was divided and decided that the institution for which they were responsible be closed. An aged man rose and in vigorous language made an impassioned appeal to them to go forward. The managers agreed, the institution was saved and, to-day it is a flourishing institution to which it belongs and the existuency it serves. The Caleb's are the men who get things done. Others say it can't be done. They go ahead and do it.

The United Church of Canada, a few years ago set out to accomplish a great deficit. There was vigorous opposition. It cannot be done, it was said. But the few who saw the vision, went to work, set up the organization and finally the deficit of March 31st, 1944 was wiped out. It could not be done, so they said, but it was finally accomplished.

Caleb was an old man, young only in spirit. He might very well have been excused had he asked for a pension for his service in the past and rested on his oars. Not Caleb. He wanted something to do, something hard, difficult, and he got the hill country. He got the hill country, he conquered the inhabitants and established his tribe in the hard and difficult.

In studying the conquest of Canaan, it is well to remember that the Israelites were themselves in a brief dramatic moment. As a matter of fact, it was a long, slow, hard process, a nation does not possess and then get control of it overnight. It is essential for a correct understanding of the whole historic movement of this invasion be seen as the result of a long process. It required men of the courage of Caleb and the leadership of Joshua to accomplish the task but it was done finally and became the heritage of the Jewish people — a land towards which they still look as their national home, but the settlement of which is dated them because of other selfish national interests.

HOLDEN, OF DESERONTO, CONTINUES THE SALE

Hitler, in his book, says he go his inspiration (for his diabolical acts) from the 31st chapter of Numbers. His authority for his mass murders of innocent children and babies and the destruction, or confiscation, of their homes and the hanging of the parents, from the Book of Joshua, and for his deceit and treachery he got his lesson from the 8th chapter of Judges. And he has the audacity to say God is instructing him, also.

We do not want any of these horrors to happen in Canada. Let us work and live for the fulfillment of our dream. A united, prosperous, peaceful country, giving an honest value for an honest dollar.

This is our motto. Come in and test our sincerity. We have many things on sale that might be just what you need.

Furniture, Stoves, Baby Carriages, Groceries, Booth, Gas and Oil, Electric Repairs, 18 Ice Boxes just in, 100 Files, all kinds, etc., etc.

Say a short prayer for the boys over there. 27a

MASONS PARADE TO CHURCH IN DESERONTO

It was certainly a red letter day when the members of Craig Lodge No. 401, A.F.&A.M. Deseronto, paraded to St. Mark's Church, Deseronto, to attend, on Sunday, June 25, divine service at 11 a.m. The Order, composed of a smart body of men, turned out in good strength and was welcomed by the rector. Reserved seats were kept for the Brethren and printed copies of the entire service were given to every member of the congregation by Mr. Clare Maley and Mr. Sydney Weston, sidesmen, the result being that all could take an intelligent part in the service which was bright and very hearty. The officers present were Wor. Master Charles Young, Immediate Past Master Morden Walker; Senior Warden Bruce Pratt; Very Wor. Brother John Wood Thompson of Napanee and Right Wor. Brother F. D. Pringle of Melrose.

The Rector, Canon Radcliffe, took charge of the first part of the service and the rector of Shannonville, Rev. C. P. Heaven conducted the second part of the service, when special prayers were offered for the members of the Order and for our Soldiers, Sailors and Airmen.

The Rev. C. P. Heaven, himself a Mason, preached an excellent sermon. The organist, Mr. C. J. Knight and surpliced choir, rendered the musical portions of the service. The solo parts were taken by Brother Reginald Wessman, who sang in good voice. Mrs. T. Bowen gave beautiful flowers for the altar.

The Brethren, on returning, stated that they had thoroughly enjoyed the service and their cordial reception by the Rector and Congregation of St. Mark's Church.

WEDDING BELLS

The marriage took place at Bath United Church parsonage, on Saturday, June 24th, of Alberta Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Ethel Thompson, Napanee, and Claude Ramsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ramsay, Selby. Rev. James Robinson performed the marriage ceremony.

The attendants were the bride's cousin and husband.

The bride and bridesmaid were both dressed in blue crepe with white accessories and carried bouquets of roses.

Following the wedding the bride and groom left for Toronto and after their return, they will live in Kingston.

BRADFORD - GARRISON

A quiet wedding was solemnized at The United Church parsonage at Yarker, on Saturday, June 24th, at 3 p.m., when Reg. W. G. Fletcher united in marriage Charlotte Elethea beth, elder daughter of Mrs. David Garrison and the late David Garrison, to Charles Thomas, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bradford, Colebrook.

The fair-haired bride was charmingly attired in a French blue sheer street-length dress. She wore a white hat with French Blue veil and a corsage of American Beauty roses and Lily-of-the-Valley. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Laura Allenbrook, who wore beige crepe two-piece dress with white hat and accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses and maiden-hair fern.

Gordon Garrison, the bride's brother, was best man.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the bride's home to immediate friends.

The happy young couple will reside at Colebrook.

Scene, landing stage. Business gent in a hurry, to dock loafer: See here, my man, do you want to earn a half-a-crown? Loafer: Don't I just sir? Very well; stand on this spot for half an hour and wave this handkerchief as hard as ever you can. My wife is off to America with this steamer, and she'll expect me to stand for that time waving to her. She's a bit short-sighted and she'll never know the difference.

FREE SHOTS ON Local Sport

On Wednesday last the Deseronto Red Heats and the Mohawk Reds, the two top teams in last year's finals failed to provide the brand of ball the many fans in attendance expected.

The Redi-Heats played a dull listless game, while their opponents played sparkling ball. Just what the cause of the poor game was, no one seems to understand.

The last two frames of the game were about the best, as far as Deseronto was concerned. This is not like the battling Redi-Heats and we hope this smart aggregation come out of the slump and get in there.

The score of 13 to 0 was sure a sore touch to their many supporters, who felt that their favourites had let them down.

On Friday of last week the Gibbard sponsored aggregation was beaten by the much-talked-about Hunter's Cleaners, by the score of 13 to 7. This game was expected to be a rip snorter, or what have you. It proved to be a very mild game . . . everything very peaceful and quiet—so quiet that several players went to sleep or it looked that way on several occasions.

At the meeting of the League officials held this week, things were not so quiet . . . so we hear.

According to some reports — hearsay of course — some of the teams are making some broad statements, etc. . . . in short, some accusations in regards to winning of games.

If as much energy was expended in playing ball and getting the teams properly organized, this Bayshore League would really amount to something.

Hunter's Cleaners have made application to the O.A.S.A. for affiliation with that body in the Intermediate C group.

And in all probability their's will be the only one from here.

WASTE PAPER IS GREATEST NEED OF SALVAGE

Ottawa, — July 3. — "D-Day has dawned and it is the duty and privilege of every Canadian citizen to back up the boys who are progressing so splendidly in France and Italy," said Charles LaPerle, National Director of the War Salvage Campaign, recently. "One of our greatest needs right now is waste paper and paperboard," he said. "It is required for war supplies, just as much as explosives themselves and the need is greater than it has ever been before. Although Canadians have co-operated wonderfully with us in the past, I do want to emphasize that this drive shouldn't be overlooked because of any feeling that paperboard and paper isn't needed.

"All Canada thrilled to the exploits of the paratroopers who landed in France," he pointed out. "Do how many of us realize that paper parachutes are used to land urgent military supplies along with the boys, or to be dropped to them later? Paperboard containers are used to carry shells and other ammunition; in some cases they are simply thrown overboard from the lighters which have crossed the Channel and allowed to drift to our troops waiting on the beach. Paper is used to insulate electric wiring used in gun and other controls."

"Paper vests," he said, "are even used to prevent the icy winds of the North Atlantic and Channel penetrating the outer clothing of the men of the Navy, Merchant Marine and the crews of the troop landing craft."

"The problem is simple," he went on. "We just haven't got as many men working in the bush cutting wood for paper, we haven't as many men working in the paper plants, or handling processing and shipping. Our paper mills are running away behind because of the tremendously increased demand for war supplies. You need waste paper and paperboard in the manufacture of new paper and new paperboard, and the supplies which are sent overseas are lost to us because they cannot be brought back to Canada."

"The answer is simple too: We need all we can get, and I believe Canadians will see that we get it."

Poem Written By Napanee Boy In Canadian Navy

The following poem "Silent Navy" was written by Harold B. Wilson, of H.M.C.S. Cornwallis, Cornwallis, N. S., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wilson, Napanee:

SILENT NAVY

You brag of your glorious Army.
You brag of your Airforce too—
Do you ever think of the Navy
And the job they have to do?

We don't fly over your cities
Or marely with a heavy pack.
But the Navy always takes you there.
And the Navy brings you back.

We face the cold Atlantic—
The icebregs, snow and sleet.
No matter what the sacrifice
For us there's no retreat!

We are beaten by the angry sea.
Torpedoed by the Huns;
Bombed by the enemy aircraft
And blasted by their guns.

We are freezing on the upper deck,
It's terribly hot, below;
We are battered, brulsed and broken
But the convoy on must go.

So give credit to your Army
And your Airforce, when it's due,
But we'd like you to remember
You have a fighting Navy, too.

WHEN DISCIPLINE MEANS A LOT

BY WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Few soldiers go into battle without fear or nervousness. Nevertheless exceptions and rare individuals.

However, training, discipline and sense of duty are what carry troops through the tight spots. Every soldier realizes that probably every other man around him knows fear when enemy shells are falling or when they are under enemy machine-gun fire.

Overcoming fear and carrying on despite it is where courage and bravery come in. The average Canadian's natural sense of duty, nurtured by Army life and its discipline is what enables the soldier to go on with a job that may mean his life.

"The sense of danger that lives with a frontline soldier and the men with whom he fights helps foster a spirit of comradeship that becomes one of the important things in his campaign life.

Many a soldier will conceal illness and joke away a minor wound to avoid evacuation to the hospital from where, when recovered he goes to reinforcement camp while awaiting recall to the line.

The reason is fear of separation from the other fellows in his section or platoon and that he might eventually wind up in some other battalion. Regimental pride is real to the majority of the troops. Every soldier likes to think his battalion is the best in the army.

Besides that, the soldier has made true friends he understands and who understand him in his own unit. They've been through difficult times together and that solidified their friendship.

They talk about the same things, joke about the same experiences probably admire something particular in one another's character. Transplantation to a different unit would be tantamount to having to start a new little life. Until they got to know the newcomer the men of the strange section he joined might regard him as a sort of intruder as well as an unknown quantity when things are tough.

While they may be frightened if enemy machine guns open up on them from concealment, advancing troops are able to keep going forward because they've been given a particular role to perform and months of training have taught them that in the Army you do what you're told. And a job accomplished under difficulty gives satisfaction.

Furthermore, when you're scared the best thing to do is keep busy. The presence at a nervous soldier's side of another who is steadier will tend to steady the former and help him bear up. A steady soldier has the admiration of all his chums.

A nervous soldier is the object of sympathy rather than scorn, but other soldiers with him would rather see him removed to a safe place they have him remain in their presence. Nervousness is as infectious as steadiness. The steadiness or unsteadiness of officers makes a world of difference in the men under their command.

A joke will help ease a tense situation, but it has to be delivered in an off-hand fashion and be good, or be spontaneous and ridiculous enough to divert attention from the immediate problem.

When soldiers emerge successfully after a particularly rough time the tendency is to laugh it all off rather than describe it in dramatic terms.

Because they may have had to overcome real fear in the accomplishment of an act of particular distinction many deserving soldiers will wonder if they have earned decorations awarded.

The reason seems to be that bravery as the story-books tell about it bears little resemblance to what most feel really constitutes it. A soldier has difficulty recognizing bravery in himself.

Soldiers, likewise, resent rather than appreciate glowing public accounts of their exploits particularly if they are pictured as fearless, cool-headed fire-haters.

Here and there among them, there may be a man with such attributes but he is not the average soldier, who used to be a civilian, has learned to be a good soldier would like to survive the war but also would like to do his duty even if it means sacrifice of his life.

Protein Supplements For Market Hogs

(Experimental Farms News)

Protein supplements for animal feeding are now somewhat scarce and relatively high in price. For economical bacon hog production it is essential that the supplements be fed at such time and amounts that will give the maximum benefit.

The results of many weeding tests conducted in Canada show conclusively that cereal grains alone do not supply an efficient, nor the most economical ration for growing pigs. The protein content of these grains is not suited to the needs of animals that grow rapidly. To supply the deficiency, skim milk, tankage, or a commercial protein supplement is required, says R. M. Hopper, Dominion Experimental Farm, Brandon Man.

The results of a series of tests conducted at the Brandon Farm show that the greatest returns are obtained from the use of a protein supplement when it is fed in generous quantities in the creep and weaning rations and the allowance gradually reduced at the pigs develop. During the finishing period, little, if any, is required.

The feed consumption of very young pigs is from one to two pounds daily and the cost of supplying an adequate amount of protein in the ration at this time is small. Protein of the right kind and amount is a first essential in giving young pigs a good start. Well started pigs are the most profitable. Stunted pigs are costly to rear. Good feed also aids in the prevention of certain diseases and ailments that cause a high death rate.

The commercial protein supplements now available for purchase contain 35 per cent. of protein. For growing feeding and newly weaned pigs a mixture of three of chopped cereal grains and one of protein supplement is satisfactory. If sufficient milk is available to supply three or four pounds to each pound of meal fed, the supplement may safely be left out of the feed mixture. After the pigs become well started and reach a weight of forty to fifty pounds a reduction in the proportion of supplement may be commenced. The reduction should be made gradually and for pigs weighing from fifty to 100 lbs., a mixture of one of supplement to six of meal will give good results. For healthy, well developed pigs, the use of a supplement during the finishing period is optional.

Giving young pigs a good start through the use of suitable feeds is an important step in reducing production costs.

THE CANADIAN NAVY

Present Strength, About 80,000
(W.R.C.N.S. Included)
Prewar Strength About 1,700

The Royal Canadian Navy is expanding steadily from a largely protective force to a balanced navy with heavy striking power.

In January one Fleet class destroyer was commissioned with an all-Canadian crew after being refitted and converted for convoy escort and anti - submarine duties. Another will be similarly commissioned shortly to bring to six the number of used destroyers provided by the United Kingdom within a year. The first four were of the River class.

Built in 1936, the Fleet destroyer, H.M.C.S. Chaudiere, has been strengthened against ice conditions and provided with the latest anti-submarine equipment. It has torpedo tubes, depth charge throwers, an anti-aircraft battery and 4.7 gun mountings.

Within several months two new medium cruisers of the most modern type will be given to Canada by the United Kingdom as 'mutual aid in reverse.' For considerable time Canadian naval officers and ratings have been in training with the Royal Navy for cruiser operation so they can man the cruisers when they are delivered.

In addition, two Royal Navy escort aircraft carriers will be manned by Canadian officers and seamen, although the aircraft and their operational crews probably will be provided by the United Kingdom. The carriers will remain Royal Navy ships, while the cruisers and destroyers will become units of the Canadian Navy.

The two carriers are expected to begin convoy escort duties in the Atlantic in a few months and later may go to the Pacific. Pacific naval facilities at Esquimalt and Prince Rupert British Columbia, are being improved, and new machine shops are being established at Esquimalt.

Besides the escort destroyers which the Royal Navy has placed at the disposal of the Canadian Navy, four new R.C.N. Tribal class destroyers, the largest, fastest and most powerful afloat, are operating with United Nations' units. Eventually Canada will have a flotilla of eight Tribal class destroyers. The four already at sea were built in United Kingdom yards. The other four are being built in Canada.

The R. C. N. now has more than 250 combat ships and more than 450 ships of other classes — a total of more than 700. Before the war it had only 15. Its quota for naval personnel, set roughly at 80,000 probably will be reached by March 31, 1944.

No navy of modern times has equalled the rate of expansion of the Canadian Navy. In this war it has become a naval power third in strength among the United Nations.

In line with this growing strength and with the expanding functions of the navy, Canada in January sent Vice-Admiral Percy W. Nelles, chief of the naval staff, to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian flag officer there a new rank. This step followed closely the appointment of Lieutenant-General Kenneth Stuart, chief of the army general staff, to the new permanent post of chief of staff at Canadian military headquarters in London, and the transfer of Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of the air staff to the post of air officer commanding-in-chief, Royal Canadian Air Force Overseas. Air Marshal Breadner is responsible to the minister of national defence for air directly and not through the chief of the air staff.

Navy Minister Macdonald commented: "The sending of Admiral Nelles, General Stuart and Air Marshal Breadner to the United Kingdom is a sign that we mean business over there."

The shifts were arranged in view of the preparations being made in the United Kingdom for an invasion of Europe from the west. The navy felt that the senior Canadian naval officer in the United Kingdom should be an officer of high rank. Admiral Nelles will remain senior ranking naval officer and will have general oversight of Canadian naval forces overseas, although he will not be in command of them, for Canadian units will be intermingled with other allied forces.

Rear Admiral George C. Jones, vice-chief of the naval staff was appointed chief to succeed Admiral Nelles.

AGE OF UNDERGROUND WORKERS

The average age of the Danish underground worker is between 20 and 30 years. That holds true for sixty per cent of the saboteurs. Thirty-five per cent are under 30 and only five per cent are under 20. Many young people under 20 want to take part, but the leaders do not permit it on account of the risk of the death penalty for those who are caught.

Most of the participants in the underground work are needed for the illegal newspapers, hundreds of collaborators being required both for printing and distribution. The latter is carried out mainly by the older school-children.

Those under 20 have dedicated themselves to the task of irritating the Germans. They steal revolvers, puncture bicycle tires, write things on the walls and sometimes they think up something really original as when three boys of 15, eleven and twelve got hold of a roll of film and pushed it little by little under the door of a German airforce general who had just rented a luxurious apartment. When the film had been shoved under the door, the boys lit the end that remained, and when the general came home his best uniform and all his carpets were burnt. No one has been able to find the boys.

THE CANADIAN ARMY

Present Strength About 465,000
(C.W.A.C. Not Included)
Pre-war Strength About 4,500

The great wartime expansion of the Canadian Army has taken place around the small pre-war nucleus of 4,500 permanent force men.

The army overseas is made up of two corps composed of three infantry divisions, two armored divisions and two independent armored brigades, besides large numbers of ancillary or corps troops.

Canadian units have fought throughout the campaigns in Sicily and Italy as a part of the British Eighth Army. They suffered heavy casualties in the successful battle for Ortona, eastern anchor of the German defence line across Italy, in which they had an important role. Those units now in Italy are operating as a corps under Canadian command. Canadian land forces also will form a part of a group of armies under General Sir Bernard Montgomery, former commander of the Eighth Army when Europe is invaded from the west. Thus the Canadians, when fully engaged, will be fighting on two fronts.

The army comprises general service personnel, available for service anywhere in the world, and troops called up under the National Resources Mobilization Act for compulsory service in Canada and its territorial waters. By order-in-council these N.R.M.A. men may be despatched to areas outside Canada. Such troops formed a large proportion of the Canadian contingent which joined with United States forces in occupying the Aleutian island of Kiska in August 1943. The Canadians returned to Canada in January.

The army in Canada includes units of a composite formation of three brigade groups, each capable of operating independently; units engaged in coast defence and other operational duties, and overseas reinforcements undergoing advanced training in training centres and in a training brigade group in eastern Canada. The army in Canada has concentrated on training reinforcements for the overseas army and on providing defence forces for Canada so long as there is any threat of possible attack on the North American continent.

By September, 1943, the expansion stage of the home defence forces has been passed. The Channing picture of the war made possible a reorganization of the army in Canada designed to release more men for overseas service and to reduce the number of operational troops at home.

Thus from September to the end of 1943 more than 10,000 of all ranks were discharged. This number included more than 500 officers who returned to civil life because of age or medical category or because no suitable employment was available for them in their rank.

It was intended originally that under the reorganization the establishment for operational troops in North America should be reduced by about 20,000. The reorganization is continuing.

Men up to the overseas medical standards for operational duties are not being discharged, and only in exceptional cases when they can make a better contribution to the war effort in a civilian capacity are any fit men discharged.

Men of too low category for operational duties are being absorbed so far as required in less active posts in Canada for which they might be suitable; but all personnel not of category suitable for operational duties who are not required for less active posts are being discharged to resume civilian occupations and thus improve the manpower situation for essential civilian activities.'

The result of this policy is that all men fit for operational duties overseas are retained in the army and that a considerable number of lower category personnel are released and enabled to assume civilian occupations and supplement available man power.

In the case of officers, the policy is to replace the older ones gradually, as younger properly qualified and experienced officers become available to take their places.

GOVERNMENT "METAL MEDICOS" CURE WARTIME ILLS

When Canada undertook the manufacture of tanks in 1940 our industrialists ran into a problem that could easily have bogged down production. The tracks of those ponderous machines kept breaking after 300 miles or less of running. The Physical Metallurgy Research Laboratories of the Bureau of Mines were called in to help. The mileage of our tanks was increased to more than 5,000.

This instance is only one of the many which have made the operations of this important Government research branch one of the great untold stories of the war. For more than three years these "metal doctors" have been helping to iron out the multitude of wrinkles which naturally accompanied Canada's rapidly expanding industrial war effort. Today, installed in a new set of laboratories considered to be one of the finest on the North American continent, they are prepared to carry on into peacetime the activities that have helped put Canada in the forefront as a producer of high quality war equipment.

The Canadian industrial war effort that startled the world wasn't accomplished without plenty of headaches. When Canadian manufacturers large and small took on the job of producing precision built war weapons, they did so with little or no experience in this highly exacting field. Today we are making ships, guns, tanks, planes, shells and war equipment of all kinds. Almost every piece of equipment had its special metallurgical problem. In a war of steel against steel, the "metal doctors" of the Bureau of Mines played an indispensable part.

In the big, bright building where these engineers are now carrying out their constant tests and experiments, there are scores of projects going on for the purpose of improving the weapons of Canadian fighting men and their allies. Many of them, of course, will have to remain secret until after the war.

In the early days they often had to make their own equipment for carrying out special experiments. They still do, in fact, whenever war shortages threaten to delay something needed in a hurry.

One instance of spectacular results being obtained with home-made equipment was the work on aircraft control cables. Before the Bureau's laboratories went to work on the problem, the cables of our airplanes had to be changed every thirty hours of flight. The engineers built a fatigue testing machine. Using this equipment, they developed a control cable that was good for several hundred hours of flight.

Working hand in hand with Canadian manufacturers, the "metal doctors" have given their assistance in the solving of countless every-day problems. Because of a shortage of one particular metal, something else may have to be developed, or an aircraft part may have to be made lighter and stronger. A new shell or gun may require steel of several different types. The Bren gun, for instance, uses fifteen different kinds of steel in its manufacture. Such complex problems the Bureau of engineers have tackled in their stride.

When Japan's entry into the war cut off our supply of tungsten, obtained from China, and vital to the production of high-quality tool steel, the Bureau came to the rescue in a dramatic way. No large deposits of tungsten had been discovered in Canada at that time but small bits frequently cropped up with the ore in gold mines. Gathering these fragments from mines all across Canada, the Bureau engineers milled the ore in their own small refinery and managed to keep a sufficient amount of tungsten flowing to the manufacturers to tide them over the crisis. Since then quite large deposits have been found and the danger is over.

In such ways have the "metal doctors" worked quietly behind the scenes, never hesitating to push aside their microscopes and roll up their shirt sleeves to follow some particular experiment right into the industrial laboratories where tests are carried out under actual factory conditions.

Now, established in their new laboratories they are looking forward to playing an equally important part in the industrial expansion that is expected to hold Canada's place in the sun after the far is over.

TESTED RECIPES FROM FAR-OFF COUNTRIES

BY LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief, Consumer Section,
Dominion Department of Agriculture

Travelers to far off lands always bring home tales of food: of strange fruits, of native dishes, wonderfully delicious.

We can't go adventuring in other lands today, but we can bring the adventure of new dishes into our own homes.

True not all foreign dishes would appeal to Canadian palates, nor would all their ingredients be available, but often only a different combination of familiar foods or a distinctive blending of spices is required to create an unusual dish.

In the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture the home economists have recently been testing recipes from other lands. Here are some they think you'll like:

VEGETABLE RAREBIT
(West Africa)

One tablespoon fat, one tablespoon flour, one cup tomato juice, one-quarter cup chopped green onion, half teaspoon chopped fresh mint leaves, OR a pinch of dried mint, one teaspoon of chopped parsley, three-quarters teaspoon salt, one teaspoon of sugar, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one-eighth teaspoon nutmeg four teaspoons vinegar, four tablespoons grated cheese, three eggs. Melt fat and add flour. Mix thoroughly. Add tomatoes and stirring until slightly thickened, onion, mint leaves, vinegar, salt, sugar and seasonings. Cook five minutes. Set over hot water. Add cheese, stir until melted. Add well beaten eggs and stir constantly until thickened (two or three minutes). Serve on toast or crackers. Five or six servings.

VEGETABLE PATTIES
(China)

Three eggs, three cups of mixed cooked vegetables, shredded, two-thirds cup unpeeled oatmeal, two tablespoons chopped onion, one teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, two tablespoons fat.

Beat eggs, add vegetables, oatmeal, onion, salt and pepper. Mix well. Melt fat in frying pan and spread vegetable mixture in by spoonfuls. Brown on both sides. Six servings.

"Why not?"
"I'm broke."

IF rising prices and costs were allowed to keep pushing each other up, inflation would be unavoidable. That's what inflation is—a panic rise in prices—with money losing its value and confusion everywhere. To prevent inflation, a ceiling has been set on prices and profits,—wages and salaries have been controlled.

If one person demands higher prices—another higher profits—another a higher wage or salary—soon everybody would be making the same demands—demands on everyone else.

Then costs of production could not be controlled.

The ceiling could no longer be held.

Living costs would go up—

MADE IN CANADA

GENT NEED R RED CROSS SPITAL SUPPIES

nto June 29. — "The greatest in history, the invasion to lib-oppressed peoples, is on. Our re fighting valiantly, sacrificfing their lives that freedom may live. The need for hospital supplies is urgent," Mrs. J. C. Fraser, chairman Women's War Work Committee, Ontario Division of Red Cross declared, in an appeal to all workers throughout the province to keep busy throughout the summer months.

Stating that her committee was anxious to supply branches with hospital supplies quotas, she reported that shipment of hospital supplies to Great Britain, the Second Front, plus the outfitting of R.C.A.F. depots across Canada was giving Ontario large quotas in all types of these supplies. The need for knitted goods, too was urgent. "We have this week shipped every knitted article from our warehouse at the request of the National Women's War Work Committee, she said, "leaving only the smallest reserve of seamen's comforts to meet immediate requests from corvettes and other navy ships." Sweaters were still the greatest need, she pointed out.

Q. My husband is away working in another town for the summer and his landlady said she could keep his canning sugar coupons. Is this right?

A. No. As your husband will be living at home during the winter months you are entitled to his F coupons.

Q. I wish to install a hot air furnace in my duplex house. Will this be permissible?

A. If you can prove the essentiality of it you may apply to your local board or regional office WPTB for a certificate. No retailer may fill your order without your application being completed.

Q. Is there a price ceiling on spring lamb?

A. Yes, the WPTB issued a new order, effective July 3, whereby previously established ceiling prices on spring lamb and mutton were confirmed.

Q. I saw pieces of watermelon in a store recently selling for 15c each. Is this sold by weight and is there a ceiling on it?

A. Yes, watermelon is priced according to weight and comes under the jurisdiction of the WPTB ceiling on fresh fruits.

Q. My son was home on leave recently and left me some butter coupons. May I use them?

A. No. I am sorry but coupons are without value when detached from ration cards or books.

Q. A dress I bought a few weeks ago seems to be of very inferior quality, yet the price was high. Is there anything I can do about it?

A. The Standards Section of the Prices Board would be glad to have evidence of such degradation of quality as you allege. Please communicat with your nearest office of the Board and take the dress and sales slip with you.

Q. I read somewhere that customs duties and another tax are being taken off imported farm machinery. Does that mean the cost to the consumer will be decreased?

A. Yes, any reduction in laid-down costs of this imported machinery must be passed on to the consumer.

The Batttle of Germany

BY JAMES THRASHER

One of the strangest and most crucial battles in the history of warfare is going on inside Germany. The opposing "armies" are Allied bombs and the Nazi military and secret police. The "battlefield" is the German people. The prize of victory is their morale.

This is made clear in a Swiss newspaper story by a man who returned home in March after spending months in Germany and undergoing sixty air attacks in Berlin. Even before the pulverizing attacks of the last six weeks, he reported that 70 or 80 per cent. of the Nazi capital's factories were destroyed or damaged. He also disclosed that residential bombing had knocked out tens of thousands of small home workshops serving armament production.

But of equal military importance is his story of the terror of Germany's war-sick people — terror of the bombs and of the Gestapo.

"Fifty per cent of the German population is already demoralized, he writes. "It is unthinkable that the German people can bear the existing conditions for an indefinite period. People now say quite frankly that if the air offensive is further intensified a way out must be found. There can, however, be no thought of a revolution. The Gestapo and the SS are too powerful for the whole German people to dare to rise up against the National-Socialist system."

It is obvious that the air offensive has been tremendously intensified. And as we attack in growing strength, the Gestapo and the SS surely are finding that their job is also tremendously intensified. First of all there are the physical difficulties. Each attack adds thousands to the dazed and weary homeless, deprives sections of a city of light, gas and water, disrupts transportation.

But there must also be a weakening of morale. Each Allied plane over Berlin is another harbinger of German defeat. Each explosion echoes the ever emptier ring of party boasts and promises.

As late as January, the Swiss writer says, the faithful Nazis were boasting that Berlin could never be attacked by day. But the daylight raids came and party prestige must have fallen even more.

Against fear, discouragement and weariness Hitler's brutish police are fighting a grim battle, but a losing one. They are still strong, but we are stronger.

Even the Gestapo's guns cannot delay forever the German people's desperate search for "a way out."

AUSTRALIAN OUTPUT

BY J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

The story of what Australia has done and must do to supply Allied forces, particularly in the Southwest Pacific, has been placed before residents of the Commonwealth in two newspaper articles.

The Minister of Supply, John A. Beasley, took this method of informing Australians of the task facing them. He made many revelations in supplying equipment demands of Allied forces in the Southwest Pacific despite Japan's seizure of raw materials formerly obtained from Malaya and The Netherlands East Indies.

Stressing the magnitude of the job he quoted this recent statement by Prime Minister John Curtin: "I do not propose to indicate the kind of forces coming here, but it is our bounden duty to ensure that they won't have to bring with them anything within the capacity of this country to produce, for that would be a waste of transport and un-economic use of the Allies' total resources."

Beasley said that from 1940 until the end of 1943 the Supply Department placed contracts valued at £273,000,000 (about $1,342,800,000) and this year it probably would have to place 20,000 contracts worth £60,000,000.

Australia this year must provide more than 20,000,000 garments for Australian and American forces and for British troops in India and the Middle East as well as millions of blankets for India.

The country must make 1,400,000 cans to be filled with £150,000,000 worth of food for the services.

Among little-known projects Beasley mentioned cultivation of thousands of acres of flax to provide bootmakers' thread, parachute harness, canvas, fire hose, tarpaulins. Australia also must make thousands of machetes, for Allied forces to hack their way through jungles, and hunting knives.

The Supply Minister also referred to discovering and development of Australian sources of supply for rare metals on which government funds exceeding £1,000,000 had been used.

CANADIANS SHAPE VARIED OPINIONS ON BRITISH LIFE

BY DOUG. HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London. — The story of the relatives who came for the week-end and stayed three months has been reduced to trifling import by the whims of this war.

Now, unless the probable is thwarted, the longest visit one branch of the Empire family every paid another will soon have passed its climax. With the departure, of the armies of the second front the tide of Canadian invasion of the British Isles will be definitely on the wane.

The invasion started in late 1939 and grew to a mighty strength until war in the Mediterranean drew Canadian fighting men there and started the sapping process to which the assault in the west will give a final impetus.

Considering men who returned to Canada wounded or sick or for other reasons and those who have come overseas to fill the ranks, it is probable roughly 500,000 Canadians have seen the Britain they were taught to revere as children.

They have formed their own opinions, some good, some bad, and the impact of their thoughts should share strongly in shaping Canada's course of future years.

The extent to which they have been influenced by British ways is something only the years can determine. They have remained a community unto themselves here, a colony which sent its envoys through these old islands but always drew them back again to their own methods, manners and customs.

Few will remain behind in Britain when the general homeward movement begins. On the other hand, far more Britons than the 16,000 brides of Canadian servicemen will cross the Atlantic in the years after the war if immigration regulations permit. There are few Canadians in this country who don't know someone intent on taking up a new life overseas.

I guess it's up to me!"

Now that I can go I'm not going to stick around and let the other fellows do it.

Bill and Jack went over last week, and Fred's been over there a year. Now it's my chance.

It's going to take months of training before I can get fighting-fit, so I'd better get moving today.

Yes sir! I'm going now, to tell Dad and Mom that I'm on my way to sign up.

It would be false to make the flat statement that the Canadians have liked Britain these four years. Many not all of them in the ranks by any means, dislike the country and have not become accustomed to its people and its methods.

But it would be equally false to make the statement they have not liked Britain these four years. There is no knowing the depth of sincerity beneath the words of a soldier who grumbles about the country.

It depends to a great extent on the individual, on the people he meets, and the people he tries to meet. Thousands of Canadians ignore the standing offer of hospitality in homes throughout the British Isles.

They have taken to the supposedly dour, close Scots much more quickly than to the English. The Scots and Scotland they found a bit more like their kind of people, a bit more like home.

The main force of the Canadian invasion, however, has spent itself in the English South and in London. It is from the capital and the verdant, beautiful counties of Sussex and Surrey that most of their brides have come, from quaint, Tudor villages, from capricious Brighton, placid East Grinstead, aged Guildford.

Here military necessity put them, and here, for better or for worse, they have lived these four years.

TASTY DESSERTS AND SUPPER DISHES

Most women agree that desserts and supper dishes are meal planning's problem children. The Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggests two supper dishes and two desserts which proved popular with the 'tasters' who visit the department's experimental kitchen.

FARINA CRUMB DESSERT

One-third cup sugar, three tablespoons cocoa, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one cup milk, one egg, one cup cooked farina, half-teaspoon vanilla, one and one-quarter cups cake crumbs.

Combine the sugar, cocoa and salt. Gradually stir in the milk. Add the beaten egg, cooked farina and vanilla. Stir in the cake crumbs. Pour into a greased casserole or pudding dish. Bake in a moderately slow oven, 325 deg. F., for one hour. Six servings.

SPOON PUDDING

Two egg yolks, one tablespoon of sugar, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one teaspoon grated orange rind OR one-quarter teaspoon vanilla, one and one-half cups hot milk.

Beat egg yolks, add sugar, salt and flavouring. Add hot milk gradually. Cook over hot water, stirring occasionally, until mixture thickens and will coat a silver spoon. Pour into greased casserole and top with the following mixture:

Mix three tablespoons mild flavored fat, melted, half-cup sugar, two egg yolks, one-quarter teaspoon of vanilla, one-quarter teaspoon of salt, two and one-half tablespoons of flour, four egg whites.

Mix melted fat and sugar. Add egg yolks, salt and flavouring. Add flour and beat well. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour (do not spread) over custard. Set in a pan of hot water and oven poach in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., for 45 minutes. Six servings.

POTATO SECRETS

Six large potatoes, one cup of ground cooked meat, one cup of gravy or cream sauce, half-teaspoon onion juice, salt and pepper to taste, half-cup cooked carrots, finely chopped.

Wash and scrub potatoes well and remove any spots. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 deg. F until soft—about one hour. Mix meat, gravy, seasonings and carrots. Cut slice from broad sides of potatoes. Scoop out potato, leaving unbroken shells. Mash potato and add salt and pepper to taste and a little top milk. Whip until fluffy. Half fill shells with meat mixture. Pile potatoes on top. Heat in oven until potatoes are lightly browned and filling is hot. Six servings.

BAKED OMELET

Six eggs, six tablespoons water, half-teaspoon salt, pepper.

Separate yolks from whites of eggs. Beat whites until stiff, but not dry. Add water, salt and pepper to egg whites. Beat well. Fold yolks into whites. Turn into greased casserole. Set in a pan of hot water and oven poach in a moderately slow oven, 325 deg. F., until well puffed and brown — about fifteen to twenty minutes. Serve from the casserole. Six servings.

QUICKLY PREPARED RECIPES

Short cuts, quickly prepared recipes and dishes which can be made in advance, can makes meal preparation less of a chore at any time. With this idea in mind, the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggests the following recipes. The ice box potato salad is a meal in itself and the secret of its flavour lies in adding the dressing while the potatoes are still hot.

Ice Box Potato Salad

Three cups freshly cooked, hot potatoes; one-quarter cup of vinegar; one-quarter teaspoon salt; one-eighth teaspoon of pepper; one-quarter teaspoon celery salt; one-quarter teaspoon of mustard; one-quarter cup chopped pickles; half-cup chopped beef or other cold meat; half-cup cheddar cheese, shredded; half-cup celery. Cook potatoes in skins, peel and cut in cubes. Combine vinegar, salt, pepper, celery salt and mustard, heat and pour over hot potatoes. Mix well and let stand one hour. Add remaining ingredients and mix lightly. Six to eight servings.

Curry Patties

Two cups soft, stale breadcrumbs, two cups ground, cooked meat; two teaspoons of chopped onion; half-teaspoon of curry powder; half-cup gravy; one egg; salt and pepper to taste, two tablespoons fat.

Combine all ingredients except fat and mix thoroughly. Melt fat in frying pan. Drop mixture into hot pan by spoonfuls. Flatten slightly and brown on both sides. Six servings.

Cream of Vegetable Soup

Melt fat in top of double boiler. Add onion and cook over direct heat until tender. Add flour, stir until smooth. Gradually add milk and vegetable water and cook over boiling water, stirring occasionally until smooth and thickened. Add seasoning, condiment sauce and vegetables. Heat and serve, sprinkled with paprika. Makes five and one-half cups soup.

Oatmeal Bread

If loaf is to be cut in thin slices allow to cool in the pan.

Grant Increased For Indigent Patients In Ontario Hospitals

Toronto, (C.P.) — Health Minister R. P. Vivian announced last week that the Ontario Government will increase the provincial grant for indigent patients in Ontario to bring the level up to $2.75 a day, including municipal grants.

The grant per day in organized municipalities is increased from 50 to 75 cents providing the municipality has increased its grant from the present $1.75 to $2. In unorganized northern districts the provincial grant is increased from $2.35 to $2.75 per day.

Increased payments are estimated to cost the province about $200,000 annually and departmental officials said that most municipalities will increase their payments in order to obtain the higher provincial grant. The report of a special committee recently showed the cost of providing general war cares still is in excess of the combined provincial-municipal grants, he added, the average being about $3.83 per day.

During the Sunday morning sermon, a baby began to cry at the top of its voice and its mother carried it toward the door.

"Stop!" said the minister. "Your baby is not disturbing me."

The mother turned toward the pulpit and addressed the preacher: "Oh, he ain't, ain't he? Well, you're a-disturbin' him!

Quarter Million Pounds Jam, Honey For Britain Aim Ontario Red Cross

Toronto — All reports indicate a better-than-average fruit crop this year, and therefore, Red Cross and Women's Institutes jam conveners are optimistic about reaching Ontario's objective of 250 000 pounds of jam and honey for Britain This Red Cross activity, essentially Canadian, has been quietly carried on from year to year, sending jam to children's nurseries and hospitals, as well as to bombed homes in Britain. In the earliest days of the blitz, when the devoted women of the Motherland were evacuating the children, invalids, and aged, to safe and strange locations, and themselves to nights in underground shelters, the Women's Institutes in the fruit belt of Ontario approached the Red Cross to provide ways and means that they might share their abundant fruit crop with their British sisters overseas.

Red Cross provides the Institutes with standardized cases, cans, labels and transportation to Britain. Today, in numerous church kitchens throughout the province, Women's Institute members are busily engaged in the making of strawberry jam, to be followed by other fruits in season.

The amount of $2,635. to purchase factory-made jam and honey has been sent to Ontario Division from branches and Women's Institutes situated outside the fruit-growing belt, who did not find it practical to make their own jam. This sum has been used to purchase nearly 9,600 pounds of factory-made jam. Tins, cases, labels, recipes and sugar permits supplied by Red Cross have been sent to those groups who plan to make jam this year.

TRUST

If there be one, who calls you friend
In this mad rushing world,
A truthful, honest, gentle friend
With banners high unfurled—
Be proud, and cherish dearly
This prize of greatest trust,
And keep it shining clearly
Away from dirt, and dust.

If there be one, who calls you friend
In trouble seeks you out,
Be there to help him round the bend
And let there be no doubt—
That right, or wrong you're standing by,
In gloom, or sunshine, too,
Right to the end, until you die,
For that friend, who trusted you

75-Mm. Gun Vs. Nazi Rocket

BY PETER EDSON

Speaking of the horrors of future wars in a strictly Sunday supplement sense, a preview of future aerial warfare might be obtained today by staging a duel between a German Messerschmitt plane equipped with their new and much-touted rocket guns, and an American B-25 Mitchell medium bomber equipped with the new 75-mm. aerial cannon.

A good speculative guess by Army Air Force, artillery and ordnance men familiar with both weapons is that two opposing planes so armed might make a lot of noise and tear some terrible holes in the air, but that they would both miss their targets at long range, then close in and shoot it out with their machine guns. For the sad fact seems to be that while both these weapons sound potent to read about, they are still so far from perfection that today both would have difficulty in hitting the broad side of a blimp hangar door.

This is not the fault of the weapons themselves. The difficulty is that instead of being mounted on fixed positions, the weapons are mounted in airplanes travelling at from 200 to 400 miles an hour, and any deviation in the course of the plane, any movement in rough air or any uncalculated or uncompensated vibration throws off the aim. This is the same difficulty experienced with the dive bomber. The necessity of holding the dive-bombing plane on a fixed course for only 15 seconds or so before releasing the bomb makes the plane itself vulnerable to anti-aircraft fire.

United States Army Air Force and Ordnance Department have been experimenting with both airborne rocket guns and 75-mm. aircraft guns for several years. Col. Horace A. Quinn of the Army Ordnance Department was the first man in the world to demonstrate that a high-powered 75-mm. field artillery gun could be fired successfully from a plane. The first installation was completed in 1938. Colonel Quinn supervised ground tests on a B-18 Douglas medium bomber at Aberdeen Proving Grounds. In extended tests before the Air Corps Board at Elgin Field, Fla., in 1940 he operated the range finder. Later when the recoil mechanism was perfected and the new gun assembly was mounted in a B-25, Colonel Quinn acted as gunner in tests along the California coast in October, 1942. Development of a new lightweight 75 and new gun mounts for airplanes permitted final tests with pilot models in August 1943, when manufacture for the B-25 was begun.

The shortcoming of the German rocket guns mounted in pairs beneath the wings of German combat planes are perhaps even greater than those of the 75. United States ordnance men have been experimenting with rockets, too, as borne out by their development of the American anti-tank bazooka, so they know about the characteristics of these weapons.

German plane - mounted rocket guns carry a shell with an explosive charge equivalent to a five-inch projectile — larger than the 75, which is about three inches. But the range of the rocket is limited. The Germans claim 7,000 yards, but United States airmen say it is less than 1,000 yards. Its trajectory is extremely high. Its velocity is at first slow, but it gains speed as the rocket discharge delivers more momentum. It is therefore not as accurate as a high velocity shell.

A rocket shell lobbed into the centre of a close formation of bombers at short range is, however, nothing to laugh off. Its high explosive charge throws pieces of jagged metal in all directions and they will tear holes in anything they are lucky enough to hit.

But the rocket's disadvantages make it possible to overcome its threat. The rocket carriages slow down the plane by as much as 50 to 75 miles an hour in order to aim a target for opposing planes. Pilots in fighter and bomber planes can, and do, bail out when rockets have been fired at the plane is throttled and made to fly off combat and so make it easy for machine guns. A single rocket fired for open formations has only a minimum effective range.

Plane-borne rockets are, no doubt, to be improved. But at the present time the possibilities for development of the rocket seem to be greater.

NAPANEE COUNCIL TURNS DOWN TENDER FOR DUNDAS PAVING

Only One Tender Considered Too High

Mayor Hall presided over a special meeting of the Town Council, on Monday evening, called for the purpose of receiving tenders for the repairing of Dundas Street pavement, from the western entrance to the town, eastward to the C. N. Railway bridge.

Only one tender was received and that was from the H. J. McFarland Construction Co. The amount of their tender was $14,000.

About ten years ago W. P. Noonan, district engineer for the Ontario Department of Highways, together with another engineer, from the Department, was in Napanee and made a survey of the Dundas Street pavement and an estimate of the probable cost of the immediate necessary repairs. They estimated that cost of the repairs should not exceed $8,000.00 at the most. One half of this cost would be borne by the Ontario Government.

The opinion of the members of the Council was that the tender, as submitted by the H. J. McFarland Co., was away too high and the following resolution was introduced and passed:—

"That the tender of the H. J. McFarland Construction Co. be not accepted, and that the cheque for $500 accompanying the tender, be returned and that a copy of the tender be sent to Mr. Noonan."

M. P. Graham, town assessor, presented a detailed report of the proceedings of the convention of assessors which was held in Toronto recently. The report was ordered received and fyled.

A copy of this report will be found in another column of this issue.

VICTOR JONES, POMONA, CALIF. ON WRECKED TRAIN

Victor Jones, Pomona, California, who recently spent several days in town, the guest of his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Scott, was a passenger on the Santa Fe streamliner which was wrecked on Tuesday, July 4th in Arizona.

Mr. Jones was on the most badly wrecked car of the 12 coaches which were hurled off the track at a high speed, but fortunately escaped injury. He assisted in removing the bodies of two men who were killed and a fatally injured woman. He said he was thrown around and jolted considerably before the crumpled car settled down. The coach in which he was a passenger was next behind the baggage car, and was telescoped into the side and wheels of the engine.

Mr. Jones had been in Canada attending the Convention of the Canada Life Assurance Company in Toronto. He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Manly Jones, Napanee.

NAPANEE ASSESSOR REPORTS TO COUNCIL ON PROV. CONVENTION

Provincial Association Advocates Appointment of County Assessor

Napanee, July 10th, 1944.

The Mayor and Council,
Town of Napanee.

Gentlemen:—

Following your instructions I attended the Convention of the Association of Assessing Officers of Ontario which was held at Toronto on June 21st, 22nd, 23rd, and beg leave to report as follows:

I attended the meetings of the Executive which were held on the evening of the 20th, and at the close of the Convention.

The papers given during the sessions of the Convention were most interesting and instructive and the discussions which followed covered a wide field and were of interest to all the Assessors present.

There was a large attendance of Assessors and Municipal representatives from all parts of the Province and during the Convention Mr. Gray, Deputy-Minister of the Department of Municipal Affairs, explained the amendments to the Assessment Act which were passed at the last Session of the Provincial Legislature.

Delegates to the Convention were requested to write out any questions touching Assessment which they would like answered and place them in the question box. There were numerous questions asked and Mr. Gray answered these questions on the last day of the Convention. These questions revealed many of the problems which interest Assessors and the answers made by Mr. Gray were most informative.

Possibly most interest was in connection with the experiences of those Assessors who had been appointed County Assessors.

Four of the larger Counties in the Province have appointed County Assessors and these men have been working since the first of the year and their experience to date was very interesting.

The County of Essex, one of the larger Counties, with a population in Townships, Towns and Villages of approximately 150,000 appointed a County Assessor and the importance of this County may be more fully appreciated when its population is compared with the County of Lennox and Addington with a population of approximately 18,000.

Another County to appoint a County Assessor is the County of Gray with a population of 70,000 in Townships, Towns and Villages of approximately 44,000.

The Assessment Act provides that any County may appoint a County Assessor, subject to the approval of the Department of Municipal Affairs. The duties of the County Assessor would be making uniform the methods of preparation of the Assessment Rolls in the several Municipalities within the County and ascertaining whether the valuations made by the Assessors in each municipality bear a just relation, one to the other.

It should be noted that Counties are not compelled to make such an appointment and the Counties which have made such appointment have done so of their own free will. The County Councils of these Counties apparently reached the conclusion that something had to be done to make Assessments more equitable and uniform within the boundaries of their Counties.

From information gathered at the Convention from the presently appointed County Assessors it would appear that there had been considerable opposition to such a move from certain sections of the people but as the County Assessors met and discussed the question with Municipal Councils and the citizens generally became better informed this opposition largely disappeared as the results strived for will be to see that every property, including lands and buildings, will be uniformly assessed as compared with any other property having regard to value of location, value of different types of land, value of buildings as they add to the value of the land, distance of such lands from a satisfactory market and all other considerations which have a bearing on the value of such properties.

It would appear to be the policy of the Department of Municipal Affairs and the Assessors Association, to educate the Municipal Councils and the people generally, to the necessity of equalizing the assessment of Counties on a uniform and fair basis and not to force the Counties to appoint such County Assessors by mandatory legislation. As more Counties take advantage of the present Legislation it is felt that as a result of the experience derived and the results attained, that other Counties will take similar steps and in a reasonable time all Counties within the province will come under this plan of Assessment.

There is a tremendous amount of work involved in this plan of assessment as every property has to be carefully examined and fully described on the Assessment Field Sheets. When all this data has been compiled then it is the duty of the County Assessor to direct the Assessors of the whole County so that the same rules or the same yard stick, as it is sometimes called, will be applied uniformly throughout the County.

It was pointed out that in a large County like Essex, it would probably take at least three years to complete the work. This will involve a considerable initial expenditure, but once the work is properly done the Assessors for succeeding years will have a simplified job as they will be only required to record such changes as may take place from time to time, such as new buildings, alterations to present buildings changes of ownership, changes in tenants and so on, and the tax payer will have assurance that he is fairly assessed with all other property in the County. Once this plan is worked out there will be no need for Equalization Courts.

The Department of Municipal Affairs is planning to conduct schools for Assessors in each County as soon as the details can be worked out and the conditions of the times will permit. These schools will be for the purpose of instructing Assessors in the proper methods of carrying out assessments on an equitable and uniform basis and by this plan a sound assessment will be finally arrived at throughout the Province.

The opinion was expressed that while some Counties were well represented at the Conventions yet in the case of a number of Counties the representation is not what might be desired and efforts will be made to bring to the attention of the latter mentioned Counties the desirability of sending their Assessors to the Convention as many points of interest are always coming up and new amendments to the Assessment Act are being passed each year and it is both desirable and necessary that Assessors keep themselves posted as to these changes and know exactly what they mean.

I wish to thank the Council for having been given the opportunity of attending this Convention of Assessors.

Mark P. Graham, Assessor,
Town of Napanee

GREAT LOSS TO NAPANEE IN SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. JACK McPHERSON

Death Came Unexpectedly After Few Hours Illness

A serious loss was suffered by his family and friends, in the employees of The Gibbard Furniture Shops and in the Town of Napanee, in the sudden and unexpected death on Saturday afternoon, July 8th at Kingston General Hospital, of Mr. Jack McPherson, President of The Gibbard Furniture Shops, at the age of 49 years.

Mr. McPherson was taken ill during the early hours of Saturday morning and was removed to the Kingston General Hospital about 7 o'clock a.m. His death occurred shortly before three o'clock the same day.

Although still a comparatively young man, Mr. McPherson had had a long experience in the furniture business. His parents died when he was a young boy and at the age of fourteen years he started work with the McLaglan Furniture Company in Stratford. In 1920 the late George Gibbard, the then President of The Gibbard Furniture Shops, brought him to Napanee as Sales Manager of the firm. In that capacity he rendered valued assistance in promoting the Gibbard Furniture Company, until its products became nationally known.

In 1930, following the death of Mr. George Gibbard, Mr. McPherson went to Montreal to assume the position of general sales manager of Simmons Limited, which position he held until January, 1941, when he purchased the assets of The Gibbard Furniture Shops Limited, and became president of the company.

Since returning to Napanee, Mr. McPherson completely modernized the Gibbard factory and extended the business until it now employs the record number of 250 men and women, engaged in the manufacturing of fine furniture and on war contracts with the greatest production in the company's history.

Mr. McPherson showed a sincere interest in the well-being of his employees. He had many faithful men with the plant for their welfare and comfort and succeeded in creating a splendid employer-employee relationship.

In 1943 he purchased the assets of the Lennox Lumber Company and has since operated the Company as a subsidiary of The Gibbard Furniture Shops.

Mr. McPherson took a great pride in and personal interest in his beautiful home on Percy Hill where he had improved the grounds, and where he spent many hours among his flowers. When he lived in Napanee before going to Montreal, he was an active member of St. Andrew's United Church, of which he was a member of the Board of Managers. He was a charter member of the Napanee Rotary Club, but had not rejoined the Club since returning to the town. He was a Past President of the Furniture Manufacturers Association of Canada and was a member of the Mount Stephen Club in Montreal.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Janet Roffey, one daughter Mary Catherine, at home, and one son sub-Lieutenant Bruce R. McPherson, R.C.N.V.R., Charlottetown P. E. I., and by three sisters and three brothers, Miss Annie and Miss Mary McPherson, of Stratford, Mrs. McLachlin, Toronto, Dr. Thomas McPherson, Victoria, B.C., Richard McPherson, Washington, D.C., and Walter McPherson, Stratford.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Dr. A. J. Wilson, Editor of The United Church Observer, Toronto, former minister of St. Andrew's Church, Napanee assisted by Archdeacon R. J. Dumbrille, rector of St. Mary Magdalene's Church, Napanee. Mr. Dumbrille lived in Napanee for the greater part of his ministry in

WATCHING THE WIND

The Dominion Government must be watching the political breezes fairly carefully these days. Prime Minister Hon. W. Mackenzie King has promised a general election before July 1st, 1945. Just when it will be held depends to a large extent on what happens in the Provinces. That is why the political meteorological service in Ottawa must be busy charting the political air currents. Saskatchewan has recently had an election. The results can give the present Government little comfort. Two other election campaigns are now in full swing—Alberta and Quebec. In Alberta the the Social Credit Party has been in power for nearly ten years. Whether it will be able to win the support of the public for another term is in the lap of the gods. Apart from the Social Credit plank in the platform, which it was never able to implement, the Government has given the Province good service. The loss of the former leader, Aberhart, by death, may have some affect on the result.

The story in Quebec is quite different from that in Alberta. In Quebec, the Government, while it has some outstanding achievements to its credit, is not appealing to the public altogether on its record. At least, that is a fair assumption to make on the basis of Premier Godbout's reference, on Sunday, to the Anti-Conscription policy of the King Government. The Liberal Government in Quebec is backed solidly by the Dominion Liberal Party. In view of the most recent pronouncement of the Progressive Conservative Party in favour of an all-out manpower law, it is out of the question that they will make much headway in Quebec. As for the newer parties, they, too, will be opposed by all the organized power of the Liberals, and will probably not get very far. The Godbout Government will, in all likelihood, be returned.

Even if Quebec return a solid Liberal vote, there is little in that to give the Dominion forecasters much to come and go on. A solid Liberal Quebec may indeed go a long way towards throwing the votes of the other Provinces in direct opposition to Quebec. Such a result is to be deplored. It would be tragic in the extreme if the same results as recorded in the plebiscite should be reflected in the general election—with the whole of Canada outside Quebec, viting one way and Quebec voting another. Such a condition might go far to destroying the whole fabric of our Confederation.

The political world in Quebec, therefore, is not quite so accurate a forecast of what will happen in a general election, as Alberta. And no doubt, the results of the forthcoming vote in that Province will be carefully analyzed by the Federal Liberal stalwarts as they reach for some trend that would indicate an opportune time for a general appeal. Up to the present time, tests of public opinion in recent provincial elections, do not give the present regime much encouragement.

THE COMMUNITY MOURNS

Seldom, if ever, has there been such consternation and universal sorrow as that with which the news of the sudden and unexpected passing of Jack McPherson, on Saturday, was received in the town. Without warning he was stricken with a heart seizure in the morning, and was taken to the Kingston General Hospital. Placed under an oxygen tent, he failed to respond to the treatment and passed away in the afternoon.

Mr. McPherson though a young man, held a central place in hearts and affection of the people of the community. He was loved by all classes and all ages. His genial manner, attractive personality and his genuine interest in people, won the loyalty and devotion of his staff and the confidence of all with whom he came in contact.

He was an alert, keen business man. Within a comparatively short time he had rehabilitated The Gibbard Furniture Shops and re-established the business as the most important industry in the town. Mr. Wilson, Editor of The United Church Observer ,speaking at the funeral service, voiced the opinion of all who knew him, when he said: "Mr. McPherson was not an ordinary business man. He was a business man who refused to be made selfish and sordid by the process of making money. He had a vision of what an industry should mean as a social utility—an instrument for bringing together natural resources and the needs of society, a place for the development of co-operation, recreation, pleasure and enjoyment. That was his vision, that was his task. To that end his wide business experience, his accurate economic judgment, and his desire for the welfare of others, forged ahead."

Mr. McPherson laboured long and hard for the Town of Napanee. He was a public-spirited citizen of the finest type. There can be no doubt but that he carried a heavy load, heavier than was apparent to the casual observer. The long hours, the constant expenditure of nervous energy finally took its toll.

He has left a lasting memory of public service which will be a constant inspiration to other leaders in business and civic life.

A TERRIBLE WASTE

Tuesday's papers carried a Canadian Press dispatch from New Westminster, B.C., which portrays a situation of the most wanton, ruthless destruction of valuable goods which we have seen in a long time. The dispatch was as follows:

"B. W. Simpson, of New Westminster, released for publication yesterday, a letter he received from his daughter at Whitehorse, Y.T., telling of destruction of U. S. supplies in that area.

"The letter said, in part: 'I was out to a camp last night north of Whitehorse. I saw a place they call Salvage Post. It is a barracks between two and three city blocks long, packed with winter clothes, overshoes, parkas, pure wool blankets, comforters, chairs, office desks, and almost everything you could imagine.

'So help me, God, they stacked them up, poured gasoline over them, set them on fire. Guards stood around with fixed bayonets so nobody could get anything.

'Several of the boys around told me of cases where they buried two or three trucks in holes and covered them over with steam shovels'."

It is understandable that at Dunkerque, guns, trucks and military equipment would have to be destroyed to prevent them getting into the hands of the enemy. But that such wanton destruction as that which the letter describes is taking place in our country, is unforgivable. Here we are struggling along on tires that are a constant danger, saving scraps of this and that to help the war effort, while huge quantities of the most valuable goods are being wantonly burned or buried. It makes rather said reading in the light of the demands that are made for saving, and the constant appeals for conservation.

Prices of Honey Under New Order

Ceiling prices for honey in the new order which came into effect on June 26 give producers a higher return for No. 1 white honey than for other grades. In sales of bulk honey at wholesale, this price difference is one cent per pound, with No. 1 white honey price half a cent higher than the 1943 highest price for non-pasteurized honey. In direct sales to consumers, a producer is allowed the retailer's mark up.

The new order divides Canada into two zones. Zone 1 takes in the honey production areas of British Columbia, the Maritimes and that part of Quebec east and north of the counties of Compton, Richmond, Drummond Yamaska, and Maskinonge, and north of the southern boundary of the county of Ashtbi. All the rest of Canada is in zone 1. Highest prices at which any person may sell at wholesale, in bulk, any honey produced in zone 1 is 13 cents a pound for No. 1 white honey, and 12 cents a pound for any other honey, f.o.b. the seller's shipping point. Bulk honey produced in zone 2 and sold at wholesale to a buyer in that zone can sell at one cent higher to make the selling price approximately the same as the delivered price of shipments brought in from areas of higher production in zone 1.

The order allows one and one-quarter cents per pound to processors to cover the cost of pasteurization and granulating. This allowance is not available for dark honey.

THE WEAVER

Life weaves a mosaic pattern
Of many different threads,
No two designs seem just alike
In brilliant gold, and reds;
For some the pattern's always bright
For others, black as night;
But if you trace it to the end,
And your design's not right—
Go back to the beginning
Find out where you went wrong
Have patience to unravel,
Mistakes that spoil your song.
Perhaps the early pattern
Shows weakness of clear thought.
Or just a little lacking
In the way that you were taught;
Sometimes it's bright, sometimes it's black,
Or just a little blue;
Each thread has its own meaning
For the tangles, and the hue—
To make your work the harder,
And to see you do what's right;
So that in the eyes of man you stand,
A softly glowing light.

THE LONG LIVING OAK

There are nearly 300 varieties of oak trees, and their leaves are of many shapes. The common oak with its wavy leaves, the one we all know, has been named the Hercules of the Forest. It can live as long as 1,500 years and is more attacked by insects than any other tree. Over 1,500 insects feed on the oak.

The green tassels we see on the tree in May are the male flowers; the acorn comes from the smaller female flowers.

DEEP-SEA DENIZENS EACH HAVE THEIR PECULIAR SOUNDS

At a naval laboratory at Beaufort, N.C., certain peculiar noises, which had been conjectured to come from submarines in the neighborhood, have been investigated and the result has rather surprised some of the investigators.

They have discovered that most of these peculiar sounds come from fish. One of the fish is called the toad fish, and it has a voice which possesses the intensity of a steamboat whistle.

Another, the croaker, when caught, makes such a loud noise that it can be heard through twenty feet of water. Another, the "drum fish," drums so loudly that it sounds like a heavy thumping on the bottom of a boat.

This information is being supplied to Navy men to enable them to distinguish between these sounds and those made by an enemy submarine.

The Role Of General Maxime Weygand

BY WAVERLY ROOT

When I read June 12 in a dispatch from that testing ground for trial balloons, Switzerland that Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander - in-chief of the French armies at the time of their defeat in 1940, had been "shot while attempting to escape" from the Koenigstein prison camp where Germany holds more than a hundred French generals, I was immediately skeptical. The reader seemed to be invited to believe that Weygand had simply been executed, and that the suggestion that he had been "shot while attempting to escape" was but means the Nazi were using to hide that fact.

But my own suspicion was that this story was being used to implant in the mind of public opinion the impression that Weygand was considered particularly inimical to them by the Germans, in order to build up his reputation with the Allies. Rather suspected that he would turn up somewhere again; and I thought his captors perhaps counted on the illogicality of the human mind to retain that impression of Weygand as representing the exact antithesis of Hitlerism after the incident on which it was based his presumed execution by them, had turned out to be false.

To-day, from another fertile field for German - planted rumors, Madrid, there is another report about Weygand — he is said to be "somewhere in France, helping to organize the resistance movement into greater strength." This story even maintains the anti-German impression created by the first report without any sacrifice to logic; for this time it is noted that "French officers imprisoned at Koenigstein were told by Germans that he had been shot while attempting to escape." The suggested implication now seems to be that perhaps Weygand actually did escape, and the Germans covered up by telling his former fellow-prisoners that they had shot him in the attempt.

But I am as skeptical about escapes from Koenigstein, which has given up at least two French generals (Giraud and Prioux) in extremely auspicious circumstances, as I am about Weygand's representing the antithesis of Fascism. As for believing that Weygand could possibly be accepted by the French resistance movement—well, that is something which no one familiar with his record in 1940 could believe.

The French underground is thoroughly familiar with that record.

One of the biggest arguments when the post - war examination of the responsibility for France's military defeat begins will be over whether Marshal Petain or General Weygand is more directly to blame for France's military and political defeat and, if actual treason were behind it, which was the greater traitor. A great many of the most informed observers think that the major responsibility was Weygand's.

It was Weygand who tried to stampede the cabinet at Tours into surrendering a week earlier than it did by telling the ministers untruthfully that the Communists had seized Paris and established a government there.

It was Weygand who failed to use certain forces at his disposition against the Germans, giving as an explanation that he had to save them in case he found it necessary to suppress disorders created by Frenchmen! It was Weygand who let the soldiers in the Maginot Line remain there after the armistice instead of ordering them to withdraw, so that they were surrounded and made prisoners by the Germans — half a million of them.

Before he has been called back to France, Weygand had built up the strong French Near East Army in Syria — and attempted to persuade the French Government to let him use it to attack Russia from the south! After the armistice Weygand seems to have made a secret trip to Syria, to help effect the decision that this army should not join the British. On this last point I have been unable to obtain confirmation, but those familiar with the negotiations that went on at this critical moment believe it to be true.

Beside the many accusations which can be made against Weygand's conduct in 1940, two points might be placed in defense of his integrity. One is that the Germans refused to accept him as negotiator of the armistice terms ,and the other is that as commander of the North African armies he has long been considered as the man who kept the Germans out of France's North African empire.

These two points are not necessarily inconsistent with the theory that Weygand lost the war, either through unnecessary defeatism, or deliberately as the result of a secret understanding with the Germans. In the second case, particularly, it would be understandable that the Germans determined to double cross the Frenchmen whom they had hoodwinked into giving them the victory, would not want to discuss the armistice terms with a man who knew how they had won. It would also be understandable that Weygand, realizing that he had been double crossed, might then have resorted to holding North Africa against the men who had tricked him.

For that matter, it is even possible to wonder whether he was not holding North Africa from moving to the side of deGaulle and the Allies, rather than defending it against the Germans.

And even if the latter view of his actions is exact it does not follow that a French Fascist is any more admirable because he desires to hold the spoils of his Fascism for his own living instead of turning it over to the rival outfit.

All of this, however, while it would explain why the story that Weygand is working with the underground is hard to swallow, does not give any motive for a possible flight escape from Koenigstein, followed by the attempt to make it appear that Weygand is now in the resistance movement.

The motive may be found in certain little known facts. One is that the French industrialists who backed Petain considered as long ago as 1941 the possibility that Petain might die or become so completely discredited that he would be unable to save them by his influence with the Allies in case of a United Nations victory.

They decided at that time to make Weygand the successor of Petain, if necessary.

Another significant detail is that certain American circles which desired to find someone who could be supported as French chief of state against deGaulle, the name of Weygand received some consideration. A natural result of close American cooperation with him during his services as generalissimo in North Africa. He might therefore be thought capable of getting Allied support if he could be made to appear to be connected with those forces of resistance whose authority General Eisenhower was told he might recognize, regardless of whether they were linked with the main de Gaullist underground or not.

It is not impossible given Germany's long-range planning and meticulous preparation to meet all future possibilities, political as well as military unfavorable as well as favorable, that Weygand has been purposely built up as anti-German non-Vichy Frenchman ever since 1940 for just such a situation as this, so that he might be able to step to the fore and carry on the reactionary politics for which both Berlin and Vichy stand as a last hope, in conditions like those which exist today.

Whatever the exact relations of the Germans with Weygand now may time is certain, for the success of their policy for the future they would much prefer to see him dead as he often named long before the war as a possible totalitarian dictator for France, at the head of the French state, than deGaulle. If they thought the only alternative to a deGaulle triumph in France would be support of Weygand, they would be capable of doing much more than simply allowing him to escape from Koenigstein to produce that result.

'RE-EDUCATING GERMANY'

BY EMMET CROZIER
Special to Montreal Star and New York Herald Tribune

"Re-educating Germany" as it is Gross points out in the July of "New Europe" has become a catch phrase, a new means for solving the tragic German problem, a new panacea for post-war planners.

According to one earnest group thinkers, a thoughtful young German school books, authors, rearrangement of the liberal point in German universities, wholesome inoculation of the with democratic culture will solve of our postwar problems on the tinent.

Mr. Gross a leading figure Central and Eastern European ing Board, points out that the blem is not quite as simple as

The process of re-educating writes, has two aspects, one tive, the other punitive. The re-education is focusing if that essary only for the relatively group within those borders the situation is reversed when a large proportion of the lation has to be re-educated. Germany very large numbers population have been infected Nazi theory.

Enumerating only the groups Mr. Gross lists those involved in the system of

1. The National Socialist the Arbeiterpartei the Nazi (6,000,000); (2) the Storm Abteilung (Nazi Storm Troopers 3,000,000 to 4,000,000); (3) The Gestapo; (4) the Waffen Staffeln (The Elite Storm Troopers 000 to 1,000,000); (4) the Deutsch Preuds (the Nazi Cultural Organization) and (5) the Hitler Jugend Nazi Youth Organization 8,000,000; (6) the army and 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 (7) the administration, judges, etc.

There is a good deal of duplication in the figures. Most of the administrators in the last classification, for instance are Nazi party members. However, the total is sufficiently impressive to bear out Gross's contention that when think of re-education we must in terms of millions of people not just a small group of fanatics.

Concerning the qualitative of the problem, he writes:

"We know how difficult it is re-educate a 12-year old delinquent he must be removed from his old vironment and put under new conditions, and the whole world useless if he returns to his surroundings. How far is a Nazi party member and how much time it take to re-educate a Nazi? first of all it is difficult to consider re-education of common criminals the people responsible for enormous and mass killings all over Europe and their numbers are considerable have to be punished and not educated.

"As to the re-education of the indoctrinated people, we have only example which enables us to judge the possibilities of Germany after education by the Germans who lived ers in the U.S.A. and Great Britain How do they behave and do they change in a country free from the and compulsion? Gerhardt Seger visited some German prisoners camps in the United States and an interview in the Baltimore Sun he states that he found that in places prisoners have organized a Gestapo and have killed those prisoners who have shown anti-Nazi opinions. Brigadier General Henry Pearson, commanding general of Fort Dix declared that the majority of the prisoners of war there are steeped in Nazi traditions and believes that if given the chance they will fight against Americans if given the opportunity."

Mr. Gross tells of meeting a British flyer in Canada who told him: "From the prison camps of Canada and the U. S. A. will come those fellows (German prisoners) are better fed than at home. They don't suffer any hardships the German at home in Germany do these days of bombardment. I think only about revenge and my brother, you are kind to all of them told me), because you are we are going to win this war and your country."

Despite these disheartening manifestations of the Nazi mind, the writer points out that "if Germany is defeated and the war-bewitched military class of the Junkers is broken with an iron fist, and economic and political steps are taken to prevent a repetition of an pan-German revival; if a deep social change takes place, with a true change of the governing elite, then there are possibilities of an educational change. A natural result of close American cooperation with him during his services as generalissimo in North Africa. He might therefore be thought capable of getting Allied support if he could be made to appear to be connected with those forces of resistance whose authority General Eisenhower was told he might recognize, regardless of whether they were linked with the main de Gaullist underground or not.

It is not impossible given Germany's long-range planning and meticulous preparation to meet all future possibilities, political as well as military unfavorable as well as favorable, that Weygand has been purposely built up as anti-German non-Vichy Frenchman ever since 1940 for just such a situation as this, so that he might be able to step to the fore and carry on the reactionary politics for which both Berlin and Vichy stand as a last hope, in conditions like those which exist today.

INVASION MAKES MORE URGENT THE SAVING OF CIVILIAN GAS!

A Message to Canadian Motorists

THE invasion of Europe has thrown a vast and critical burden upon the petroleum resources of the United Nations.

In the first eight days of the campaign alone Allied aircraft flew 56,000 sorties. Many thousands of oil-burning warships and landing barges are shuttling ceaselessly across the Channel. Tanks, trucks, jeeps, mobile artillery, ambulances, by the thousands, are in action.

The driving power behind all this activity is petroleum – gasoline and fuels drawn from a dwindling crude oil supply. But—there is only so much oil. If existing supplies are to prove adequate, the most stringent economy of gasoline and fuel oil must be practised here at home.

Canada is able to produce only 15% of her own gas and oil needs. The remainder must be imported from the common pool of the United Nations and the bulk of this is shipped here by tankers. Critical manpower is needed to produce our gasoline and oil. Precious lives and precious ships must be risked to deliver it to our shores.

Invasions, and the difficulties of supply and transportation are not our only problems. Right here in Canada gas and oil are needed in enormous quantities for vital war purposes. The Commonwealth Air Training Plan has consumed as much as 548,000 gallons in a single day. Canada's Navy – expanded since war began from 15 ships to 650—consumes over 2,150,000 gallons every week. Army training, war plant operation, food production, essential trucking – all are huge consumers of gasoline and petroleum products.

Gasoline is ammunition – ammunition of which we have all too little. To waste a gallon of it is a crime against our fighting men.

HOLDEN OF DESERONTO STILL EXPANDS THE SALE

It would take over 100 of our worlds to equal the size of the Planet Jupiter. It would take over 1,000 Jupiters to equal the size of our Sun. It would take over a million of our Suns to equal the size of Scorpii or Hercules, the two largest stars we know of.

One Moon around Jupiter is almost the size of this Earth and is not visible to the naked eye. It is doubtful if the people on Jupiter can see this world with the naked eye, because we are so small.

It seems strange that a world so small as ours is would produce such tyrants as Hitler and his horrid brood. If we want to live in peace and hermony we must eliminate the dictators.

It does not follow that because this Earth is so small our bargains are small, because some of them are on the same scale as Jupiter.

Ice Boxes, $8.00; Bed and Springs, $4.00; Sewing Machine, $12.00, and scores of others as great, or greater. We have two large halls packed full of furniture, stoves, etc., that we are selling to make room for bigger and better bargains. Part of your patronage is cordially solicited. 28a

NEW BOOKS AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

They Shall Not Sleep — Stowe

This is not only great war reporting, but also a passionate and moving discussion of the peace that may or may not come — based upon what Stowe saw and learned in Burma, India, China, and Russia — written at least, without fear of foreign censorship.

Needles and Pins — Duncan

The American woman's complete sewing book. This is an excellent guide to sewings and sewing. Needles and Pins is clear and simple.

"D" Day — Gunther

This is John Gunther's first personal book. Here he tells the story of what happened before and after 'D' Day, the day set in advance for the opening of an operation. This is a unique book, for Gunther has an inimitable faculty for meeting important people and seeing important things. Above all, he has the ability to make everything come alive, and make the reader feel that he, too, has actually been on the spot.

The Home Medical Book— Copeland

Cuts Burns! Bruises! Falls! These are home emergencies that occur every day. Don't let them get you panicky. Learn what to do before the doctor comes and be prepared to save a life or weeks of unnecessary illness. Doctors are at a premium these days and every home should be equipped to handle everyday accidents and common illnesses.

Canada After The War — Brady and Scott

Studies in political social and economic policies for post-war Canada. It is edited by Alexander Brady and F. R. Scott and a group of experts in the fields of economics, politics, agriculture, industry, social planning and international affairs, who have presented the problems in their respective fields and offer their reasoned suggestions for the solution of these problems.

The Navy Hunts The CGR 3070 — Thompson

The epic story of the yacht Zaida, lost on Atlantic anti-submarine patrol and found again after one of the greatest searches in American naval history.

Alaska and the Canadian North-West — Griffin

The story of the opening up of North America's last frontier, of what is being achieved to-day under the impact of war, and what can be achieved to-morrow. It is potentially as important to North America in the Twentieth Century as the opening up and development of the West was in the last century.

Winter Studies and Summer Rambles in Canada — Jameson

What Russia Wants — Joesten

Russia's war aims hold no mystery. There is nothing enigmatic about her foreign policy. The Russian riddle is of our own making — this book helps to undo it.

Little Norway (in pictures)

This is an outstanding collection of photogrographs and an excellent historic record presented to our library as a gift.

Spearhead — Brophy

A magnificent and thrilling novel. Spearhead tells the story of the men of one subsection, of their first successful landing on the Norwegian coast; of a later small but dramatic-packed raid on the French coast; and a final big-scale descent on a French port.

Action In the North Atlantic — Gilpatric

A vivid human story of the men in the United States Merchant Marine who man the life lines of the United Nations. But all is not grim drama in this rousing story. Gilpatric has caught the full flavour and robust humour of the sea.

JUVENILE SOFTBALL LEAGUE

During the past weeks two games were played in the Junior Softball League, with Culhane and Huffman coming out on top.

The game on Tuesday night was between Culhane's and Roffey's teams the former winning by the close score of 7 to 5. Culhane's were at bat first and collected two runs, but the lead was of short duration as Roffey's got four runs. In the second frame Culhane's were out one, two, three, while Roffey's collected one more run, giving them a commanding lead. Culhane settled down, however and blanked Roffey for the rest of the game, while Culhane added five more runs making it 7 to 5 in favor of Culhane. Both teams were short of men and had to use players from the other teams. The line-ups were:

Roffey — Harten p, Sills c.f., Roffey 1b B. Huffman c, Reynolds 3b, Munroe 1.f., Schaenhorn r.f., Butcher 2b, Yake s.s.

Culhane — Blakely 3b, Breault 2b, B. Perry p, Barker 1b, Cooper c.f., Clark s.s., T. Huffman c, Fitchett r.f., Brady 1.f.

The game between Culhane and Huffman, played on Thursday night, was not up to standard, the score being 21 to 13. Errors accounted for many runs and in the seventh innings Huffman collected eleven runs. The attendance at these games has not been very good and a little encouragement for the boys would be appreciated and may have a tendency to produce a better brand of ball.

The line-ups for this game were:

Huffman — B. Huffman c.f., Blakely s.s., G. Clark 1b, Sladdin 1.f., Elliott 3b, McLellan c, Sills p, Munroe r.f., Turner 2b

Culhane's team were short of men and had to play with eight men — Breault was on 2nd base, T. Huffman c, Perry p, Cooper c.f., Barker 1b, Clark 3b, Yake s.s., Green r.f.

League Standing

	P	W	L	P.C
Huffman	3	3	0	1.000
Culhane	4	2	2	.500

In Loving Memory

GARRISON — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Mr. Charles H. Garrison, who passed away one year ago July 18th, 1943.

Always so true, unselfish and kind,
A beautiful life that came to an end.
He died as he lived everyone's friend.
Our hearts cannot tell what to say —
Our hearts cannot tell how we miss him — God alone knows how we miss him
In a home that is lonesome to-day.
Lovingly remembered by
28a WIFE and FAMILY.

KIRKPATRICK — In memory of John Kirkpatrick, who passed away July 17th, 1943, at Maribank.

He is gone but not forgotten
And as dawns another year
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of him are always near.
Days of sadness will come over us,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.
Ever remembered by WIFE,

Weekly War Work Meeting

Because the Legion Room was being redecorated last week, the I. E. L. Chapter, I.O.D.E. were unable to hold the weekly war work meeting. Two more quilts have been thankfully received from the Churchwomen's Guild, St. John's Anglican Church, Morven, to be sent to British Clothing. Quoting from an article in the current issue of "Echoes" I.O.D.E. magazine, "Clothing for Britain" . . . the need for clothing remains the same. . . . Many calls come for garments of all kinds, so that each consignment is eagerly looked for. . . . Consignments are of such a good quality we can always use every single garment and article which comes out of them."

Mothers' Corner

Workers in the Mothers' Corner at I.P.S. Airport at Mohawk, this week were Mrs. Frank Marsh, Mrs. Bruyea, Sr., Mrs. William Howitt Jr. and Mrs. Herbert Knuth. Mr. Murray Dryden, Y.M.C.A. Supervisor, showed the "Mothers" the now practically completed recreation hall, then accompanied them to the mess hall for refreshments at the end of the evening. OBITUARIES

GEORGE H. KELLAR

Mr. George H. Kellar, Enterprise, Ont., passed away on Saturday July 1st, at the age of 81. He was born December 28th, 1862 near Croydon Ont., to the late George Kellar and Rosanna Clancy.

Surviving, in addition to his wife, Priscilla Wagar are four sons, Leland of Oshawa, Russell of Kingston, Elbert of Napanee and Donald, at home. Also two daughters, Mrs. E. Bell (Etta) Enterprise, and Mrs. W. Haggerty (Della) of Kingston and seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Also surviving is one sister, Mrs. Alice J. Hirons of Waterloo, Ont.

The funeral was held on Monday, July 3rd, at two o'clock, from his home. Rev. H. E. Frair, pastor of the United Church, Enterprise, officiated. Burial was made in Moscow cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs Warren Hawley, Alfred Milligan Thompson Wagar, Daniel Wagar, Irvine Graham, Alfred Jackson.

MRS. RUSSELL ALEXANDER

After an illness of nearly four weeks death came to Annie Brown, beloved wife of R. J. Alexander, at her home at Moneymore, on June 15th. Mrs. Alexander was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Brown and was born at Lime Lake, forty-six years ago, where she lived until her marriage twenty-eight years ago. A large concourse of relatives and friends gathered at the home of the deceased on June 17th, to pay their last respects to one well-known and highly respected. While not always in perfect health, her untimely passing came as a shock to her many sorrowing friends. The impressive funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. W. Seaton, of Tamworth. The Maribank choir, assisted by Mrs Harrison, of Latta, sang an anthem.

The many beautiful flowers bore evidence of the deceased's popularity among relatives and friends. She leaves to mourn her passing her husband one brother, Murney Brown, Maribank, and one sister, Mrs. W. Scott, Marysville.

The bearers were Messrs. Clarence Jarmin, Percy Jarmin, William Henderson, Arthur Boldrick, Roy Boldrick, and Clayton Sullivan. The girls who carried the flowers were Lois Coulter, Carmel Coulter Verna Henderson, Jean Purvis, Lillian Burd and Alma Lewis.

Mrs. Alexander's early passing leaves a vacancy in the war work of Marlbank Red Cross and Tweed Salvation Army, not easy to fill. Being an enthusiastic knitter she had a record for amount of work accomplished since the war's beginning, not easily surpassed.

WEDDING BELLS

PERRY - KIMMERLY

A pretty summer wedding and one of interest to the people of Empey Hill and Morven was solemnized at Selby United Church parsonage, on Saturday, July 1st, at 1:30 p.m., when Florence Delma, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kimmerly, of Empey Hill, was united in marriage to Willett Lynne, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Gay Perry, Morven. Rev. W. R. Merrick officiated.

The bride was attractively attired in a street-length frock of Alice blue sheer with gathered waist line and gold embroidered yplk. She wore a matching hat and carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Marjorie Price, cousin of the bride acted as bridesmaid and wore a street-length two-piece dress of rose sheer with matching hat and a corsage of white roses. Mr. Grant Kimmerly, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

Following the ceremony the wedding party motored to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held and a buffet luncheon was served to the immediate relatives by three cousins, the Misses Norma Wood, Aileen Stafford and Nina Hudgins.

For travelling the bride donned a smart printed silk jersey dress with black accessories, and amid showers of confetti the happy couple left for a honeymoon to Eastern points.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Perry will reside on the groom's farm at Morven.

A cable of congratulations was received from the groom's sister, Lance Corpl. Luva Perry, England.

The Late Mrs. James H. Craig

After an illness of only a few days, Mrs. James Craig died on Sunday, July 9th, at her home on Bridge St., Napanee. She had been in rather frail health for some time but was taken seriously ill on the Monday before her death.

Mrs. Craig, who was formerly Ida Jane Dunham, was born in Richmond Township about 81 years ago and was a daughter of the late John Dunham and Ann Dolan. When she was a young child her parents came to Napanee and she had resided in the town ever since.

For nearly her whole lifetime she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and since the congregation of St. Andrew's Church disbanded, she attended Trinity United Church when her health permitted. For many years she took an active part in the life of St. Andrew's Church. In the church and the community she had many friends who were attracted to her by her charming personality and kindly disposition.

She was predeceased by her husband, four years ago, and by two sisters, Mrs. James Galt and Mrs. Ezra Pringle and two brothers, William and George Dunham, who died in California, some years ago.

She is survived by her three daughters, Miss Alice, at home, Mrs. Lloyd Nesbit, Port Arthur and Miss Marguerite Craig, Reg. N. Pasadena, California, all of whom were with their mother at the time of her death.

Her funeral service was conducted at her home on Tuesday morning by her former pastor, Rev. A. J. Wilson, Toronto, assisted by Rev. C. D. McLellan, and interment was in Riverside Cemetery.

"I can't sleep" wailed a voice in his ear, as the doctor got out of bed to answer the telephone at three in the morning.

"Hold the wire," said the doctor crustily, "and I'll sing you a lullaby."

THE TROJAN HORSE

FOREIGN WORKERS' ARMY IN GERMANY

BY ALAN CATER

About the middle of 1944, roughly between eight and ten million foreign workers and prisoners of war were employed in Germany. They are men, women and children—yes, indeed—children. They come from every country and nation of Europe. They work in agriculture and industry, on the roads and railways, on the construction of defences and airfields, they sail German on the German inland waterways, serve in transport undertakings, as pitmen in German mines, as civil defence workers in the towns and even in private households.

German labor recruiting agents are at work day and night in France and Belgium Czechoslovakia, Poland, the Balkans and other parts of Europe to try to find fresh labor for the German war machine. The Nazis are perfectly well aware that the overwhelming majority of these foreign workers are sworn enemies of the Third Reich, a gigantic Trojan horse that has been introduced into the very heart of the "fortress of Germany."

Nevertheless, they cannot do without this labor. They have too few soldiers, too few workers, too few auxiliaries. They are forced, therefore to admit even their mortal enemies into their army, their mines and factories in order to fill the gaps and to keep the war machine going.

According to data compiled by the International Labor Office on the basis of official German reports, the number of foreigners employed in Germany (prisoners of war and civilians) in October 1940, already numbered 2,200,000. In September, 1941, 3,550,000, and by August, 1942, there were five million, of whom 1,600,000— roughly one-third of the total—were prisoners of the war, and the remaining 3,400,000, civilians. At the beginning of 1943 the strength of the foreign labor army had risen to 6,550,000, of whom 1,750,000 were prisoners of war and 4,800,000 civilians.

These figures do not include the Jews, who had to do forced labor in the ghettos and concentration camps. Including the Jews and the large numbers of men deported by the Nazis from evacuated Soviet territories ever since 1943, the number of foreign workers at present employed in Germany cannot be less than between eight and ten million.

A book published by the International Labor Office ("The Displacement of the Population in Europe" by E. Y. Kulisher) gives more particulars regarding the composition of the foreign labor force in Germany in 1943. The largest contingent came from the Soviet Union (roughly 2,- 000,000). The next largest from France, amounting to 1,500,000, of whom only 400,000 were civilians and the remaining 1,115,000 prisoners of war. In addition there were 1,356,000 Poles, 368,000 Yugoslavs, 377,000 Belgians and 300,000 Netherlanders. At that time the number of Czechoslovak workers in German employment was estimated at 200,000, the number of Danes at 48,000 and Greeks (34,000) was very much smaller. The smallest contingent came from Norway where resistance was very strong and only 2,000 workers could be forced to serve Germany. Among the vassal states, only the Italians were represented in any considerable numbers (350,000).

Workers from neutral countries were also employed in Germany at the beginning of 1943. These 38,000 neutral nationals, two per thousand of the total number of foreign workers, were the only genuinely voluntary workers, possibly pro-Nazis, who allowed themselves to be duped by German propaganda.

In the case of the workers from occupied countries there can be no question of a free choice. Even the Nazis themselves admit this quite openly. Gauleiter Sauckel, the General Plenipotentiary for Labor and leader of the forced labor campaign, stated in justification of the mobilisation of labor in occupied countries merely that "it is the conqueror's right to use every means for the maintenance of power." Hitler himself expressed the same idea, only even more crudely, in a proclamation of February 24, 1943. "We cannot now indulge in any scruples about foreign lives," he said, "when such heavy sacrifices of lives are required of us."

The Nazis treat the foreign workers as forced labor, indeed as slaves. This is apparent from the prevailing mood, and even more so from the output of these workers. In 1943 the "Voelkische Beobachter" (Vienna edition of January 21st, 1943) complained of the difficulties arising in connection with the foreign workers. "Thousands of them, speaking every European language, live in the neighborhood of the centres of the Austrian heavy industry and create a truly Babylonian confusion in all these mining districts. The paper states that "owing to this state of affairs economic problems — difficult enough already in all conscience — are further complicated by social problems, the solution of which considerably interferes with the process of production."

W.P.T.B. Refuses Ont. Cherry Minimum Price Orders

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has declined to concur in the Ontario Farm Products Control Board's 1944 minimum price orders of 10c per pound for sour cherries and 15c per pound for sweet cherries when purchased for processing, it was announced at Queen's Park, Toronto, recently. The minimum prices were determined by the Farm Products Control Board in view of extremely light cherry crops anticipated this season and in keeping with the cherry ceiling prices to the fresh fruit market already established by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board for 1944 of 11c per pound for sour cherries and 16c per pound for sweet cherries f.o.b. to growers including containers.

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board, it is announced has approved of a subsidy of 1½c per pound on both sweet and sour cherries which is to be added in the case of sweet cherries to the price paid growers by processors in 1943 of 12c per pound, and in the case of sour cherries to the price paid growers by processors in 1942 of 5½c per pound, thus providing for prices in 1944 of 13½c per pound for sweet cherries and 7½c per pound for sour cherries delivered processing plant. A further provision in the Ottawa order is that the 1½c per pound subsidy on cherries is only paid on cherries canned, frozen or made into jam but will not be paid on any cherries processed for the glace or maraschino trade.

In view of all the circumstances of the 1944 cherry deal whereby maximum fresh fruit ceiling prices and minimum processing prices have been established by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board with the processors free to pay higher than the minimum if necessary the Farm Products Control Board is asking concurrence to its Orders by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board establishing terms of contract respecting grades, deliveries, dates of payment, etc., but with all reference to price deleted.

ANOTHER HITLER MISTAKE

The conquest of Norway was undertaken by Hitler primarily in order to break the British sea blockade and secure bases and an open access to the high seas for the German Navy. The sinking of the Scharnhorst by the British Home Fleet provides an appropriate opportunity to draw up the balance of the Norwegian campaign.

The seizure of Norway cost Germany the lives of 60,000 men, killed or drowned. To hold it ten to twelve divisions have had to be maintained in constant readiness along the 1,700 mile coastline. Millions of soldiers have been spent in the construction of naval bases at Bergen, Trondheim, Narvik, Tromsoe, the Lofoten and Vesterfjord, etc. Thousands of tons of German-controlled merchant shipping have been lost in the effort to maintain communications along this dangerous coast.

And for the German Navy itself these Norwegian waters have proved to be not a safe anchorage but a graveyard for the battleship Scharnhorst, cruisers Blucher, Koenigsberg and at least a dozen destroyers and innumerable craft.

Hitler's intuition!

NAZI KELTUR

German use of torture in Denmark has often been rumored but Danes in Sweden have now received first-hand confirmation of it. The Gestapo executed and buried a Danish patriot, Pooul Edvin Kjeer Sorensen. At night the Danes dug up the body and "underground" doctors performed an autopsy. This showed that Sorensen's nails had been torn off, that a strong acid had been poured on his wounds, and, with the exception of the little finger of the right hand, all the joints in his fingers had been broken, his left wrist was crushed and his right wrist badly bruised. His left foot had been twisted so that it turned backwards. He had been killed by bullets through the mouth and chest.

The various nations are housed separately in camps where they are under the control of Nazis of their own nationality. Evidently this supervision did not prove adequate. The Esaen "Nationalzeitung" reports that in May, 1944, a special corps of Waffen S.S. composed of foreign Nazis was formed and that they are being used exclusively for the supervision of the foreign workers.

The Nazi press further publishes notices evidently intended to allay the agitation among the foreign workers. They are now promised the same wages as German workers, better food, theatrical performances and sporting events, indeed, all the benefits of the "Strength through Joy" movement.

These are clear indications of the dependence of German economy on foreign labour. Even in 1943 every fourth worker in Germany was a foreigner. Today every third worker is foreign, and the organic composition of the factory staffs is progressively deteriorating. Women, youths, and invalids have to take the place of able-bodied men. One might speak of a state of anaemia in German economy. The compulsory recruiting of foreign labor has acted like a gigantic blood transfusion. Now the invasion has started, however, this Trojan horse has become one of the greatest potential dangers for Nazi Germany.

HYDRO Lightens The Way!

Ready to serve . . . 24 hours a day

● In the early days of commercial flying, hours of daylight were far too short. The mantle of night automatically cancelled flying schedules. But . . . because electrical engineers discovered ways and means of flooding runways with light . . . swift couriers of the air tonight are defying hours of time, carrying precious burdens of humanity and of the commerce that may mean the saving of thousands of dollars before tomorrow's workday has been completed.

Electricity has not only helped to make flying economically sound, but, with the aid of modern electronics, flying is safer. Today . . . tonight . . . airplanes are guided safely, surely on their course by a beam of electrical waves which electronics made possible. In every field of endeavor, as in the field of aviation, electricity stands ready to serve 24-hours a day.

The development of electrical devices in the field of aeronautics is but one indication of what lies ahead for the world of tomorrow. In the electrical field it can be truly said . . . the best is yet to come. Electricity is the servant of mankind. In commerce . . . in industry . . . at home and on the farm . . . it lightens our tasks, makes life more comfortable. Plan and save now, so that, when the day of peace arrives, you will be ready to enjoy more of the benefits that electricity can bring you.

EXCHANGE NEEDED IF COUPONS ARE USED FOR PRESERVES

It is pointed out by the Ration Administration that although the first 10 P coupons in the No. 3 (old) ration book are good for either canning sugar or preserves they cannot be accepted by retailers for the latter until they have been converted into preserves coupons at a Local Ration Board.

Consumers who desire to buy preserves with their P coupons should be directed by retailers to the Local Ration Board, where the exchange can be made on a coupon-for-coupon basis.

It is further stressed that the P coupons valid for canning sugar or, alternatively, preserves are to be found only in the No. 3 books, which coitsumers were asked to retain after the No. 4 books had been issued. There are no P coupons in the No 4 books.

OPEN RATION OFFICE AT THE T. I. BRIDGE

For the convenience of visitors entering Canada by means of the Thousand Islands International Bridge route, a sub-office of the Gananoque Local Ration Board has been opened at the Canadian customs station on Hill (Larue) Island, just north of the international bound. It will remain open during the summer months on Thursdays, Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays from 12 o'clock noon to 8:00 p.m. Miss Wilma Earl, Lansdowne, is the clerk in charge. Visitors to Canada entering via this bridge route on the days and within the hours mentioned may obtain their ration documents there. Those arriving otherwise may, of course, obtain them by visiting any Local Ration Board office.

PRESENTATION TO MISS W. ECKARDT, COLEBROOK TEACHER

At the conclusion of the regular meeting of the Colebrook Mission Band, June 27th, an address and lovely gift of Adrienne's toilet articles were presented by the pupils of the school, to Miss Winnifred Eckardt who had tendered her resignation after a term of nine years. Several friends also contributed attractive and useful gifts as an expression of their esteem. The pupils expressed regret at Miss Eckardt's departure and voiced their appreciation of her interest and patience during the nine years she had been with them.

Miss Eckardt told them how much she appreciated their thoughtfulness, adding that though she was leaving them, she would always follow their achievements with pride.

MAJOR OFFENSIVE STARTED IN FRANCE BY ALLIED ARMIES

Russians Also Make Very Important Gains

EDNESDAY—

Although fighting was heavy in Normandy there was little change reported in the battle fronts. British and Canadians made slight gains in the Caen area and United States troops advanced a few miles in the St. Lo area. The Allies took 3,000 German prisoners since "D"

Steady progress was made all along the Russian front. A Russian column was advancing towards Kaunas in Lithuania, the final base from which the Nazis could defend East Prussia

In Italy the Allied armies were making hard and making small gains against bitter Nazi resistance.

4,000 Allied planes bombed Nazi targets from Italy and Britain.

Fighter planes based on the recently occupied island of Saipan, have reported dealing heavy blows against Japan's inner island defences.

HURSDAY—

A new Allied drive was reported to have been launched by the Allies in Normandy. The United States troops made gains at St. Lo and in the British-Canadian sector. Nazi counter-attacks were beaten off.

The Russians opened a new offensive north of Poland and Lithuania and advanced more than 22 miles on a 90-mile front.

In Italy the Allied army was within eight miles of Leghorn and the same distance from Ancona.

In the Northeast India the British continued to chase the Japs. Chinese troops in Burma made further gains and the Allies were reported to be in control of about 300 miles of the new Ledo supply road to China.

In Kwantung Province in China the Japs advanced 25 miles in a new offensive.

About 1,000 British-based planes attacked German communications in the Munich area.

Wilno fell to the Russians Thursday after five days fighting, in which 20,000 Germans were killed and 5,000 captured. The Russians were less than thirty miles from East Prussia.

There was very little change reported in battle positions in Normandy.

In Italy, United States troops took the stronghold of Lajatico 17 miles south and from the west coast and the British Army pushed into the outskirts of Arezzo.

About three days 9,000 tons of bombs were dropped on Munich by Allied planes.

It was estimated that 45,000 Japs were seeking to break out of the Allied trap on north British Burma.

The Japanese were forced to evacuate another centre in Burma, eight miles southwest of the then fallen stronghold of Mogaung.

SATURDAY—

In spite of tougher resistance the Russians advanced to within twenty miles of East Prussia and also captured Pinsk in another sector. It is expected Brest-Litovsk will be reached in a few days.

The United States First Army in Normandy made gains up to three miles and captured ten towns. Comprehensive quiet continued on the British and Canadian fronts.

French troops captured a town in Italy only 21 miles from Florence, the Eighth Army and the Fifth by made slight gains.

Oil refineries and railway yards in the area of Budapest were smashed by aerial bombs.

In China Hengyang was reported to be surrounded by Japanese but repulsed attacks were beaten back with heavy casualties.

During the past month a total of 70 Jap ships were sent to the bottom or set on fire or beached.

SUNDAY—

The important road and rail centre of Sinoline, known as the gateway to East Prussia, was captured by the Russians on Sunday. The Russians also launched a great new offensive against Lwow.

Allied advances continued on the Normandy front. The British advanced two miles on a six mile front, north of Caen, and took six more villages.

In Italy, Allied gains were general along the whole front, during the week-end. The British Eighth Army took Arezzo, 37 miles south of Florence, and the Allied Fifth Army was only 3½ miles from Leghorn.

1,000 bombers attacked Munich and Saarbrucken on Sunday.

The Chinese claimed 14,000 Japs were killed in the fighting for the Hankow-Canton rail junction of Hengyang between June 23rd and July 14th.

TUESDAY—

The biggest Allied drive since invasion day was reported under way in Normandy, on Monday. Important gains were made by both British and United States troops. The U. S. forces drove into St. Lo, and the British took Evrecy.

On the Eastern front the Russians advanced to the outer defences of Brest Litovsk and Bialystok, more than 600 tons and village were captured on Monday by the Russians.

In Italy another general advance was reported with British troops forcing a crossing of the Arno River, northwest of Arezzo.

In China, the defenders of Hengyang were reported still holding out against the Japanese, but without much hope of retaining the city.

About 2,000 Allied planes raided areas around Paris and in Southern France on Monday, striking particularly at bridges and communications.

BUTTER RATION TEMPORARILY CUT DURING AUGUST

Reason for the Cut— Reduced Output

Ottawa, (C.P.) — In a move designed to build up reserves for the low production period of fall and winter, the Prices Board announced Saturday a temporary cut in the August butter ration through postponement of the effective date of two coupons and a reduction in quotas to users catering to the transient public.

The board said that butter coupons No. 72, 73, which otherwise would have become valid Aug. 3, now will become valid August 10. Consumers thus must spread over a period of three weeks the butter obtained July 20 with coupons 70 and 71.

Coupons are good for eight ounces of butter each. Coupons 74 and 75 will be valid August 24th.

K. H. Oliver, administrator of dairy products, said temporary postponement of butter coupons was in line with the board's previously stated policy of postponing them from time to time when necessary to build up reserves for the low production period of fall and winter.

The cut in the August ration was decided upon by the Board after the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported that butter supplies in Canada July 1st were down nearly 5,000,000 pounds from stocks on hand at July 1st, 1943.

"So far this year the output of creamery butter in Canada has shown a decline of slightly more than five per cent., while butter consumption has increased approximately 16 per cent. for the same period.

Penicillin Supply for Civilians Not Large Says Hon. C.D. Howe

Ottawa (C.P.) — Hon. C. D. Howe, Munitions Minister announced last week that "limited supplies" of penicillin were being made available for civilian use, and emphasized that quantities available for civilian use were "not large" and would be subject to strict control of distribution so as to make adequate supplies available for the fighting forces and essential use.

"The drug will be divided among the larger hospitals on a quota basis and may be used only for the purpose decided upon by the medical advisory committee on penicillin of the National Research Council," said Mr. Howe.

The announcement said each of the larger hospitals will shortly be advised of its daily quota. Hospitals of 25 beds or less may apply directly to the chemicals controller for needed supplies. All public general hospitals will be supplied with information prepared by the advisory committee on permitted uses, methods of administration and dosage.

Hospitals will order supplies of penicillin within their quota from the controller of chemicals, 1235 McGill College Ave., Montreal, who will arrange for delivery from the nearest depot on a C.O.D. or certified cheque with order basis. All purchases will be F.O.B. depot.

Mr. Howe said delivery will be made and payment received by the local depot of National Drug and Chemical Company, which is handling the distribution of Penicillin for the government without remuneration.

Canadian production penicillin now is on a commercial scale at two government-owned plants, one in the Connaught Laboratories, Toronto, and the other operated by Averst, McKenna and Harrison in Montreal.

A privately - owned plant operated by Merck and Company of Canada also is producing penicillin in Montreal.

Mr. Howe said the entire Canadian output of penicillin was being supplied to the armed services. For civilian use in Canada the government has purchased a small supply from the United States.

Confine New Religious Course To Primary School For Year

The new course in religious education will be confined to the primary schools in Ontario for the present, and the secondary schools will not have the course until the beginning of the fall term next year, Premier George Drew, said Friday. Notification to this effect has gone to the Boards of Education in Ontario from Dr. J. G. Althouse, Chief Director of Education.

"The present arrangement regarding religious education will be continued in the secondary schools until we are able to put the new course into operation," the Premier said. "Religious education will be given in the primary schools starting with the fall term this year."

Asked as to the reason why the religious course of study has been confined to the primary schools the Premier said that the introduction of religious study involved very extensive consultations and discussions with the various denominational groups concerned, as well as considerable time for the preparation of material.

"One of the main problems is the difficulty of getting textbooks," the Premier said. "It is almost impossible to get textbooks for the secondary schools. The problem is not nearly as great in the primary schools"

CANADIANS MERIT GREAT DEAL OF CREDIT OVERSEAS LETTER SAYS

Interesting Information About Invasion Forces

The following is part of a letter received by Mrs. Earl W. Stratton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Richmond of Tamworth, from her husband, Corpl. E. W. Stratton, who is now serving in France.

I guess by now I can tell you some of the things that happened on the beach. We weren't supposed to name any casualties or anything like that for fourteen days after they happened.

As I said before, my section and the rest of our platoon came through O.K. We did run into stiff opposition in some of the other plateons. I'm happy to say that a very few of our men died, but sorry that quite a number were wounded. I think that the only one you knew that was wounded was "Red" McLaughlin. He got a bad shrapnel wound in the shoulder, but not his brother, who is also with us, says he is getting better.

All that happened to our craft was that it struck a mine and got tangled on an obstacle just before we left it. The mine blew a hole in the bottom but there were no casualties. Our craft we had two tanks and two heavily armoured bull-dozers as well as tank crews, and my section. Because I was in charge of one of the beach clearing sections. I had to ride on the bridge of the craft to see what obstacles there were, and how the best way would be to clear them. Believe me, there are times when a section commander has to think fast, too. Well, from on the bridge I could see nearly all that was going on around me, and I must say it was plenty.

Although our immediate section of beach was very quiet, there were a large number, in fact hundreds, of angle iron obstacles in front of us, but that didn't worry us in the least, for about three months previous we had been on the south coast of England, training on exactly the same obstacles as we were now confronted with.

As soon as the craft stopped, I knew the water was too deep for the men to wade through, approximately ten feet, so I tied a rope on the back of each bull-dozer and all the men had to do was hold on to the rope and they'd be pulled ashore. It was certainly a good idea that rope, for I'm afraid some of the boys would not have gone through. The water was darned cold and rather rough. When we got on the beach we started to work and in record time, under the circumstances, we had a goodly stretch of beach cleared. "Jerry" did try to bomb us and, in fact, did get through a couple of times, but did no damage to amount to anything and our air force soon dealt with them. By now, men and equipment were pouring ashore and "Jerry" was being driven back farther and farther. That's about all there was to it other than a terrific roar, which wasn't so bad after you got used to it, from our battleships and tanks.

Oh yes, I forgot to tell you. If you want to see a very good picture of it all, take an artist's conception of the invasion that was used for the last and other Victory Loans, spread the planes equipment and men over a little larger area than shown and it will come very close to all I saw.

Perhaps I'm rather skeptical, but what impressed me most on going into action was the high morale and lack of excitement in the men and myself. It just seemed like going ashore on our own beach in England and clearing the obstacles.

I don't know what the Canadian papers are saying about the Canadians in action, but they are doing a good job and deserve a great deal of credit. I think "Monty" is the best leader we could get and he's up against a smart man, "Rommel."

Mrs. R. Kimmett's Bro. F-LIEUT. C. D. GRANT KILLED OVERSEAS

Flight-Lieut. Charles Donald Grant, son of Mrs. Hurb Weir, Concession, and brother of Mrs. Ralph Kimmett Deseronto, was killed during air operations on June 25th. The message stated: "The aircraft of which he was the sole occupant, collided with another aircraft while taking off from an advance airfield, in France."

Flt. Lieut. Grant was born at "Cold Creek" near Hillier, May 27th, 1920, a son of Mrs. Hugh Weir and the late Chas. W. Grant. The family moved to Wellington in October, 1936, owing to the illness of Mr. Grant, who passed away in March, 1937. Remaining there until October 1938 Donald worked on the Canadian Canners farm under Mr. H. Clemison. Returning to the farm at Cold Creek though only 18 years of age, Donald operated the farm there for two years, selling out in 1940 as he had applied for service in the air force as a pilot.

Donald first attended Cold Creek school and later the Continuation school at Wellington where he secured the first year in Upper school.

On October 21, 1940, Donald enlisted at Toronto, and trained at Brandon, Calgary, Regina, Prince Albert. He graduated as a pilot at Dauphin, Man., in June, 1941. He was posted to Trenton where he took a course as in instructor. After three days there he was commissioned as Pilot Officer, going to Dunnville as an instructor. There he received his promotion to the rank of Flying Officer and served as Deputy Flight Commander. At Dunnville from Sept. 1941 until July 1943 he was promoted to Flight Lieutenant before going to Bagotville, Que. He remained there until August, 1943 training as a fighter pilot. On September 1, 1943 he landed overseas, having completed his last course in Canada at the top of the class. He was a clever student and revealed an aptitude for the branch of service he had chosen. Overseas he flew a Spitfire with the Red Indian Squadron. He was playing his part in the success of the invasion when the aircraft brought to a close a young and gallant life.

ONTARIO MINISTER HIGHWAYS DEPARTMENT MEETS ROADS COM.

Discusses Problems and Answers Questions

A special meeting of the Road Committee was called to welcome the Hon. Geo. Doucett, Minister of Highways, and Mr. Marshall, of the Department. Mr. Harvey Smaille, the District Engineer, and Mr. Breault and Mr. Purcell of Camden, were also present.

Mr. Doucett, in a short address, stressed the importance of county and township councils as governing bodies and was anxious that his department would do all in its power to continue and develop and maintain such units. He said the farther away we get from direct expenditure the less value we get for the dollar. He advised very strongly against counties taking on more roads until such time as the present county roads are put in first class shape. He discouraged the idea of many reeves in trying to get more of their roads on the county system. The purpose of the visit was to contact all road committees and try to solve any problems that have arisen, as well as answer questions.

Mr. Drew Reeve of Camden, asked if the county could, in case of over expenditure on roads, get extra appropriation in November. Mr. Doucett answered in the affirmative.

Mr. McLeod, Reeve of Richmond, asked about the advisability of Richmond Township, of spending the township's share of county road monies on the county roads in the township. Mr. Doucett replied that when a reeve comes to County Council it is his duty to forget his township, but try to govern the county as one large unit, not as several small units, and that if each township tried to get back its share, it was impossible for a county road system to function as it should.

Mr. Purcell asked what procedure was necessary to close a township bridge that is not used. The reply was to contact the Board of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Ham asked what time the semi-yearly subsidy would come in. The reply was, September.

Mr. Creighton, Reeve of Ernestown, expressed dissatisfaction with the conditions regarding mileage of county roads in Ernestown, saying that he and his council under present conditions, wished to withdraw from the county road system. Mr. Doucett, in reply, asked Mr. Creighton if his township would undertake to assume all responsibility for the roads and maintenance of Highways No. 2 and No. 33, that run all across Ernestown before withdrawal would be considered. He gave Mr. Creighton the county road mileage in each township, showing that Ernestown is within one per cent of Camden, and could see no reason for dissatisfaction.

Mr. Drew moved and Mr. Ham seconded a vote of thanks to the Minister, for calling.

Better Distribution Canned Vegetables After July 31st

Ottawa, (C.P.) — The Prices Board announced Thursday, an order simplifying the distribution of the 1944 vegetable pack, and said it was expected to make more canned vegetables available for Canadian consumers than were available last year.

Provision is made for safeguarding priority claimants and preferred users on the basis of their previous year's requirements. The order requires canners to reserve sufficient stocks to meet demands of priority claimants — the armed services, war service canteens in advance areas and Red Cross purchases for prisoner-of-war parcels.

Preferred users — hospitals, logging and woods operations, mining and construction camps where meals are served to employees — are required to negotiate with regular suppliers for requirements for the coming season, and these requirements must be contracted for with canners by July 31.

The announcement said that after July 31 purchases will have to be made in competition with other buyers on the market under the equitable distribution policy. Board officials said that when the requirements of priority claimants and preferred users have been met, the remainder of the pack will be available for the civilian market "with a minimum of restrictions."

United Kingdom War Cost Shows Gain

London, C.P. Reuter) — The Government will ask Parliament for another £1,607,000,000 about $4,450,000,000 to defray war and other expenditures, it was learned last week.

This will cover expenses for between two and three months.

It brings the total asked for in credit notes since the financial year began last April 1st to £3,000,000,000.

The new credit vote is a supplementary estimate of the amount required for defraying general war and civil expenses during the year ending March 31 1945 and for "relief and rehabilitation in areas brought under the control of any of the United Nations."

The provision for rehabilitating countries which may be occupied by the Allied forces is the first such mentioned in a supplementary expenditure bill.

'Sans Souci' Notes

"Sans Souci" has a unique fishing contest. At the beginning of each season a member of that summer community donates a silver trophy to the person catching the largest small-mouth black bass.

This cup goes the rounds of nearly every camper during the summer. Harry Vine has it in his possession now but "Pusc" Laidley says he will have it in a day or so.

John Mayhew won a similar trophy last year.

FAMILY ALLOWANCES WILL COST TAXPAYERS $200,000,000 A YEAR

Measure is Given First Reading by Parliament

The family allowance scheme as proposed by the U.K. Government will cost about $200 million a year. Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in the Commons.

He made the statement after moving a resolution preliminary to the introduction of a bill to establish the allowances. The resolution was passed the bill introduced and given first reading.

Mr. King said the estimate was prepared by the Finance Department and the Bureau of Statistics.

The plan specified under the Bill said Mr. King, was estimated at $250 million a year. The amount recoverable by reason of cancellation of income tax exemptions for dependent children would be $50 million to $60 million.

The bill outlined the proposed scale of allowances. The scale would be $5 a month for a child less than 6 years old, $6 a month for a child 6 or more years old and less than 10 years, $7 a month for a child 10 or more years old but less than 13 and $8 a month for a child 13 or more years old but less than 16.

BENEFIT LIMITED

The allowances, scheduled to become effective July 1st, 1945 would be paid in respect of each child in Canada under 16 years of age in accordance with the act. However the benefit for large families would be limited. The rates in the various age groups would be reduced to $7 a month in respect to the fifth child, $2 per month in respect to the sixth and seventh and $3 in respect to the eighth and additional child or children.

Officials said the allowances would have the greatest benefit for families in the low income groups, but that the bill did not indicate what changes would be made in the income tax regulations to permit recovery of the allowances paid to families in the higher income groups.

Under the Income War Tax Act, reduction in tax payable was granted a child supported. When the allowances come into effect the reduction granted for a child would be reduced by the amount of allowance based upon the family allowances payable under the measure.

DETAILS LATER

This aggregate amount possibly would be augmented at a later date by Finance Minister Ilsley.

In cases where the taxpayer's income gained from child upkeep it was probable there would be little cash benefit from the allowances, it was learned. But in the smaller income groups there would be a substantial amount of the allowances would be received without affecting taxation.

The bill provided that the allowances would be paid to a "father" stepfather, adoptive father, foster father, mother, stepmother, adoptive mother, foster mother or any other person who maintains or has the custody of a child. The payments, however, would not be made to operators of institutions.

HOW APPLIED

The allowances must be applied by the person receiving the same exclusively towards the maintenance, care, training, education and advancement of the child," said the bill. If the allowances are not used for such purposes payments may be discontinued.

The bill which would authorize the Federal Government to seek the cooperation of the Provinces in carrying out the payments, would provide penalties for those who supply false information in attempt to collect the allowances.

The Federal Cabinet would be empowered to make regulations, and it was indicated that when these regulations are drawn up some provision will be made for the payment of allowances to children in institutions.

CANADIAN POETESS SPEAKER AT ROTARY

Dorothy Dumbrille (Mrs. James T. Smith), Alexandria, Ontario the well known Canadian poetess, daughter of Archdeacon R. J. Dumbrille, Rector of St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church, was the guest speaker at the Rotary Club luncheon in Napanee, Tuesday noon.

Miss Dumbrille spoke briefly of the need of encouraging Canadian poets, writers and artists. She said she believed the best way to develop a Canadian culture entirely away from the influence of Britain and the United States, would be by the establishment of national libraries, art galleries, and by education. If a real Canadian culture is fostered, it will give prestige to Canada and help the Dominion to take its place among the nations.

Miss Dumbrille read several of her own poems, which are strictly Canadian in character. She stated in the course of her address, that she had received numerous requests from Canadian boys overseas for copies of her books of poems.

Miss Dumbrille was introduced by W. A. Grange and thanks were expressed to her by Alex. MacGregor.

Among the guests present besides Miss Dumbrille were her brother-in-law and sister Flt.-Lieut. J. G. Findlater and Mrs. Findlater. Dr. G. W. Morden, and Rev. J. P. Armitage.

250,000 Evacuate City of London, Eng.

London (B.U.P.) — Nearly 250,000 persons had left London, last week for the safety of the provinces, it was estimated, as the Germans resumed their robot bomb attacks on the capital after an all-night lull.

The Government alone evacuated 96,500 mothers and children under a voluntary registration scheme, official sources said, and an additional 16,000 were scheduled to leave later. The total comprised 66,000 unaccompanied children and 30,500 mothers with children.

Those who have left the city without Government aid were estimated at approximately 150,000.

Railway stations presented scenes reminiscent of pre-war holiday excursions, with women and children waiting for hours to board trains. No extra trains were being used because of military requirements and in some cars 16 to 18 persons were jammed into compartments built to accommodate eight. Corridors were filled and many persons rode in baggage cars.

Though London enjoyed its second consecutive night free from robot bombs, a number fell elsewhere in Southern England, causing damage and casualties. Authorities said a "small number" of persons were killed.

Australia House in the Strand was damaged by flying bombs in a recent attack, it now can be disclosed.

ROTARY SPENT $1040 LAST YEAR ON CHARITIES

THE BUSINESS CYCLE

The so-called business cycle, in virtue of which there are alternating periods of boom and depression, has been looked upon in the past by business executives, as inevitable. The laws of alternating booms and depressions were said by a speaker in Toronto, some time ago, as inevitable as the tides of the sea. Well: the British people are going to control the so-called tides. In a White Paper recently issued the Government accepts as its primary responsibilities, the maintenance of a high level of employment after the war. The main features of the new policy which is designed to prevent booms and depressions are: "(1) A system of varying contributions which will eventually be introduced within the new social insurance scheme designed to influence the volume of purchasing power of the community. When unemployment is low the weekly contribution payable by employers and employed will be increased; when unemployment rises the contribution will be reduced and the public will have more money to spend. (2) Planned spending on public works, to check the onset of a depression. A co-ordinating body under ministers will be set up to control the expenditure programme of public authorities, five years ahead. (3) Concerted action between the treasury and the banks is planned to influence the volume of capital expenditures by variations in the rate of interest. As a further possibility, variation of taxation will be considered as a means of keeping employment at a high level. In prosperous years, taxes could be higher than necessary and the surplus carried over as credits repayable in bad times."

The first and greatest point in this new plan, is the recognition on the part of the Government that it has a prime responsibility to keep people at work. That is a revolutionary change, and will be welcomed not only by all British people, but by others throughout the world, who are interested in human well-being. Having accepted the responsibility to keep people in jobs, the Government is setting up the machinery to do so. When purchasing power falls off the Government proposes to embark on public works. Hitherto, when there has been a depression, banks tightened up on credit, and business refused to spend or expand. The British Government intends to correct that, and in days of prosperity it will increase taxation and raise the interest rate on money. When signs of depression come, taxes will go down, interest rates will go down, then capital will be automatically loosened up, and the purchasing power of the community increased.

The new plan proposes to be a sort of economic governor, controlling the expansion and contraction of credit. This is a reasonable and sensible proposal. It has been suggested before, but nobody had the courage to experiment with it, and we were encouraged to believe that the laws of economics could not be interfered with. Now, Britain ventures forth — doubtless, others will not be slow to follow her example.

A GRAVE DECISION

We, in the United Nations, have some times grumbled about the mistakes our leaders have made. To be sure they have made errors, all human beings do. Even Hitler has made mistakes and serious ones at that. His greatest error was when he decided to attack Russia.

From reports coming from Europe, it would appear that Hitler has made another error. Faced with the problem of fighting on two fronts, he has had to decide on which to place the major emphasis. He has decided on the West. The Naziis have planned to rob the East of necessary reserves to achieve an overwhelming victory on the Western Front, and then turn back to finish Russia.

That sounds good, but Hitler did not think that the Russians were going to move so fast. The Russians are practically advancing at will and before long, perhaps before this is read, will be in Prussia. Under those circumstances Germany can ill afford to take any further reserves from the East Front. Should it be weakened to any great degree, it is not improbable that it will crumble completely. The Russians will then head straight for Berlin.

Hitler and the General Staff had to make a decision—they have elected to put the major emphasis on the West, in the hope of a speedy victory there. But they will not only not achieve a speedy victory there, but they will pave the way for the entrance of the Russians into the sacred precints of their Fatherland.

CANNOT BE IGNORED

News comes from Stockholm, via London, that the Germans have a robot bomb, powerful enough to send to New York. The report from Stockholm said it had learned from secret sources that the Germans had concentrated 10,000 super-robot planes in Western Jutland for an attack on New York. The newspaper said the bomb weighed 10 tons, could fly 750 miles an hour at an altitude of 65,000 feet. It was designed to fly in the stratosphere where planes could not follow and where anti-aircraft shells could not reach it.

The whole story sounds like a fairy tale. Whether such a thing is possible scientifically, we do not know. But we have seen so many impossible things done in the past few years, that we hesitate to declare anything outside the bounds of possibility. For hundreds of years men dreamed of flying. All sorts of attempts and experiments were made, but once the principle of the heavier-than-air machine was established at Kitty Hawk by the Wright Brothers, all that was necessary was to take advantage of that principle. Certainly, the Wright Brothers, in their flimsy little machine, never dreamed of the super-bombers and the huge troop-carrying planes of the present day. And yet, once the air was mastered, the rest followed naturally.

If then, the Germans have mastered the principle of flying bombs, it would be sheer folly to assume that in their present form they are perfect, or that there will be no further development. If the present robot bombs are to future bombs what the Wright Brothers' plane was to the present Super-Fortress, the mind fails to grasp the possibilities it contains. We can only hope that the need for haste, and the restrictions caused by war will halt their development before they have gone too far.

If anything was needed to demonstrate the fiendishness of war, the robot provides the evidence. With all the inventive genius of man turned to destruction, and with all the results of modern science at his command, the warmaker will ultimately do himself out of a job. For men and nations will come to see that our whole civilization can be blown to smithereens in a comparatively short time with the modern and future engines of war. War must ultimately go if civilization is to survive. The desire to outlaw war and the determination to see that it will never happen again, should be cultivated and developed now. For when the peace treaties have to be signed, it will be too late. Now is the time to say that it will never happen again, and to mean it.

DELAY IS DANGEROUS

John Bracken, Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, has delayed overlong in seeking a seat at Ottawa. He should have been in the House, assuming his share of responsibility. Quite naturally, he expected a general election to take place within a reasonable time and preferred to wait for the election, rather than go through a by-election. He probably judged that the time before election could better be spent in getting to know his constituency and by making plans. This, in some ways, seemed a wise decision, for Mr. Bracken was little known outside Manitoba, and he needed a first-hand acquaintance with people and conditions.

The delay, however, has given rise to rumors which are rather disturbing. Whether there is anything in them or not we have no way of discovery. It is rumored that the ultra-Conservatives in Toronto are none too pleased with the progressive policies of Mr. Bracken. H. R. Armstrong, writing to The Toronto Daily Star, on Monday, says:—

"The names of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Premier George Drew and George McCullagh, all of Toronto are linked in rumor here with the anti-Bracken move. These three worked long and hard to secure Mr. Bracken's election as party leader at the Conservative Convention in Winnipeg in December, 1942. They thought that his leadership would bolster the fallen fortunes of the party and were willing to accept a man of progressive views for the sake of success it the polls.

"They hoped, especially, that the Bracken leadership would attract strong support to the party on the prairies. The Saskatchewan election dissipated this expectation. Mr. Bracken's stand on overseas conscription and empire solidarity also irked them. They were none too pleased when, at a national party gathering in Ottawa in March last, Mr. Bracken issued a plain warning for the reactionary elements in the party to keep "hands off" policy, management and tactics.

"The Toronto group have found Mr. Bracken too independent of them for their liking. At the same time they appear to have reached the conclusion that the new leader is not gaining ground in national public opinion, either for himself or the party. They seem to be very unhappy about the whole thing and apparently are determined to do something about it."

Mr. McCullagh, of The Globe and Mail, has denied any share in the rumor that he wants to run the party, and Mr. Bracken has given a flat denial to the suggestion. This should clear the air.

It will be unfortunate for the Progressive Conservative Party and for the whole country should there be any dissention in the ranks now. Mr. Bracken showed signs of being a real Progressive Conservative, ready to lead a Progressive Conservative Party. It is devoutly to be wished that he may continue to do so, and that the rumors may prove to be nothing more than expressions of a fear from his political opponents.

A MIRACLE OF REORGANIZATION

BY HARRISON SALISBURY
British United Press
Staff Correspondent

For years rumors have seeped out of Russia that great factories and forges were being erected east of the Ural Mountain barrier and vast acres of Asiatic Russia were being cultivated to take the place of the vulnerable Ukraine and White Russian fields. Josef Stalin has at last seen fit to lift the curtain to permit correspondents to see those secrets. Here is the first report from beyond the Urals by Harrison Salisbury of the British United Press, and other dispatches are being filed by Salisbury on additional aspects of the tour.

• • •

The world has seen ample evidence of the heroism and strength of the Russian army but only recently, after an unprecedented 6,000-mile tour of the vast secret industrial and agricultural installations east of the Ural Mountains can correspondents give the story of the miracle of production and supply behind Red Army victories.

The heroism and ability of the Soviet home front complements that of the army like two hemispheres of a globe. Accompanying Eric Johnston, President of the United States Chamber of Commerce with Marshal Josef Stalin's personal approval, Allied correspondents for the first time have seen the farms and forces of the hitherto-blackened sphere.

These were the arsenals of which the world heard the rumors Adolf Hitler either discounted or disbelieved. Many of these factories did not exist, in fact, when Hitler turned on Russia in 1941. They were uprooted—workers and machines—and transplanted east of the Urals or built from scratch.

Almost overnight, the Russians had to construct vast barracks and shelters to house the evacuated populace from the west. All but the most essential buildings had to be taken over and hundreds of new buildings thrown up hastily to house migrated war plants. There were shortages of water, food shelter and fuel and suffering was great. But every expedient was used and determination won through.

In some places, the schools became living quarters. One hospital became a parachute factory and airdrome hangars became aircraft plants.

Heavy steel mills were moved eastward, piece by piece and set up within 45 days. If life at the Soviet front was hard and dangerous, life at the Soviet rear was hard and grim.

The correspondents could not help but be struck by the vast peace-time production potential which has been created. With negligible exceptions, industry which has moved to the rear will remain there while production on the original western sites is resumed. This will double Russian production of many lines and have the effect of another Five Year Plan in building up the resources of the Urals, Siberia and Central Asia.

In Samarkand, whose 14th century artisans hammered gold, silver and steel into sword and armor for the warriors of Tamerlane the Conqueror, descendants of those workmen today are laboring over ruddy forges to make parts for tanks and tractors.

Samarkand's production is only a drop in the flood of tanks, artillery, guns, shells, planes and food which is pouring from the Urals, from Siberia and from Central Asia to the Russian front. But the mobilization of these artisans is typical of what is undoubtedly the most total mobilization which the world has ever seen.

During the last two weeks, we have travelled by airplane, train and automobile over this previously-guarded area. Everywhere the story was the same, whether in the gigantic blast furnaces of Magnitokarsk, the bustling aircraft factories, the lush, subtropical acres of Kazakistan or the primitive smithys of Samarkand — an all-out war effort.

But already the managers of Russia's agricultural and industrial enterprises are turning thoughts toward peace. The manager of the Sverdlovsk artillery plant wanted suggestions for civilian by-products which could be manufactured from the scrap of gun production. Uzbekistan officials were anxious to get turbines in order to resume soil reclamation projects.

The high tide of civilian migration eastward long since was passed. Millions who found refuge from the Germans and an opportunity to resume war production beyond the Urals now have crossed back to their liberated homes. Sverdlovsk, which double its pre-war population of 500,000, now has a population of 750,000: Novosibirsk swelled from 450,000 to more than 800,000 and now is down to 700,000.

The morale and energy of the Soviet home front matches that of the army. You see that in the youngsters who swarm over a Douglas-licensed DC-3 in a plane plant and in the women and girls trudging out to work four or five hours in the fields after a long, hot day over drop forges and giant presses.

Only by inspecting huge installations like the 24-square-mile integrated steel operation at Magnitogorsk can one realize how much Russia's victory over the Germans is due to the vision of leaders who utilized the five-year plans to construct new industrial bases in the Urals and Siberia.

From these plants so far behind the lines that there never was a black- out for German bombers even at the Nazi high tide, war implements have flowed ceaselessly. The loss of the Don Basin and rich industrial areas near Leningrad and elsewhere in Western Russia must have created a terrific strain.

The trip afforded ample evidence of friendship and understanding. We were given every possible courtesy. Questions were answered freely. And we were afforded the most extensive view of the Soviet Union given foreigners since the start of the war.

HITLER FORCED TO REVISE STRATEGY

BY DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

With due caution one records that catastrophe is treading on the heels of the Hitlerian armies which are being rolled back with heavy loss of life and material by a multiple Red offensive which is developing the greatest striking power ever let loose in such an operation.

The German danger is so acute that disaster of the first magnitude might overtake them at any time. They apparently are trying to engineer a wholesale withdrawal of great depth to new defences, thus straightening their communications straightening their long and unwieldy front and shortening their communications.

The Nazis will have to be mighty lucky to succeed. We've seen their generalship achieve many masterly withdrawals, and it would be a serious mistake to underestimate German resourcefulness in emergencies. However, Hitler no longer has the man-power or equipment to enable him to manipulate his defences as he has in the past.

Berlin military spokesmen for several days have been preparing the German public for a great withdrawal on the eastern front. While not avoiding the seriousness of the situation, they've advertised this as part of a revised strategy.

It's represented that this realignment will permit of the transfer of Nazi forces from the eastern front to the western theatre for a major assault on the Allies in Normandy. The idea is to administer a quick, decisive defeat on the western Allies and so whip back the Russian front in time to protect the eastern frontiers of the Reich.

Well, as the stage magician would say, it's a good trick if they do it—and it's a good trick if they don't.

One of the astonishing aspects of the Russian offensive is that the Red armies have been averaging more than ten miles a day in vital sectors with heavy fighting, for a score of days, with rest. Whether they can continue much longer without a breather remains to be seen but the launching of their new Latvian drive doesn't look much like a pause. Their stamina is amazing.

If the Red machine keeps on rolling as it's going now, Hitler may have to abandon the Baltic States and East Prussia on the run. The Nazi command has anticipated this contingency by evacuation of German nationals from some areas. The way the signs read now the enemy will be compelled to fall back at least as far as the line of the Vistula in the heart of Poland.

Hitler's idea of administering a decisive defeat on the invading allies in Normandy comes a month late. If he was going to try that game he should have seen to it that Marshal Rommel had his way. The marshal wanted to fling a great attack at the Allies when they were struggling to establish beach-heads.

Now, as General Montgomery has pointed out with so much evident satisfaction, the Allies are firmly and permanently established. When the Germans make their long promised major counter-attack they will be smashing their heads against a solid wall.

However, the London Daily Mail published a report that the German supreme staff, headed by Field Marshal Keriel, has been transferred to France from Russia and if that's true it looks like business.

ALBANIA LOOKS AHEAD

Albanian guerillas have formed a national committee and asked the Allies for military aid, looking towards eventual recognition as a government.

Until recently German-occupied Albania had a puppet government under Nazi control, but the guerillas have now begun to fight more actively and the puppet government has fallen.

The new development, which was learned recently, is significant for both political and military reasons.

1. The failure of the puppets reflects the severe drop in prestige and control which the Germans have taken as a result of Allied successes.

2. Albania is important, strategically, because it sits at the narrowest point of the Adriatic and dominates that sea. It is the gateway which Mussolini used to attack Greece and has several excellent ports.

3. While the Germans are not believed to have any large occupying forces in Albania, widespread guerilla activity would help throw their thinly-spread Balkan defences off balance.

The guerilla committee is called the L. C. N. and its president is Enver Hoxha. It has some ties with Marshal Tito's partisans in Yugoslavia, and it's political sympathies are similar.

As in Yugoslavia and Greece, however, opposition to the Nazis is divided and there have been cases of Albanians fighting among themselves rather than against the invader.

There is no Albanian government recognized by the Allies and King Zog's position in London is virtually that of a private citizen. Available reports show he may run into the same troubles as King George of Greece faces on the question of returning to Albania as monarch.

WE ARE MAKING THE MOST OF WHAT WE HAVE!

There are upwards of 180,000 more Bell telephones in service today than when the war began.

NOW WE ARE "SCRAPING THE BOTTOM OF THE BARREL"

In spite of the most careful use of available supplies, we have had to use up most of the 'margins' built into telephone plant. We are working facilities at maximum capacity.

Telephone sets, switching equipment for central offices, and other parts of telephone plant cannot be obtained for civilian use because telephone material is still going to war.

We regret that to the many applicants for residence telephones who are still waiting, as well as those who want telephones and have not even applied, we must say: "Sorry, but we must rigidly conserve remaining supplies of telephones and materials. We can install telephones for only the most essential service."

So long as the needs of war have first claim, we shall have to keep on doing the best we can with the equipment obtainable.

Meanwhile, we say "Thank You" for your cordial understanding of our position.

SABOTEURS ACHIEVE RECORD

Of the mysteries to be unravelled at the end of the war, the deeds of the Danish saboteurs will not be the least interesting. They defy German troops and Gestapo, and they do this not in bands of five or six but in large, organized detachments.

After a period of mainly attacking German communications they are again attending to factories. One of their most daring exploits took place on June 22, when they destroyed most of the "Dansk Rekyl Syndikat," the only Danish armament factory. It made the famous Madsen machine gun and anti-tank gun. It was situated in the Free Port of Copenhagen.

On the night of June 22 according to the Swedish "Dagens Nyheter," three big trucks marked with fire-department and ambulance signs stopped in front of the factory. About eighty men disguised as workers jumped out with machine guns and disarmed the factory guards. They went around to all the workshops and told the 250 employees to take cover when the factory sirens sounded. They they carried fifteen bombs into the factory. These contained trotyl and weighed from sixty to eighty pounds each. When these were placed and while the employees were getting into the shelters the saboteurs entered the weapon depot and helped themselves to three anti-tank guns, about a hundred automatic pistols and large quantities of ammunition, loaded it on their trucks and drove off. A few minutes later the bombs exploded, completely wrecking the hardening shop, demolishing the remainder of a three-story building and starting a big fire which got out of control.

Besides the previously mentioned destruction of the two and a half million kroner factory Globus by fifty saboteurs on June sixth, a report has come in of serious damage done by a group of twenty saboteurs to the Petersen and Wraa factory in Copenhagen on June 11. It had been welding armor plate. And on June 2 a group of twenty exploded the entire building of the S. P. Wodskou factory for making fine electric instruments also in Copenhagen.

On June 12 four German minesweepers were sunk by saboteurs in the harbor of Svendborg island of Fyn. The Germans then announced a state of emergency in Svendborg.

The music master of a school near Bradford had been lecturing on Mozart, Beethoven, and other great musicians, who none of the scholars was struck by an original thought. "How is it, sir," as asked, "that musicians are always so ugly?" The music master looked embarrassed. The seeker after truth suddenly realized with horror that his question might be taken personally, and he hastened to make amends. "Of course, sir," he said factfully, "I only mean good musicians."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 23RD, 1944

"WOMAN'S PART IN NATIONAL LIFE"

Lesson Text: Judges 4; 1-9, 13-16.

When Joshua died, the nation had made some progress towards getting well established in Canaan. But it was not an easy task, for in addition to the necessity of overcoming the enemy, there was a lack of united purpose among the various tribes of Israel. There was no federation of tribes, each one took its own bit of land, and paid no attention to what the others were doing. Naturally the Kings who had been dispossessed, hit back—counter attacked—we would say. The result was constant turmoil. There was no central authority, "every man did that which was right in his own eye".

In this week's lesson it is recorded that because of apostasy God sold the children of Israel into the hands of the King of Canaan. Selling people into slavery because of some crime was a commonplace thing among the ancient peoples. So that when the Canaanites won a battle over the Israelites, it was natural to speak of God as selling them to the enemy. During this transitional period, Israel was ruled by Judges. These men were chosen because of their qualities of good sense; the first three were Othniel, Shamgar and Ehud. They fulfilled a useful function in dispensing judgment and giving leadership, though little is known of their exploits.

One of the military leaders of the Canaanites was a certain Sisera, who was well provided with military forces and munitions. For twenty years he had been a thorn in the side of the Israelites. There seemed to be no man of equal gifts among the Hebrews to oppose him. Deborah, a woman judge, became convinced of the need for action. Taking matters into her own hands she sent for Barak, and told him she had been directed of God to tell Barak to get together ten thousand soldiers and challenge Sisera; and if he did so the result would be his destruction. He promised he would go if Deborah would go with him. This she agreed to do. The result was as she had predicted. Sisera was defeated, and Israel was free to go on her way consolidating the conquest of Canaan immolested.

It is illuminating to note that this early in the history of the Hebrew people women were taking a place of leadership. There have been many women since who have inspired men and nations to noble deeds. But the Israelites apparently quite early in their history, much earlier than other nations, gave positions of leadership to women.

It seems fitting today that we are fighting the battle for the freedom of women. Indeed only last year the women in Quebec were refused the right to vote. There were those of us who he'd out high hopes for the time when women got into politics a little change has been discernible. The social reforms we had hoped would have been slow in coming. We vote about the same slant on and politics as their husbands and brothers. Perhaps the best work under the inspiration of woman. Of course being human as they thought for generations past, now on a parity with men, to be as artificially maintain as they can be. But this phase of our development will pass away. Time, apeing men, dressing like men, living like them, behaving like them, will in turn to their sphere of life. They will take a vigorous part in public affairs particularly in school matters, and those which have to do with the rights of women and children. They in the days to come provide vitality of leadership which will dignity, humane treatment and ness to the work of government something sorely needed.

In the present crisis women have taken their place with men in the branches of the Armed Services, are in uniform, doing their part in freeing the world of evil. They are earning the right to say what sort of a world this post world shall be. Without question, the effect of war and women has changed their look. But when they emerge this and have a larger part in formulating the plans for the world, they will, if they are true to their natures, move in the direction of a warless world, where men and little children will have the right to grow to maturity and to live to the full all the gifts with which they have been endowed.

CAMDEN VIII
United Ch. Celebrates 100th Anniversary

The One Hundredth Anniversary of Camden VIII United Church was observed on Sunday, July 2nd, when the Rev. Dr. Semple, of Belleville, was the speaker, both at the morning and evening services. The church was filled to overflowing at both services. Music was furnished by Tamworth United choir in the morning and Enterprise United Church choir in the evening. Dr. Semple chose as his subject for the morning, "Rethinking The Church," the scripture text being March 2: 22, "New wine must be put into new bottles." He dealt with his subject under three headings: Firstly, The Church Rethinking Worship; Secondly, Rethinking the Teachings of the Church, and thirdly, Rethinking Youth.

Immediately at the close of the morning service the large congregation passed out to the adjoining cemetery where a short service in remembrance of the pioneer dead, was held as a worthy tribute to those who had sacrificed and worked that a church might be established in their midst.

At the evening service Dr. Semple was assisted by Rev. H. E. Frair of Enterprise, and chose as his subject: "Building a New World."

On Monday evening a successful anniversary tea was held on the church lawn. The new pastor, Rev. W. H. Baugh was chairman, and later on in the evening, he read a number of letters of greetings and good wishes from former ministers and friends of the congregation. An interesting programme consisted of music by the Misses Boomhour of Croydon and Miss Marjorie Hawley of Camden VIII: solos by Mrs. H. E. Frair, and Mr. Neil Cowdy, and Geo. Sharp. Miss Jessie Cowdy contributed a humorous reading.

Rev. H. E. Frair brought greetings from the Enterprise Charge.

An historical review of the church was read by Mrs. T. M. Wilson.

HISTORICAL RESEARCH OF CAMDEN VIII

The history of Camden VIII Church might be divided into four periods:

1. From 1844 to 1881, when it was a mission field, under the oversight of the Kingston Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, and served by different students and ministers from Kingston or the Kingston area.

2. The period from 1881 to 1921, during which time it became an organized congregation.

3. Under co-operation with the Methodist congregations of Tamworth circuit from 1921 to 1931.

4. Period from 1925 to the present time as the Camden VIII United Church.

The earliest days in the life of the church are somewhat obscure as no record of its progress seems to be in existence today. The earliest actual record is the minutes of the session dated 1881. However, some picture of earlier days can be pieced together from various sources. This church was erected in the year 1844 but previous to that date services of worship were conducted in private homes by students and missionaries sent out from the Kingston Presbytery through the then organized churches at Camden V and Newburgh, with Rev. Leishman as Moderator. Services were held in Chippewa at the home of Mr. Robert Reid (Sr.) and at the home of Squire Rombough, north of Centreville and Bell's school house on the Tamworth Road. No record exists of the actual erection of the church, except in the fragments of information which have been handed down from generation to generation of the pioneer families. There seems to have been considerable zeal shown for it is told that there was intense rivalry for the privilege of donating the land for a site upon which the church was to stand. The controversy waxed hot and threatened the unity of the pioneer community. But finally the present site was chosen upon land given by Mr. William Wilson, the grandfather of Mr. R. J. Wilson. As far as can be ascertained the last survivor of those who helped in the actual erection of the building was the late Mr. Wilson Hyland, who as a boy of about eight or ten years, had the job of carrying drinking water to the men engaged in framing the timbers of which the church was built. The original building followed the usual design for churches of that day, having a small raised platform in which the minister went to his pulpit by means of a flight of steps at the rear.

The porch which now stands at the front of the church was not built at that time, but was added some fifty years later.

During the second period from 1881 to 1921, the management of the church seems to have been more localized and according to records of Presbytery and under the leadership of Rev. J. Leishman, acting moderator, a communion roll was prepared consisting of 67 names, gathered from all over the mission field. A Session was elected and according to records the first elders were Messrs. John Fleming, James Milligan, Robert Reid and Thomas Wilson of Pingland. Down through the years others who have served on the session were Messrs. Richard Wilson, Joseph Galbraith, Andrew McGregor, John Reid Thomas Wilson, R. J. Wilson, Daniel Haggerty, William Wilson, Edwin Wilson and Robert McGregor. The first minister to reside on the field (the manse then being in Centreville), was the Rev. W. S. Smith, who first served as a student missionary then as an ordained minister, from 1881 to 1893. It was under Mr. Smith's direction that the church was named Knox Church, Camden VIII, the name and date being placed over the doors at the entrance.

Following Mr. Smith was the Rev. R. L. Ballantyne who ministered to Tamworth and Camden VIII till September, 1900. The manse was removed from Centreville and a suitable dwelling bought in Tamworth.

Rev. J. K. Henry was pastor from 1901 to 1911, followed by Rev. A. M. Little, from 1912 to 1918. A forward step under Mr. LiLtle's pastorate was the introduction of the individual communion set.

Following Mr. Little was Rev. J. T. Caswell, who served from June 1918 to August, 1920.

The third period of co-operation with the Tamworth Methodist congregations was under the leadership of Rev. W. H. Clarke, from 1921 to 1925, when church union was consumated and from then the church has been known as Camden VIII United.

The fourth period from 1925 to the present has been under the following pastorate: Rev. A. Hutchinson, 1926 to 1933. Rev. I. N. Beckstead was the minister from 1928 to 1930. It was under his supervision that steps were taken to clean the cemetery and bring it up to the requirements of an Act of Parliament. A committee was formed to work with Mr. Beckstead, but to his credit is conceded the drawing of the cemetery chart, now in the hands of the committee.

Other ministers in succession have been:

Rev. A. D. Waite, 1930 to 1933.
Rev. M. R. Brown, 1933 to 1936.
Rev. W. H. Truscott, 1936 to 1942.
Rev. A. W. Seaton, 1942 to 1944.

The incoming pastor is Rev. W. H. Baugh formerly of the Coe Hill charge.

TAMWORTH

(For Last Week)

Tamworth, July 16. — A large congregation gathered at the United Church on Wednesday evening for the induction service of Rev. W. H. Baugh, B.A. Rev. W. G. Fletcher of Yarker, also Rev. Mr. Frair, Enterprise were in attendance. Mr. Fletcher conducted the service, while Mr. Frair preached the sermon and gave the charge to the new minister. Mr. Frair preached a powerful sermon from the text, "Feed my Lambs. Tend my Sheep, Feed my Sheep." Jesus thought of Himself as a shepherd, and the Oriental shepherd loved his flock. Mr. Fletcher then took charge of the induction service. Layman Gerald Smith, of Grace Church, Napanee, spoke to the congregation and in his remarks, said: "If everyone would place this motto in a prominent place where it could be seen, there would be less discord in any church. 'Hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil.'" Rev. Frair escorted the new minister. Rev. Baugh to the platform. The latter pronounced the benediction.

Rev. Mr. Baugh preached for the first time on this circuit, at the three appointments, on Sunday, Reidville, Marlbank and Tamworth.

The United Church parsonage is undergoing extensive interior re-decorating.

Her bouquet was Talisman roses, white sweet peas and baby's breath. The matron of honour was Mrs. Michael Barrett of Tamworth, sister of the groom, who wore a floor-length gown of corn flower blue tripple sheer, and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses, pink sweet peas and baby's breath. The groom was assisted by Mr. Vincent McDonald, of Sudbury, brother of the bride. The wedding dinner was served to seventeen guests at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto. Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left for a honeymoon trip to Montreal. The bride travelled in a two piece costume of beige and green, with white accessories. THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS A RUBBER TIRE!

• In these days of change in the rubber industry . . . from plantation rubber to synthetic . . . remember that rubber is just one part of a tire. Remember, too, that while rubber IS important it isn't ALL important . . . that with ANY kind of rubber, a tire's strength, safety and trouble-free performance STILL depend largely on the many materials in and under the tread. In turn, the skill with which these materials are used depends on the knowledge and experience of the maker.

We give you this information so that YOU, the user of tires, will know that the next Goodyears you buy won't be "completely different" . . . or "experimental". They'll possess the many qualities, in even greater measure, that have made Goodyear Tires first choice of Canadian motorists for 29 years in a row.

In addition, the new Goodyears will incorporate all the benefits of our experience in the field of synthetic rubbers—experience springing from a research program which saw development in 1927 of basic patents which led to Goodyear's construction of this continent's first all-synthetic rubber tire and first commercial synthetic rubber plant.

Today, Goodyear Synthetic Rubber patents have been contributed to the Government for the common good—but the experience gained in developing these patents and in continuing research is part of the "hidden value" in tires made by Goodyear.

HOLDEN OF DESERONTO, HAS THE SALE GOING GREATER!
Mystery abounds about the Flood. According to history the Flood was about 4,000 years ago. The Ark was about 360 feet long, 65 feet wide and 40 feet high. It rained until all the hills were covered, so the water must have been over five miles deep. The water was on the Earth 11 months. Noah and his family, with millions of animals and creeping things, with feed for all, were sealed up in the Ark, for a year and ten days. Every tree and living thing were destroyed. Some of the mysteries are: Where did the Dove get the green Olive branch? . . How did the cedars of Lebanon escape the deluge? How did the great forests, from 10 to 15 thousand years old, escape destruction? . . Where did the vast armies who were in battle a few years after the flood come from? . . How did all in the Ark exist until the Earth produced again? . . Some commentators claim that Noah's father lived five years after the Flood. If so, how did the old gentleman, who was over 700 years paddle round in that deep water? . . Where did he board and room for over a year?
If Hitler should win, (which he won't) would historians make him a second Noah that saved the world from fire, in place of water?
All this may be mystery but there is no mystery about the bargains we are giving the public! — Ice boxes at $8 each. Golf clubs — Furniture, and scores of other things we have in stock, at prices unheard of. — Come in and see — W. J. HOLDEN, Deseronto, Ont. 29a

SIX-MONTH TESTS SIFTED ARMS FOR INVASION

BY NED RUSSELL

The American and British Air Forces carried out elaborate secret experiments for six months before the invasion of Normandy to discover exactly what type of weapons—bullets, bombs or rockets — should be used against specific types of targets, it has been disclosed.
A soft-spoken 34-year-old senior armaments officer of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force told Allied war correspondents how huge zones, sometimes 100 miles square, were set aside in Britain and equipped with dummy soldiers and real tanks and vehicles to attack in order to decide what weapons were the most effective.
Day by day as Supreme Headquarters is explaining the preparations for the invasion of western Europe, the minute details of the planning of the second front are becoming known. Mostly they are details which few people ever considered necessary when so many so-called authorities, not to mention the agitators, were demanding that Great Britain and the United States "invade now." Without this detailed pre-invasion planning the bridgehead in Normandy would not now, after two weeks, be a full-scale front.
"Our main job," said the officer, "was to discover what weapons should be used against specific targets. All the possible targets had to be surveyed and put into their proper categories. We found that they could be classified something like this: Thick concrete positions, beach defences, with their surrounding barbed wire and mine fields; coastal guns, communications, including roads, railways, bridges, etc.; airfields, including hangars and parked aircraft; radar (radio location) apparatus; ordinary and pontoon bridges and personnel, concentrations of troops.
"We had to take each one of these types of targets, all of which we knew we would have to deal with, and plan just what sort of weapons we would use—rockets, bombs or bullets. We had to know beforehand which weapon would be the most effective against which type of target. We carried on experiments for six months before we were finally satisfied that we had everything in order."
No single type of target was simple, it was explained. Many of them became a sort of composite of some or all of the various types in sight. For example, it was certain that wherever "personnel" or "troops" were found there would be vehicles or tanks or some sort of defences to knock out, too.
"Unlike the United States strategic Air Force or the R.A.F. Bomber Command, the Tactical Air Forces of the Allies are really not interested in bombs weighing more than 1,000 pounds. However, many different effects are achieved by different types of explosives and fuses, and we had to try out and take into account all these factors. We had to experiment with and decide exactly how to use armor-piercing bombs, anti-personnel bombs and fragmentation, incendiaries and delayed action bombs.
"For example, sometimes the Army wants craters, so that the troops can use them for cover from enemy fire, and other times the Army tells us not to make craters because they might slow up their movement."
The problem of craters was one of the most controversial and difficult issues. In view of the fact that the American and British air forces were scheduled to shower 7,500 tons of high explosive bombs in the immediate area of the landing just before H hour repeated tests were made on English beaches which resembled the beaches of Normandy. The first tests were not decisive, because the texture of the sand chosen did not quite match the texture of the beaches which were actually to be bombed, so the whole experiment had to be done over on another beach, more like the Normandy beach, to discover a technique of bombing which would not make craters big enough to slow up the race inland.

CANNING METHODS TESTED APPROVED BY DOMINION'S EXPERIMENTAL KITCHENS

"Can all you can" might well be the housewives' motto for the next three months. Current activities centre round raspberries and currants both red and black.
Black currants are away ahead of other foods as a source of vitamin C and retain a substantial amount even after being made into jam or juice. It is comparatively easy during summer to get the required amount of vitamin C . . . much more difficult to do so in winter time, so today's canning directions from the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture include methods for currant juice and black currant jam.

CURRANT JUICE

Wash stem and measure currants, crush slightly in preserving kettle. Add two-thirds cup water to each cup of currants. Heat slowly to simmering point, simmer ten minutes and strain through a moist jelly bag. Reheat to boiling point, pour into hot bottles or sealers. Cork or cap bottles, partially seal screw or spring top, completely seal vacuum type sealers. Process ten minutes in boiling water bath. Complete seal on screw or spring top sealers. Cool and store. Sweeten to taste as used.
The addition of one-quarter cup sugar to each quart of red currant juice helps preserve the colour. Add sugar after juice has been strained.

BLACK CURRANT JAM

Two quarts black currants, one and one-third cups water, five cups sugar.
Top, tail and wash the black currants. Simmer the fruit and water for ten minutes. Add sugar and cook about fifteen minutes longer or until thick. Pour into hot sterilized jars. When cold cover with melted wax and metal cover or brown paper. Yield: about three pints.
A simple method of canning raspberries which gives excellent results is the Raw Canning Method. This method may also be used with rhubarb but not with any other foods.

Magistrate's Court

In the Magistrate's Court last Thursday, Andrew D. Lemmon, of Odessa, appeared before Magistrate Garvin, charged with possession of 18 fictitious liquor and beer permits and with possession of uncancelled loose gasoline coupons.
He was granted a remand for one week on bail of $500.

A young man at present living in Napanee, but formerly of Camden East, was charged with failing to comply with a previous court order under which he was to give his wife $60.00 per month. He pleaded guilty to the charge on the grounds that he was not making sufficient money to pay the amount of the order.
At present he is working 44 hours per week at 40c per hour and as he does not live with his wife and child he boards in town and pays $7.00 per week board and $1.50 per week for laundry
Asked by the Magistrate if he could not get a job which would pay him a better wage the young man replied that he could make $25.00 per week in a garage, but Selective Service would not allow him to take the job, as the garage had no permit to hire a mechanic.
After hearing the evidence and the reason why the couple were not living together, the Magistrate decided that the order for $60.00 payment per month was too high. The young man agreed to pay $5.00 per week, which the Magistrate considered was as much as he could pay.

Magistrate Garvin granted a remand, on bail, until Thursday, July 30th in the case of Gerald Courneya, Tamworth, who was charged with wilfully obstructing a police officer, namely Provincial Constable W. E. Smith in the execution of his duty, and also with assaulting Provincial Constable W. E. Smith, with intent to prevent the lawful apprehension of himself (Courneya) for the offence of obstructing a police officer in the execution of his duty. Bail was supplied by H. W. Vine and Dr. C. M. Stratton.

Pte. Claude Ruttan, Lonsdale, a member of the artillery at Petawawa, pleaded guilty to theft of a gasoline ration book, beer and liquor ration books, the property of Arthur Morrison, Wilton, and was sentenced to serve two weeks in gaol.
Ruttan admitted stealing the books from a coat in a car in Napanee, on July 9th. He said he threw the beer and liquor ration books away and tore the cover off the gasoline ration book. Provincial Constable Smith, in his evidence, stated Ruttan produced the loose gasoline coupons from a cupboard in his home. Major Walmsley of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment appeared in Ruttan's behalf and stated he had been away from his unit without leave.

Laurent Desjardins paid $15 fine and $2.00 costs for speeding on the highway.

Pte Elwin Noah Lessard, Kaladar, paid $10 fine and $5.50 costs for unlawful possession of a beer ration coupon book.

Selective Service Mobilization Regulations Revised

Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour, today tabled in the House of Commons Order in Council P.C. 1256 of March 4th, 1944, revising and consolidating the National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations.

The last previous consolidation of the Regulations was made by P.C. 10924 of December 1st, 1942, at the time that the military call-up was transferred from the Department of National War Services to the Department of Labour.

In addition to including amendments made to the Regulations from time to time since December 1st, 1942 previously announced, the present revision makes some changes, both in policy and procedure.

In future a married man not supporting or maintaining his wife or children, who was not previously liable to call, now becomes liable if within the age groups in which single men only have been subject to call up to the present — that is if born in any of the years from 1906 to 1912, inclusive, providing that a man has not reached the age of 28 years.

Up to this time a man found medically unfit, but who after remedial treatment would probably be medically fit for service, was offered treatment on his promise to join the Forces after being treated. Now a man must agree to join up first before being given remedial medical treatment.

No special provision existed in the older Regulations to deal with the cases of certain men either in remote areas, or where medical examination is not feasible. Authority is now given to grant postponement without medical examination to seamen serving in the Merchant Marine. Also, Indians and others living in remote areas may now be postponed, if reasons exist, without first undergoing medical examination. Conscientious objectors may be dealt with in future, without first being medically examined.

A provision that postponement of military training may now be given until further notice, will assist essential industries and reduce the work of the Mobilization Boards. Previously, only coal miners and farm workers could secure unlimited postponement, with the result that Boards periodically had to review all other postponements, even though it could be foreseen that the circumstances would warrant an indefinite postponement.

The new Regulations for the first time, give the military authorities power to hold a man who has been convicted in court of failure to report for military training under the regulations. Such a man may now be held either in police or military custody. Previously, the man had to be served with a formal notice in addition to being convicted in court and a court order that he report for military service, after his civil trial, or even after a prison term, did not have automatic effect; the situation is now reversed.

HALF-MILLION BELGIAN CHILDREN MAY DIE THIS YEAR FROM STARVATION & DISEASE, SAYS OFFICIAL

Belgian officials estimate that twenty percent of Belgium's population will perish by the end of this year. Of the children alone this may mean nearly half a million dead. They will die of starvation and disease, for their poor undernourished bodies will be too weak to resist the insidious advances of tuberculosis, dementia, scurvy, typhus. Tuberculosis has increased already 800 per cent. and there are no medical supplies with which to combat it.

Belgium is not so slowly becoming a vast graveyeard and it is the heroic women of Belgium who have to carry the whole weight of the critical situation. Their men imprisoned, executed, sent to labour camps in Germany or women are left, as one report says, "to mourn the dead, await the prisoners and comfort the living." What comfort can they give their starving families? The food situation is almost as bad as it is in Greece. According to official rationing, the Germans are now allowing about 1,200 calories per person a day, but this rationing is theoretical and the Germans admit it. The minimum number of calories for health by Canadian standards, is 2,900.

To have to line up for black bread, shivering with cold in the bleak hours of the early morning is not an enviable lot, but its alternative for Belgian women is no food at all. The situation is so serious, that in one province Belgian women risk death to carry the black flag of revolt through the streets of their cities. According to German reports, this irregular situation will be dealt with.

Even in the winter of 1941 the coal shortage was so bad that in the poorer districts of Brussels women were forced to see their children die of cold as well as hunger. Many women were unable to obtain enough fuel to cook what meagre amounts of food they had been able to find. Schools were obliged to close and children froze to death in their beds.

Other women have been forced to send their children out to beg. The sight of a pathetic little five year old, with great hungry eyes, lisping for bread at a railway station or cafe must indeed wring a mother's heart. But as well as death by hunger and cold there has also been death by cold steel for Belgian children. Cases of deliberate murder by German soldiers are on record. A ten year old, for shouting "Dirty German" was shot by a German sentry; a seven year old killed by another while playing on a railway bridge near his home. The report states that his father was given permission to remove the dead body of his son.

Now be sure to write plain on those bottles, said the farmer to the druggist, "which is for the horse and which is for me. I don't want anything to happen to that horse before I get all the hay cut."

GAS TANK BLAZE AT LOCAL GARAGE

On Saturday morning, shortly after ten o'clock, the firemen were called to the Central Garage to extinguish a blaze caused by gasoline fumes igniting while a gas tank was being welded. The tank had been emptied and washed out before the men started working on it, but apparently some fumes had remained in it. When the welding torch was applied to the tank, the fumes ignited and shot a flame several feet in the air.

The firemen, using a chemical pump, were able to extinguish the blaze and no damage was caused to the building nor were the men hurt who were doing the welding.

SANDWICHES FORM HOUSE-WIFE'S LIFESAVER FOR A QUICKLY PREPARED MEAL

BY LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief, Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture

Sandwiches, besides being the mainstay of the carried lunch are the housewife's lifesaver on busy days for a quickly prepared lunch or supper.

Those who have to make sandwiches everyday realize that a considerable share of the weekly butter ration disappears this way. But butter, like so many other foods is amenable to stretching in various ways. The Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture offers stretching exercises guaranteed to reduce the inroads made on the family ration. One of the most satisfactory stretchers is milk.

Cream half a pound of butter until soft and fluffy and gradually cream in half-cup milk beating until all the milk is absorbed and adding a dash of salt. Mould and if not being used immediately, chill. This stretched butter is good for table use but should not be used for cooking.

Butter may also be creamed with salad dressing, chili sauce, prepared mustard, relish or horse-radish, according to the filling to be used. Not only will the butter go further but sandwiches will be more flavorsome.

Even if eaten everyday, sandwiches need not become monotonous; appearance as well as flavour can be changed. Children love a sandwich made of one slice white and one slice brown bread or a crusty roll hollowed out, brushed inside with melted butter and filled.

Do spread fillings generously — right to the edge. There'll be fewer uneaten crusts, And don't have the fillings so moist that the sandwich becomes soggy before lunch time. Lettuce helps keep the bread from getting soggy, acting as a waterproof protection against moist fillings.

• • •

Here are a few suggestions for fillings some old and some new:—

Sliced hardcooked egg and pickled beet with salad dressing.

Chopped egg a pinch of curry and a bit of crushed bay leaf, salad dressing.

Chopped egg, grated raw carrot and salad dressing.

Chopped egg, ground liver and salad dressing.

Cottage or cream cheese with chives, relish, pickles grated turnip or carrot, green peppers, jam or jelly.

Potato salad and sliced cooked meat.

Raw vegetable salad slightly moistened with salad dressing.

Baked beans and finely chopped beets, salad dressing.

Baked beans mashed with chili sauce and salad dressing.

Grated raw carrots, ground raw raisins and honey.

A filling that may be made ahead and will keep for several days in a cold place is a time-saving convenience; here is a good filling of this type.

CHEESE AND EGG SPREAD

One tablespoon mild - flavoured fat; one teaspoon grated onion (optional); one and one - half tablespoons flour; two tablespoons sugar; half-teaspoon salt; one-quarter teaspoon mustard, three-quarters cup milk; one tablespoon vinegar; one cup grated cheese; four hard cooked eggs, chopped.

Melt fat and cook onion in it for one minute. Add flour sugar, salt and mustard and stir until well blended; add milk. Cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add vinegar and cheese and continue cooking until cheese melts and the mixture is smooth. Add eggs and cool. Store in a covered jar in a cool place. Makes two and one-quarter cups filling.

V

MAIN CARE FACTORS IN GARDENING

If the garden is cultivated once in early June, with all weeds dug under and hard lumps of soil pulverized, it will only need a few light cultivations during the remainder of the season to keep it growing and weeds in check. This light running over is best done when the ground is soft after a rain.

One cannot grow good vegetables or flowers if plants are crowded together. Before growth is too advanced, such things as carrots, beets lettuce and self-sown or fine-seeded annuals must be thinned so as to permit proper and sturdy development. This thinning will also make cultivation easier and it will encourage quick, tender growth among the vegetables.

Bugs, fungus and other garden pests are easily kept in control if the proper sprays — consult a government bulletin or your nearest seedman or florist — are applied immediately after first evidence of damage. Also, a healthy growing garden, well cultivated well spaced and free of weeds, is far less susceptible to attack of any kind than the neglected sort.

Tall flowers and vegetables, like delphinium, hollyhocks, tomatoes, etc. should be staked and tied loosely to these stakes to prevent wind and other storm damage. Climbing sweet peas, nasturtiums and other similar things should be supported by brush, wire or strings.

To encourage continuous flowering, blooms should be picked freely in the case of sweet peas pansies, nasturtiums, etc., and removed when fading in the case of flowers not ordinarily used for cutting purposes.

Improving The Soil

To improve soil, especially light or very heavy types, it is an excellent thing to dig in or plow under what farmers call "green manure". This is simply vegetable growth — weeds, grass or certain crops like oats rye or clover sown for this very purpose. Gardeners with a fair amount of land at their disposal often set aside a different portion each year for building up purposes. This is cultivated at ten-day intervals each spring up to about the first of July, then sown with a cover crop of oats, rye, clover, etc. Later when this crop is up ten or twelve inches it is plowed or spaded under as green manure.

V

NUTRITION — MILK

Do you feel you just can't get your children to drink their quart of milk a day? Then why not get them to EAT it! Milk is SO important that every one of us should make a real effort to see that, somehow or other we do get our daily requirement.

It always has first place on any list of foods necessary for a good diet. This is because milk is an almost perfect food—the most complete of all our foods. When that daily quart of milk is taken apart by scientists, and analyzed they find that it will supply a person with:

ALL of the calcium they need in a day.
ALL of the riboflavin they need in a day.
Half of the Vitamin A they need in a day.
Half of the Thiamin they need in a day.
More than half of the Protein they need in a day.
One-third of the Calories they need in a day.

Is that not a count striking enough for us to make every effort to see that these needs are supplied. And most important of all is the fact that milk is the ONLY food from which children can get enough calcium or riboflavin. Without milk it is impossible for them to supply this need from other foods. Calcium builds strong bones and firm teeth. Riboflavin puts pep and energy into life, as well as keeping the eyes and skin in good condition.

So help out the milk situation at your house by serving more milk puddings, cream soups, soufflés creamed vegetables, etc.

V

SUMMER FRUITS RICH IN VITAMIN C

The next few weeks will bring vitamin C to our markets in perhaps its most delicious form . . . fresh strawberries. An average serving with supply three-quarters of the day's needs. Other summer fruits such as raspberries, currants and canteloupe are also excellent sources of this hardest-to-get vitamin, according to Nutrition Service, Ottawa.

Of all the minerals and vitamins essential for health Canadians need to be most watchful of their supply of Vitamin C. This fact was brought to light by a committee of nutritionists from Canada, Britain and the United States who studied the food supplies available to civilians in the three countries.

Britain, in spite of the great scarcity of citrus fruits and tomatoes was better off for vitamin C than either Canada or the United States.

Potatoes and leafy green and yellow vegetables were the two groups of foods which provided Britons with 80 per cent of their vitamin C. The report published by the committee indicates that last year the British got 1 and one-half times the vitamin C from potatoes and almost nine times as much vitamin C from leafy green and yellow vegetables as Canadians did.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers: Showers are in the air but they are not raining any thing except gifts and happiness for prospective brides. Many a future briesmaid or favoured wedding attendant is busy this month planning special shower parties for the bride-to-be. With all the multitude of things which demand consideration and time at this busy season, it is a relief to find that there are delicious party refreshments that can be prepared quickly in advance.

Delicate colours are always a part of the shower party so why not serve Cheese Salad Mold along with sectioned fruits (oranges, and grapefruit and sliced apples), cheese toast strips, tiny hot biscuits filled with honey or marmalade, Orange Fluff, Queen of Heart Cakes and Coffee or punch.

The heart-shaped cakes do not call for individual moulds but are made from a sheet layer of cake and cut out with a heart cookie cutter.

QUEEN OF HEART CAKES

One cup shortening, one and two-thirds cups sugar, three cups of cake flour, three teaspoons baking powder, half-teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon flavouring extract, one cup milk, six egg whites.

Cream the shortening, add sugar gradually and cream together until fluffy and light. Sift flour and measure, mix and sift with baking powder and salt. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with the milk. Add flavouring. Fold in well beaten egg whites. Pour into greased shallow baking pans. Bake 35 mins. in an electric oven (325 deg. F.). Remove from pan and when cold cut with heart-shaped cutters. Make Seven-Minute Frosting and divide it into thirds. Add different colored fruit coloring to each and frost cakes. Top only in wartime.

SEVEN MINUTE FROSTING

One and one-half cups granulated sugar, five tablespoons cold water, two egg whites, unbeaten, one teaspoon vanilla extract, one tablespoon corn syrup, fruit colouring.

Combine all ingredients, except the flavouring and colouring, in top of double boiler. Mix thoroughly. Place over boiling water and beat briskly until mixture holds its shape. Remove from fire. Add flavouring and colouring. Beat until cool.

ORANGE FLUFF

Two eggs, grated rind of one-half lemon, one tablespoon of hot water, two tablespoons of lemon juice, three tablespoons sugar, grated rind of half an orange, three tablespoons orange juice.

Separate eggs. Beat yolks with two tablespoons sugar. Add grated rind and the fruit juices. Add hot water, beating continually. Cook mixture in top of double boiler until it coats spoon, stirring constantly. Pour over egg whites which have been beaten stiff with remaining tablespoon of sugar Pile into glasses. Chill in electric refrigerator and serve.

TAKE A TIP:

1. When a recipe calls for nuts and you can obtain some peanuts, rub off the hulls and excess salt with a damp cloth and use a small quantity. If recipe calls for one cup of nuts, you may use one half a cup chopped peanuts and use one extra tablespoon of flour.

2. If cooking utensils are soaked immediately after the food has been removed they may be easily cleaned. Cold water is best for eggs, milk or doughy substances. Hot water acts more quickly on greasy foods.

Icing

one-eighth teaspoon salt, one egg white, half-cup light brown sugar, one-quarter teaspoon cream of tartar, one-quarter teaspoon almond flavouring.

Add salt to egg white and beat stiff (use high speed of electric mixer). Add corn syrup gradually continuing to beat. Add flavour. Beat until icing holds a peak.

NEW BOOKS AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Bell-For Adano — Hersey
Mr. Hersey spent three months of the summer of 1943 in the Mediterranean theatre, covered the Sicilian campaign, and lived for some time in a village like the Adano of his story. His novel has the kind of truth that could come only from first-hand knowledge, coupled with profound understanding and feeling. If the story also has rich meaning for the future, for it deals with men who are already facing problems that will follow in the wake of the war. It makes startlingly clear the fact that charters and agreements are only as effective as the men who are sent to implement them.

Love Must Wait — Hill
This is a sweeping picture of the early days of Australian exploration and the conflict between a man in love and the strong call of new horizons.

WOL K-9 Commando—Shurtleff
A story of a dog trained for a messenger to act with the American commandos. This will be a stirring story for all dog-lovers, as well as for all who like to read of dramatic incidents of war.

Distant Star — Doner
An unraveling and dramatic story of the Michigan mining country, told with a blend of romantic excitement and warm insight.

Ps For Private Tussie — Stuart
Winner of the 1943 Thomas Jefferson award and December Book-of-the-Month Club selection.

e Youngest W A A C — Bailey
A story of a young girl's patriotism.

d Raskull — McMeekin
An exciting story of tidewater Virginia.

hat Became of Anna Bolton — Bromfield
With all his ability to tell a good story, Louis Bromfield has recreated a fabulous life, which attained final, unexpected fulfillment, and a character not to be forgotten.

Happy Stories Just To Laugh At — Leacock
All the stories in this book have one element in common. They are NOT true to life, but it is hoped there is enough sunshine in these pages to draw straight a little of the crookedness of real life.

Archibald The Great — Kelland
Here is Kelland at his best in a story packed with excitement and studded with the incomparable, sharp dialogue and humor for which he is known.

Endure No Longer — Albrand
Miss Albrand's personal understanding of the confusion that was Germany between wars has produced a rich and moving novel that is at once an intimate portrait of a gallant young girl and a broad tapestry depicting an entire society.

Tambourine, Trumpet and Drum — Kaye-Smith
A story of four daughters against a background of war. A magnificent novel of the Victorian era and today.

While Still We Live — MacInnes
This is not only a hair-raising tale but a surging drama of the hopes and fears, the pride and the courage of a conquered yet unconquerable people. It is warm with sympathy for the men and woman caught in the Nazi holocaust, yet its portrayal of the brutalities they are enduring is starkly, vividly real.

Dragonwyck — Seton
A novel of America's feudal age.

The Shadow and The Glory — Jennings
A novel of the Revolutionary war, in which there is an obvious analogy between that Eighteenth Century war against tyranny and this Twentieth Century one.

Girl Intern — Seifert
Prejudice, gossip and unexpected romance prove to be only a few of the obstacles in the path of this courageous woman doctor.

Here Is Your War — Pyle
"Out of the foxholes he shared with them, and from his own heart straight to the folks back home, comes Ernie Pyle's story of our soldiers' first big campaign abroad. Here Is Your War is great reporting indeed but more than that, it is a book of timeless and permanent excellence.

The World of The Arabs — Synd
In the post-war era the political and economic links between our country and the Arab world will be drawn closer. Yet the average person is unfamiliar with the culturally highly advanced and in many ways unique world of Islam. This book is pulsating with the life of first-hand experiences, and is a thrilling account of every aspect of life in the Arab world.

Wingate's Raiders — Rolo
An account of the fabulous adventure that raised the curtain on the battle for Burma. Wingate's Raiders is based on official, confidential reports; its first-hand details, its full-bodied characterizations were supplied by Squadron Leader Robert Thompson, R.A.F., and Major John B. Jefferies, Royal Irish Fusiliers who played big roles in the expedition.

C/o Postmaster — St. George
Tells all about the United States Army in Australia, neatly, wittily and with great good-humor and enthusiasm.

The King Tree — VanBoecop
The King Tree is a novel of atmosphere and character, set in the Dutch East Indies. The story concerns three generations of planters.

Retreat From Rostov — Hughes
In November, 1941, the German army captured Rostov-on-the-Don, the gateway to to Caucasus. A week later, the Russians drove them out, inflicting the first defeat suffered by Hitler's legions. In the thirty-four days of its surging action, "Retreat From Rostov" tells the story of that invasion and defeat, but ever more these pages are dominated by the men and women who refuse to believe in the invincibility of the enemy.

The Fountain Head — Rand
An excitingly dramatic novel, this book is based on a challenging belief in the importance of selfishness in the provocative idea that man's ego is the fountain head of human progress. Whether you hate it or love it you won't forget this novel.

The Ten Commandments — Mann and Others
Ten short novels of Hitler's war against the moral code, each one written by a different writer. Indignation—moral indignation—has provided the leaven that unifies the various contributions of the ten authors.

Sea Eagle — Aldridge
The Sea Eagle is a virile novel of heroic men whose stature steadily increases as they cease struggling for survival to fight for an ideal. It is the second sharply chiseled milestone in the career of James Aldridge, whose first novel, Signed With Their Honour, was greeted with a praise seldom accorded an author's first efforts.

The Night Is Ending — Ronald
The creator of the magnificent General in 'Old Soldiers Never Die' has again drawn a warm, three-dimensioned portrait in this powerful story of a selfless woman who cast her bread upon the waters and found a reward satisfying beyond riches. The Night Is Ending is a piece of distinguished writing. James Ronald Tias a deft talent for creating genuine, warm individuals, whose lives evolve through human conflicts, common to all mankind, to achieve a universal significance.

FLAIL TANKS PROVE WORTH

The existence of the British flail tank was recently made public. This is one more example of a weapon being kept secret long after it has been in use on a sizeable scale; for the flail tank was first used extensively not on the Normandy beaches but as long ago as El Alamein. It emphasizes once again that for every British invention we hear about, there are, scores in use not yet revealed for reasons of security.

This particular device is really the creation of a South African. It is, in principle, extremely simple; a drum is built onto a tank at the end of which is a revolving drum. Lengths of heavy chain are fastened to the drum — one end attached, the other hanging free. When the drum revolves the chains flail the ground in front of the ank, thus exploding anti-tank and anti-personnel land mines.

In Normandy the device is used on the Sherman tank. At El Alamein they were mostly on Mathildas and Valentines, which when fitted with the flails were called 'Scorpions.' The latest improved models are 'Crabs.' The flail-drum on the 'Crab' is driven by the tank's own engine; this is an improvement over the 'Scorpion,' which required a separate motor for the drum.

The 'Scorpions' threshing the Rommel tank field at El Alamein are reported to have cleared 100 per cent. of the mines in their path, without damage to themselves. Even mines three deep did not more than blow away an occasional flail. One tank destroyed 47 mines on a single run.

REHABILITATION OF OCCUPIED COUNTRIES

London — To all the countries for which Axis accupation has meant destruction, hunger and death, the Allied liberation will bring rebuilding, food and life.

In the wake of the United Nations' armed forces will follow special relief units and specialists in rehabilitation. Preparation for this relief work has been going on as part of the Allied invasion plans.

Three immediate and imperative needs of occupied peoples will be food, clothing and medical care. After these will come the need for seeds agricultural implements, household goods, educational facilities, and a thousand things which have either been destroyed or "New Ordered" by the Axis.

A British, Canadian and American organization has been set up, one of its objects being production and supply of textiles of all kinds for liberated countries.

The Technical Advisory Committee of the Allied Post-War Requirements Bureau, which has now been merged with the U.N.R.R.A., has discussed many aspects of medical treatment which will be needed in liberated Europe, including emergency equipment for midwives, supplies for improvised maternity homes, and special treatment for victims of tuberculosis and typhus.

There is little doubt that when the Nazis in Europe retreat they will leave burning or flooded grain fields, and complete devestation behind them. At the earliest possible moment the fields of Europe must be sown again with seeds, whose harvest will feed the people.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to: Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brookville, Ont.

Q. Are the rates charged in overnight cabins subject to control? I ask because I am quite certain that I have paid more this year than I did last year.

A. Yes, such rates are controlled. Please communicate the circumstances to the nearest office of the Prices Board.

Q. Why are restaurants allowed to reduce the size of their servings although retaining the same prices for their meals?

A. Such reductions in size are not permissible and should be brought to the attention of your Prices Board office.

Q. My land lord threatens to increase the rent of the farm of which I am the tenant and says he can do so if he likes. Is that true?

A. Lands and buildings used exclusively for farming purposes are not subject to rent control.

Q. Can you tell me if boat liveries can increase the rentals they charge for boats and canoes without authority?

A. No. They cannot charge more than they charged for similar craft during the season of 1941.

Q. My landlady says I should turn over to her all my canning sugar coupons. Is she justified in making such a demand?

A. If you are a permanent boarder she is not unreasonable in making such a request. If you are a boarder of less permanence, you should divide your valid F coupons so that your present landlady will receive a fair share of them.

Q. How do I go about getting a ration book for my new-born baby?

A. You should make application to your Local Ration Board.

Q. As a fruit farmer, I need a ladder of extra length. Will there be any difficulty in getting one in view of the restrictions on the sale and distribution of ladders now in effect?

A. You would probably be classed as an essential user of ladders and no doubt every consideration would be given the application made in your behalf by your dealer.

Q. Can I get eavestroughs for my new house?

A. I am afraid not. The use of metal eavestrough is now restricted except for repairs and maintenance.

Have any garments not to be worn again till next Fall cleaned or washed.

Put away immediately in cedar bags or cedar chest or — a sprayed in dress boxes with some camphor chemical sprayed on, or mothball crystals and—

THE NAVY'S PART IN THE INVASION OF EUROPE

Written Specially For The Montreal Daily Star
BY SIR ARCHIBALD HURD,
Author of "Command of the Sea," "The Battle of the Seas," etc.

The coming invasion of Europe by the armies of liberation means, first and last, ships, ships of war and ships of commerce, the latter converted to serve as transports and store ships. The largest armada which has ever been assembled will be engaged in the most ambitious scheme of its kind which has been undertaken.

An amphibious operation, such as the invasion of Europe, is the most difficult of all tasks. Success depends, in large measure, on secrecy and on the co-operation of ships of all types, the military commanders and the officers in command of the aircraft of "the umbrella." As to the first point ,secrecy is being preserved and the enemies are left guessing. As to the second, events in Africa have proved that all arms, irrespective of nationality, can and do work together with a degree of efficiency never before known. They form one carefully and cordially co-ordinated weapon for attack.

We may be assured that the naval forces will not fail, for never before has the foommand of the sea, apart from the predatory raids of the U-boats on the trade routes, been maintained so successfully. Germany possesses comparatively few surface men-of-war — battleships ,cruisers and destroyers. That they will emerge in an effort to interfere with the invasion is unlikely. It is, on the other hand certain that the Germans will concentrate as many of their U-boats as possible for attack, and that bombers will be used to harass the transports and landing craft. Germany will by these means try to cause confusion and loss if they learn sufficiently early when and where the invasion, or possibly invasions, will take place. It is apparent that they have, as yet, insufficient information to enable them to complete their detailed plans apart from the manning of their long defensive wall, which may prove as unreliable as the Maginot Line.

What contributions will the naval forces of the United Nations make to the success of this vast and complicated amphibious operation? Command of the sea is essential and that command has been secured owing to the efficiency with which the battle squadrons, with their cruisers and destroyers, are holding the seas, not merely one sea but all the seas, a triumph unexampled in the history of warfare. Look at the map of the world and realize what this means! Though little is heard of the work of these battle squadrons, the fact is that they form the essential foundation of all the Allied plans. They are keeping the ring.

But the naval forces must also shepherd the hundreds of transports and storeships and landing craft heavily loaded with troops and keep the air forces supplied with fuel oil, stores and equipment. Those tasks involve a dispersion of large numbers of surface as well as underwater men-of-war. The big ships must be protected by "aerial umbrellas," but they must also have protection against enemy attacks by U-boats and destroyers.

No one who has not studied the plans for such an amphibious operation can realize what they involve in meticulously accurate staff work. Everything must go like clockwork. There must be no hitch at any stage if maximum success is to be achieved. Invasion, in face of the enemy, may be ruined by one mistake by sea, land or air.

But the Royal Navy, as well as the officers who will command the transports and landing craft are experts in this form of warfare. Invaluable experience was gained in the First World War when British military forces were carried in safety to near and far theatres of war and kept supplied with all they required over a period of over four years, and further experience was recently obtained in the Mediterranean.

The bases of the movements in the First World War were the British ports and the ships sailed into friendly ports—those of France. On this occasion the invasion must be carried out on heavily defended shores. The stage has been set for the most ambitious, complicated, and, in some respects most hazardous of all amphibious operations, a co-ordination of naval, aerial and military forces on a vaster scale than has ever been undertaken in the past. Though everyone knows that the curtain is about to rise on another act in this war drama, no one outside high official circles in the Allied countries, knows when it will rise or what it will disclose. Secrecy has been maintained though enemy agents everywhere have no doubt been trying to pick up little bits of information which could be pieced together so as to reveal the grand plan.

One last word. The Allied armies, the largest, best trained and best equipped armies which have ever taken part in such an amphibious expedition, will attract the eyes of the world, but the whole success of the Grand Invasion scheme will depend on "silent sea-power," the closely co-ordinated work of men-of-war and aircraft keeping open the sea communications, extending over many thousands of miles.

In Tokio they are speculating as to what will happen to the Japanese when the United Nations, having gained their objective in the West, concentrate all their forces on the offensive in the Pacific, in India and in China. The Japanese are on the tiptoe of nervous expectation, which has been intensified by the turn of the tide in the Battle of the Atlantic, where convoys are passing to and fro with little loss and in many cases, no loss at all, while the destruction of U-boats at sea now exceeds the enemy's production, which has been reduced by the successful bombing of shipyards, engine "shops and equipment factories all over the European Continent.

Behind The Lines Of Fighting Greece

A beard, twinkling eyes and an immense capacity for talking and writing is the leader of Greece's newest guerilla group. He is regarded by many as the ablest of the lot.

Col. Napoleon Zervas from his headquarters in his native Epirus Mountains directs the new National Andartes bands, the only guerillas actually in contact with the Germans at the moment.

Zervas ,in forming his new group, broke with the old Zervas or Eddes underground when he said he had learned that certain of the Eddes central committee had been paid by the Puppet Government in Greece to carry on a fratricidal war among unco-ordinated anti-German groups.

Zervas' break with the Eddes is the newest development in the strange metamorphosis that has come over the Greek underground in the last four months.

In 1941, the first year of the occupation, there was no underground resistance. It was not until the late spring of 1942 that the first few uncoordinated bands made their appearance.

In June, 1942 Zervas formed a band in his home district of Epirus. These men eventually became identified as the Zervas movement, with most of the authority vested in a central committee at Athens, known as the Eddese.

Simultaneously, bands began to spring up in Eastern Greece and formed a sort of loose confederation which called itself the E.L.A.S., or national popular army of liberation, and were represented also by a committee at Athens, which is the hub of all Greek political activity, both above and under ground. Their committee was known as the E.A.M.

Numbers of Greek patriots began to flock to the E.A.M. and the Eddes group. The chief difference between the two organizations appears to have been that the E.A.M.'s original political aspirations aimed at better rations and better living conditions for the conquered districts while the Zervas idea always was to inflict as much damage on the enemy as possible.

It is typical of the Greeks that not a single figure of real political stature allied himself with the E.A.M. the reason being that most Greeks are so essentially individualistic that each preferred to organize his own movement. This trait is so strong that there are more than 150 separate underground movements in Greece to-day—all uncoordinated.

It was late in 1942 before the first Allied mission attached themselves to the major underground movement.

The first major act of Greek sabotage was blowing up the Gorgopotamos bridge, one of the main railway lines of the Athens-Salonika railway.

In the spring of 1943 the bands made their greatest contribution to the Allies: A general uprising in Greece at the moment of the Allied invasion of Sicily.

It was after this that internal troubles started among the guerillas and their decline set in, due primarily to the jealousy of various leaders.

The Germans contributed to the guerilla disunity by visiting the most savage reprisals on country villages. This treatment inspired such terror that villagers withdrew support from the guerillas and went to great lengths to keep them at a distance, even to welcoming "protection battalions" of pro-Germans.

The result of these Nazi blows has inspired such horror that some Greeks have begun to wonder if the guerilla movement was a mistake from the beginning.

But Zervas thinks not. He is fighting on.

SIGNS OF STRIFE WITHIN GERMANY APPARENT RECENTLY

General Advance on All Fronts Reported

WEDNESDAY—

The British Second Army, which includes at least one Canadian division, broke through the Nazis' eastern flank in Normandy with the aid of the most terrific air bombardment of the war in which 11,000 tons of bombs were dropped. Farther west United States forces captured St. Lo after eight days, of furious fighting.

The Russians cracked the defences of Lwow, the great Nazi stronghold in prewar Poland. In three days the Russians advanced 31 miles on a 125 mile front.

In a swift drive the Allied Fifth army in Italy reached the Arno river and had Leghorn practically outflanked.

Tojo was fired from the position of Japanese Chief of Staff.

THURSDAY—

As a result of a furious tank and infantry battle the British and Canadians advanced nine miles past Caen on the road to Paris. More than 60,000 Nazi prisoners have been taken up to date in the Normandy campaign.

Leghorn and Ancona were both taken by Allied forces in Italy.

Seven Russian armies numbering 600,000 men were reported smashing at the Germans in the greatest series of offensives launched by the Soviet's army. The Russians advanced 25 miles on the frontier of Latvia on a 45-mile front.

In the battle for Hengyang Chinese troops tore a big gap in the Japanese lines.

Swarms of robot bombs hit London and the south of England on Wednesday, in the greatest sustained attack since the new Nazi weapon was introduced.

Japanese invaders of India were reported to be in full flight. Allied troops drove the Japs back 30 miles from Imphal.

FRIDAY—

British tanks and infantry smashed into the stronghold of Tessan, eight miles east of Caen. Other British and Canadian troops fanned out southeast and south of Caen.

In its eighth major offensive in four weeks the Russian army reached the central Bug River at a point forty-five miles from Lublin, a great rail centre in the heart of Poland. The Russians were also reported to be within two hours' march of East Prussia.

In another general Allied advance in Italy, the Fifth Army drove well round Leghorn and crossed the valley of the Arno, on a 25-mile front.

3,000 planes from Britain and Italy attacked ten targets in the Leipzig, Munich and Friedrichshaven areas, with about 6,000 tons of bombs.

Hitler narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of an army officer.

The Tojo Government in Japan resigned and a new cabinet has taken its place.

SATURDAY—

Following the attempt on Hitler's life hundreds of army officers were reported to have been shot in Germany and Berlin was said to be in a state of siege.

United States troops seized a number of beachheads on Guam, the first United States territory taken by the Japs. If Guam is retaken, the island of Saipan will become a much more important base from which to bomb Japan.

Bad weather in Normandy was said to have more or less stopped Allied operations. But British and Canadian troops continued to consolidate their position south of Caen.

In Italy another general advance was made by the Allied armies and the Germans were said to be closing in on the Gothic Line in central and eastern Italy.

Russian troops smashed over the Bug River on a wide front and advanced nine miles further.

MONDAY—

Apparently Hitler weathered the first uprising against his authority but rumors persisted of clashes in streets of various German cities and that the purge had extended to the fighting fronts.

During the week end the Russian armies made the greatest gains of the summer offensive. 1,450 villages and towns and Pskov, the last Soviet city of any size held by the Nazis, were recaptured. Another force entered Lublin, only 95 miles from Warsaw. Brest-Litovsk was within four miles of the Russian army.

In Italy Fifth Army troops were in Pisa and the Eighth Army continued its advance on Florence. With a change for the better in weather conditions Allied troops in Normandy moved forward in several sectors.

Substantial gains were reported by the United States amphibious forces which established beachheads on Guam, last week.

TUESDAY—

Russian troops in a series of swift advances on Monday, split the German armies in Poland by capturing the rail centre of Lublin and Lukow, only sixty miles from Warsaw. They also crossed the San River in a direct drive on German Silesia, less than 150 miles away.

In Italy, Allied forces were solidly established on the south bank of the Arno River, between Pisa and Florence.

United States forces completely isolated enemy units on Orote Peninsula on Guam Island and improved their positions elsewhere.

Action in Normandy was very slight because of the bad weather conditions.

The R A F and R C A F dropped 3,000 tons of bombs on the naval base at Kiel.

British and Indian troops cleared the Imphal Plain near the India-Burma border and have advanced into the Kuki hills east of the plain.

King George flew to Italy on Monday for an inspection of Allied troops.

Dates of Addresses By Local Members Over C.K.W.S.

Local members of the Dominion House of Commons, who are giving a series of addresses called "Report From Parliament Hill" over CKWS, are George A. Tustin, Member for Prince Edward Lennox and W. R. Aylesworth, Member for Frontenac-Addington. The addresses are given from 6:30 to 6:45 p.m., on the following dates:

Mr. Tustin, July 29th and August 26th.

Mr. Aylesworth, August 19th and September 16th.

PART-TIME HELPERS NEEDED FOR FARMS TO AID IN HARVEST

Available Workers Asked to Register

Citizens of the town and district who are able to give some time this summer in helping to harvest crops, are asked to join the Farm Commandos. Forms for registration may be filled out at the store of Geo. H. Switzer, Dundas Street, or at The Granada Theatre. Farmers who need assistance of this sort are asked to notify Mr. Geo. H. Switzer.

Half-days or even the evening hours from five o'clock on, can be profitably utilized. In any case headquarters office should have on record and readily accessible the information as to availability and the time that can be given.

It is urged that whenever possible the time given should be a whole day, but if that is not possible half-days are worthwhile. When town workers go out in the afternoon, they should plan to stay on for one or two hours after supper as working conditions are best in the cool of the evening. Due to heavy dew farmers often find it impossible to do much field work in early morning and so run on Standard Time during haying and harvest. For the first day or two cars should be taken not to become over-tired or over-heated.

The work will vary according to districts, but the three main tasks will be hoeing, haying and harvesting. In some districts there will be opportunities to harvest fruit, vegetables, tomatoes on this part-time basis. In other districts where there are canning factories there will be a call for four to ten weeks' steady work in canning which many housewives may find within their scope without interfering too much in their housework.

War conditions calling for increased production, heavy enlistment, munitions and supplies requirements, have brought about an acute manpower shortage situation throughout Canada. Agriculture has been amongst the heaviest sufferers in this regard. Ontario farmers themselves facing a situation with regard to planting, seeding, hoeing, haying and harvesting this summer cannot solve. In 1943 they had to call to their assistance at least 30 000 urban men and women. They responded readily and by their work proved to themselves and to farmers that they were capable of helping farmers to meet and take care of their crops from seeding to harvest.

MR. GEORGE CLIFF AGED RESIDENT DIES IN 98TH YEAR

Had Long Connection With Business in Napanee

Mr George Cliff, died Saturday July 22nd, at the age of 97 years, at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ella Palmer, near Bellrille.

Until about a year and a half ago, Mr. Cliff resided in Napanee, where he had lived continuously for about 80 years. He had been remarkably active until the past two or three years. He retained his mental faculties until the end, and was ill for only one day before his death.

Mr. Cliff was born in Kingston on July 7th, 1847, and at the time of the Centenary Celebration of the City of Kingston, in 1937, he was officially recognized as the oldest man living who was born in the city. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cliff who moved to Napanee in 1850. His grandparents came to Canada from Buckingamshire England in 1814, and after living for a while in Montreal, they came to Upper Canada, where they purchased the stone mills, now known as Glenora, in Prince Edward County. In 1836 his father, George Cliff, moved to Kingston where he established himself as a builder and contractor. He remained there for several years during which time he erected such well-known buildings as the Kingston City Hall and the Royal Artillery Barracks. In 1859, Mr. George Cliff, Sr. came to Napanee when he secured the contract for the building of the Campbell House. His son, George Cliff, at a very early age, went to work for a man named McMullen, who conducted a general store business on the site of the building now situated opposite the Campbell House.

In 1869 Mr. Cliff went to Pennsylvania, where he remained for five years, working as a carpenter. He returned to Napanee in 1874, when he worked for some years with his father and later, went into the carpentry and contracting business for himself. He had the contract for the wood work of the Post Office erected in 1888, the Collegiate in 1889, the Harshaw block in 1896. Throughout the years that followed, he built many of the finer residences and buildings in town, numbering well over one hundred.

At the time of his death Mr. Cliff was the oldest living member of Trinity United Church. He attended the three churches which have stood on the site of the present Trinity Church. He joined the Masonic Order 68 years ago and was an Oddfellow for 64 years.

Mr. Cliff was married twice. His first wife died many years ago and his second wife Janet Vanalstine, died about four years ago. In 1939 Mr. and Mrs. Cliff celebrated their Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary. Since Mrs. Cliff's death, Mr. Cliff had resided with his sister - in - law, Mrs. Palmer.

He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Scott, in Tennafly, N.J., and was predeceased by two other children, Gladys and Fred. He was also predeceased by three brothers, John, of Napanee, W. Wesley Carleton Place, Charles of Vancouver, B.C., and by one sister, Mrs. John Walker, Pennsylvania.

His funeral was held on Monday afternoon, at the Wartman Funeral Home, by Rev. C. D. McLellan, minister of Grace United Church, in the absence of Rev. G. M. Chidley, minister of Trinity Church. Interment was made in the family plot at Riverside Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. F. H. Henderson, W. G. Cowle G. F. Smith, C. L. Graham, H. L. VanLaven and W. J. Wiggins.

GERALD COURNEYA FINED $50.00 FOR ASSAULTING POLICE

The police court in Napanee on Thursday last was filled to overflowing with spectators who came to hear the evidence in the case of Gerald Courneya, Tamworth, who was charged with obstructing a police officer (Provincial Constable W. E. Smith) in the execution of his duty and also with assaulting Provincial Constable Smith. The court room was so crowded that the magistrate limited the number of spectators to those who could find seating accommodation.

After hearing three witnesses for the Crown and several witnesses for the defence, the case was adjourned shortly after 6:00 p.m., until Monday, July 24th.

On Monday, after hearing the evidence of several witnesses for the defence, the Magistrate dismissed the charge against Courneya of obstructing a police officer in discharge of his duties and found Mr. Courneya guilty of assaulting a police officer. A fine of $50.00 was imposed in the latter case and costs in the case of $43.90 were also assessed against the defendant.

Constable Smith, in his evidence, said he and Constable Morden went to the Beaver Lake Dance Pavilion on Saturday evening, July 15th, in connection with law enforcement and liquor conditions. After arriving at the dance hall about 11:30, the two police officers sat in the car for a while and during that time saw a number of people going to a car parked about 25 feet behind the police car. Constable Smith said he went to the parked car and found it was locked. In it he saw a bottle on the back seat and also a beer bottle on the floor of the car. He spoke to Morley Mullette, of Ottawa, whom he saw going to the car and asked if it were his car. Mullette denied ownership and was requested by the officer to get the owner as he wished to search it. Believing there was liquor in it Mullette went away apparently to get the owner, but did not return. At about this time Gerald Courneya was seen approaching the car as if he were going to open it. Asked if he owned the car he replied "maybe I do." The officer advised Courneya of his intention to search the car and asked him to open it, or it would be towed to a garage. At this, the constable said, Courneya put up his fists in the attitude of a boxer and began to dance around. About 20 or 25 people gathered in a circle around the car, and Constable Smith stated Courneya said: "Come on boys." Courneya continued to dance around and shortly the crowd dispersed. Courneya also left and Smith said, after he had called Constable Morden to guard the car, he went into the dance hall with the intention of apprehending Courneya. In the hall, Smith asked Courneya to come outside and Courneya again began dancing around with his fists up. At this Smith grabbed hold of Courneya's arm and told him he was under arrest. Courneya struck the officer in the chest and then Smith pushed him to the door of the hall, where a number of people obstructed passage. Courneya again struck Smith, who drew his baton and struck him over the back of the head.

After taking Courneya outside, Constable Smith said Mrs. Courneya came up and reasoned with her husband. Courneya was turned over to Constable Morden, while Smith went back into the hall to identify the people who had obstructed the doorway. Later Courneya disappeared and Smith went to his home in Tamworth the next day, to place him under arrest.

The evidence of Constable Morden was, in effect the same as that of Constable Smith. He added that a bottle of wine, taken from the car, which later was found to belong to Mullette, was put under guard in the police car. The wine disappeared and asked how. Mr. Morden said: "It looks as if the crowd was standing together and disposed of the evidence."

Dr. D. R. Hall, who examined Constable Smith the day following the alleged offence, stated he found black and blue marks on Constable Smith's chest.

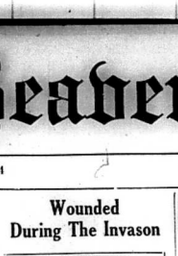
Gerald Courneya's evidence was that after going to the dance hall with his wife, he had several dances after which he went outside and walked over toward some parked cars. On the way he picked up a pop bottle which he removed so it would not be thrown over a car. When he approached the car Mullette's where Constable Smith was standing, he was asked if he owned the car and replied "It could be." He did not recognize Officer Smith as he was dressed in civilians and thought Smith was some tough customer who might be intending to rob him of about $60, which he had in his pocket. As Smith had something in his hand, Courneya said he put up his hands to defend himself and after a bit he left and went back to the hall to tell James O'Neill, the proprietor, that there was someone outside who might be going to try to rob people. While he was talking to O'Neill, someone came up from behind and struck him over the head. Courneya said without warning. Later he found his head had been bleeding and he was dressed by his wife, when he went home.

After he was struck on the head, Courneya said he has no recollection of what happened. He found himself outside the hall, later, but did not know how he got there. He did not know who struck him and was not warned by anyone that he had done anything wrong. He did tell Constable Wife coming up to him and first remembered seeing his wife again when he was at home later, the same night.

Mr. Courneya said he found later that his wallet containing $60.00 was gone.

Witnesses who gave evidence for the defendant were: James O'Neill, Sr.; Fred Rivers, Edward Kirkham, Francis McKeown, James O'Neill, Jr.; Eugene Finn, Austin McCormick, Edward McGuire and Ray Clark.

Wounded During The Invason



SERGT. GEORGE MACDONALD

The above is a photo of Sergeant George MacDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. M. MacDonald, R.R. No. 1, Napanee, who was reported, some weeks ago as wounded during the invasion of France. A recent letter stated that he was making a satisfactory recovery.

Sergt. MacDonald is one of four sons of Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald who are on active service. They all enlisted early in 1940. Sergt. George has been overseas for three years. The other brothers are: Quartermaster D. J. MacDonald, overseas two and a half years; Gunner Angus MacDonald, overseas three years and seven months, and Quartermaster J. M. MacDonald, Kingston.

The boys were all born in Stormoway in the Highlands of Scotland. Their father, James M. MacDonald served in the First Great War in the Highland Division.

GEO. J. TUSTIN, M.P. VOICES PROTEST OVER MILK RESTRICTIONS

Advocates Change in the Present System

In the House of Commons Debate, last week, on Tuesday, July 18, Geo. J. Tustin, M.P. for Prince Edward Lennox, brought up the matter of milk producers being required to send their milk to certain factories without privilege of being allowed to send it where they wish.

The following is the debate on the question:—

MR. TUSTIN: The minister will remember that under the war appropriation bill I brought up a certain situation with regard to milk being sent to cheese factories and being frozen in the factories and it could not be taken out of the cheese factory and shipped to any other point. I sent the minister a schedule showing the difference between three cheese factories and a condensery plant. At that time I was able to show that there was a difference of almost two hundred dollars per year in the returns from a herd of eleven cows paid to a man sending to a condensery plant and to a man sending to a certain cheese factory.

I have also in the past urged the minister to give consideration to the control of all milk used for processing, and I have contended that the same price should be paid for all processing milk and that this milk should be sent to the point at which it is most urgently needed. Last year of course we all realized that it was necessary to have the milk going to the cheese factories in order to manufacture and ship the amount of cheese we had agreed to send to the Old Country. But late last fall many cheese factories in the country decided to remain open in the winter months and in many cases it has been the habit of farmers to ship their milk to cheese factories in the summer and to ship to the condensery late in the fall and winter months because of the difference in price; and of course in the past there has been very little market for milk in cheese factories. I would ask the minister whether he has given consideration to the suggestions I have offered to him in the past and whether it will be the policy of the agricultural food board, which controls this matter, to keep milk frozen as a prime adjustment to cheese factories this winter if the cheese factories decide to remain open, or whether it will be possible to give the privilege of taking his milk from the cheese factory late in the fall and sending it wherever he decides.

MR REID: What do they do in the condensery?

MR. TUSTIN: Condense it, or it goes into powdered milk.

MR. GARDINER: The position of course was pretty well set out in the subsidies arranged in the spring. We arranged to pay higher subsidies for certain kinds of milk for use in the winter months as against the summer. We did not pay higher subsidies on milk going into cheese in winter as compared with the summer.

MR TUSTIN: But you increased condensery milk fifteen cents a hundred.

MR. GARDINER: I am coming to that. That indicated our policy. We want all the milk put into cheese we can possibly get into it in the summer months, and we are paying as high a subsidy on milk going into cheese in the summer as in the winter. In the milk that goes into canning we are paying just double as much, thirty cents in the winter as against fifteen cents in the summer, which would indicate that if we are to have canned milk we want it in the winter as much as possible, and we want milk to go into cheese as much as possible in the summer. If the cheese factories close in the winter time we shall probably not urge them very much to keep open, and milk that was previously going to cheese factories will go to canning factories.

MR. TUSTIN: It will make it that much worse this winter if the cheese factories decide to keep open, for the simple reason that the bonus being paid to the condensery plant will be fifteen cents a hundred more than that paid to the cheese factory, and there will be all the more reason for the farmer to want to send milk to the condensery in the winter months. The question I asked was this. After the summer season of cheese production is over, if the factory decides to remain open in the winter, will the producer still have to ship his milk to the cheese factory; will he still be frozen there in the winter as he was last winter, or will he have the privilege of shipping to some other point?

MR. GARDINER: I would not like to say in advance what will happen in connection with any particular cheese factory. It will depend on the subsidies we are getting at that time both in Britain and here, but generally the policy which was indicated when the subsidies were set was this. We have thirty cents a hundred on milk going into cheese, and this winter it is only twenty cents, which indicates that we are not so anxious to have milk go into cheese this winter as last winter. On the other hand we have paid twenty cents on milk going into cheese this summer as against nothing a year ago. We are anxious to have more milk into cheese in the summer months this year than did go into cheese a year ago. We are less anxious to have milk go into cheese in the winter months this year than last year.

MR TUSTIN: I do not know whether I am making myself quite clear—

MR. GARDINER: You are making yourself clear but I will not say anything as to whether in any particular plant we shall not ask them to make cheese next winter if they stay open.

MR. TUSTIN: But the point is this. The spread will be fifteen cents a hundred greater in the winter months going into the condensery than into the cheese factories—fifteen cents more than it is at the present time. The point I want the minister to answer is this. With the spread increased fifteen cents a hundred, is the farmer who is unfortunate enough to be shipping to a cheese factory still who is frozen there, being unable to ship anywhere else, to be compelled in the face of the greater spread in price to send his milk to the cheese factory in the winter while his neighbour is able to get fifty or sixty cents more for his milk by sending it to the condensery plant? The spread will be increased instead of being reduced during the winter months.

MR. GARDINER: I am suggesting that we are not very likely to be compelling people to ship milk into cheese factories in the winter, but I will not say that in no case will that be done.

MR. TUSTIN: That is what happened last winter.

MR. GARDINER: It depends on the circumstances.

MR. TUSTIN: You did it last winter.

LIFT RATIONS FOR CERTAIN COMB HONEY

Ottawa (CP) — The Prices Board, announced recently that comb honey in standard wooden sections 4½ by 4½ inches or four pounds to the section, will be removed from the ration list July 29 in what was described as a minor adjustment to meet the marketing of a perishable product.

No changes is being made in the regulations governing other comb honey and extracted honey, which remain on the ration list on the basis of two pounds per person per month.

The board said comb honey in standard sections was produced in very small quantities and could be kept in suitable condition for only a short time. Cut comb honey remains rationed because of the production without special equipment and may be cut from ordinary frames containing new foundations.

Several workers for the purchase of honey by mail order may be obtained from local ration boards exchange for preserves coupons on the basis of one voucher for four preserves coupons, the board said. Each voucher is good for the mail-order purchase of eight pounds of honey.

Beekeepers who produce less than 4,000 pounds of honey annually are required to register with their nearest local ration board. Those producing more than 4,000 pounds annually must register either in person or by mail with the nearest branch of the Prices Board's ration administration and file monthly sale reports.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END

At the close of the African Campaign, Prime Minister Churchill spoke of it as the end of the beginning. Speaking to the troops in Normandy, on Sunday, he said the war might end "earlier than we have a right to say." Had he used language similar to that used at the close of the African Campaign, he might have very well observed that this was the beginning of the end. The "this" being the revolt of the high ranking officers in the German Army. In 1918, the German Army was beaten in the field, the officers admitted it and advised the German Government to ask for an armistice. This the Government did; but, the officers and later Hitler, built up the tradition that Germany had never been beaten in the field — that it was the people back home who let the army down. On that tradition the new Nazi army was built up.

The present Germany is not defeated by any means, but the high ranking officers see the beginning of the end. But this time, the Government is a different one from that of 1918. It is a dictatorship, with Hitler, a fanatic who pays little or no attention to the laws of cause and effect. He cannot see the trend of events—or at least refuses to see them—consequently he is not ready to admit defeat, or even to envisage the prospect of defeat. There is, therefore, sharp cleavage between the Nazi-leaders and the high-ranking officers. Hitler knows this and has taken the course which he has taken before when dealing with those who oppose him. He has begun a purge. Himmler is killing off all those suspected even of remotely opposing Hitler. Whether some officer actually planted a bomb in order to destroy Hitler or whether it was a scheme concocted by the Nazis themselves in order to give them a semblance of reason for killing off men high in office and high in public esteem, will probably never be known. At all events, Hitler seems to have, for the time being at any rate, secured the allegiance of his military staff.

While we all wish, with a deep longing, that the war might end and welcome every evidence of weakness in the enemy, yet it will be better in the long run if Hitler and his henchmen are allowed to see this thing through. The German army must be defeated. The military caste, always ready to support a war and to foster and promote one, must be made to see that they are not invincible. Should Hitler be removed and a peace made with the official military group, who could claim that they were not responsible for the war, the situation following 1918 would be repeated. This time, the General Staff must admit defeat, as well as the Nazis. The war could never have been planned and carried on without them. They are the brains behind the whole movement for world conquest.

The encouraging feature of this incident is the revelation of disaffection within the German army. This marks the beginning of the end.

A UNITED PARTY

Premier George Drew found it necessary to resort to the radio, last week, in order to scotch a rumor that was assuming rather disturbing proportions. The rumor began in Ottawa, got into an Ottawa paper and then spread all across Canada, gathering momentum as it went. The rumor was that a certain Toronto clique was planning to oust Mr. Bracken from the position of leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party; that Mr. Drew aspired to the office, and that Mr. George McCullagh, of The Globe and Mail, aimed at becoming a dictator of the party.

Mr. Drew said, over the air, that the rumor was entirely false; that any man who made such a statement was a liar. That should be strong enough to suit everybody. The rumor should now be quietly interred.

There are always lots of rumors floating around, concerning the inner workings of a political party. Sometimes they have a vague basis in fact, sometimes they originate in the fertile brain of some onlooker. Ordinarily they can be ignored. But when they gain such momentum that the unity of a party becomes suspect, it is time to take action. The country welcomes the statement of Colonel Drew. For a united strong opposition is, under our democratic system of government, the best guarantee of wise, sane and progressive legislation.

A NEW RUNNING MATE

The Democratic Convention which was held in Chicago, last week, for the purpose of nominating candidates in the forthcoming Presidential election, nominated President F. D. Roosevelt and Senator H. S. Truman, for the offices of President and Vice-President, respectively. The nomination of President Roosevelt for a fourth term was a foregone conclusion, once he had signified his willingness to run, should he be nominated. This was done about eight days before the convention opened, in a letter to Robert E. Hannegan, Democratic Party Chairman. It is, of course, not our part to pass judgment on American political moves, nevertheless, President Roosevelt is very popular in this country, and we are happy to know that he will be in the running again. He has been sympathetic with the Allied cause from the beginning of hostilities, and was one of the first in the United States to see the far-reaching objectives of the Nazis and their challenge to democratic governments. The United Nations have been singularly fortunate in having Mr. Roosevelt at the head of the greatest democracy in the world, in these critical years.

Ordinarily the position of Vice-President arouses very little interest. But this year it was different. The real contest in the convention centred around the vice-presidency. Henry A. Wallace is the present Vice-President, and sought renomination. He has always represented the progressive elements in the nation. He is a good scholar, a brilliant speaker and writer. He has done a good job in his position. Opposition to him came from the Conservatives in the North and reactionaries in the South. Not all of the opposition was against him personally; it represented, as well, the opposition to the whole administration. The convention could not vent its opposition on Mr. Roosevelt, so Mr. Wallace had to bear the brunt of the disaffection of the party.

The nomination went to Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri. Senator Truman is sixty years old, and was a judge in Missouri before he went to the Senate. He was little heard from in the Senate though he had been there since 1934. But he came into prominence when he sponsored a Senate Committee to investigate war expenditures, and to investigate alleged waste in connection with war spending. He was made head of the committee, passed severe criticism of several Dollar-a-Year Men. It is said that the operation of this committee has saved the nation over $1,000,000,000. This then is the man who will be the running mate of Franklin D. Roosevelt, in November.

What will happen in November, when the vote is taken, may depend, in no small degree, on the international situation, at that time.

HARD TO BELIEVE

For those of us who live outside Quebec, it is difficult to realize the extent to which bitterness against the British has gone in that province. We must, to be sure, make allowances for certain extravagances in speech, due to the heat of an election campaign. At the same time, should candidates for office in Ontario make some of the remarks made in Quebec, they would undoubtedly be arrested. Premier Godbout, speaking at L'Islet, said: "If there is a young man who can be useful on the farm who is now being held in the army, or even if he is a deserter from the army, let him exempt himself and he will be exempt from the service. I want to be clear. I do not say there will not be two or three days' punishment."

Jacques Sauriol, Bloc Populaire candidate in Maisonneuve, speaking in the Maisonneuve Market, Montreal, said: "If Quebec factories are needed for war work, leave our young men there to work in them. The British Empire is an institution so nefarious and so condemnable that it needs a war every twenty-five years to maintain itself. Federal police or no federal police, we of the Bloc are against all foreign wars. We will use every means — and I do not say legitimate — we will use every means necessary to halt this drainage of our young toward the charnal house of Europe."

Well there we have it! — In Canada — in Canada at war. The Premier of a Province suggesting to the soldiers that they should desert, and the head of another political party saying his group will use every means — "not legitimate" — to keep the young men out of the army. In the face of this, it is hard to see how national unity will ever become more than a hope.

EAST PRUSSIA: Spawning Ground Of War

BY JOSEPH BARNES

Special to The Montreal Star and The New York Herald - Tribune

London. — East Prussia, once the home of the Teutonic Knights and always the citadel of the Teutonic spirit, seems certain to be the first part of Germany to be invaded by United Nations forces. The Red Army is not far from its frontiers. Just when it will invade may be decided as much by the Kremlin's experts on political warfare as by the generals, and it will not be solely on the basis of military strategy.

But East Prussia now has more importance as a symbol than it has as a battlefield. It is the only place where foreign soldiers have ever fought on German soil since the Napoleonic wars. It is the historic breeding place of many of the ideas with which Prussianism and Nazism have dominated Germany for generations. Finally, East Prussia will give the United Nations their first chance to show the German people on their own soil what will happen to them if they do not help to overthrow their Nazi masters.

Just thirty years ago this summer, Russian divisions invaded East Prussia, both from the east and from the south. On August 17, 1914, General Rennenkamph crossed the frontier. Two days later he defeated Prittvitz' Eighth German Army at Gumkinen. Another two days later, General Samsonov let a second Russian army into the German rear. This was the only time in more than 100 years the Germans have fought against a foreign army in their own towns and villages.

The Germans replaced the panic-stricken Prittvitz with a refired general named Hindenburg and gave him a young chief of staff, fresh from the victory of Liege, named Ludendorf. In less than a month, in the battles of Tannenberg and the Masurin Lakes, these two men had almost completely destroyed one of the Russian armies and had driven the other headlong back into Russia.

The Russians left a few destroyed and pillaged German villages, but it had cost them nearly a quarter million men and equipment they could not afford to lose. They had also helped the French, their Allies, since the Germans sent two army corps east to help defend East Prussia.

"It may well be argued that this event was decisive upon the fate of the battle of the Marne." Winston Churchill wrote in 1925 of this early example of coordinated Allied strategy, "and if this be true homage will be rendered to the Tsar and his soldiers long after this ingrate generation has passed away."

Mr. Churchill's ingrate generation has not yet passed away and in London, it is more than ready to pay homage to the Russians who are about to invade East Prussia again. The Red Army has marched 1,000 miles from Stalingrad this time, and has survived three years of bitter war for its chance "to finish off the Fascist beast in his own lair," as they put if in Moscow.

No one in London begrudges the Russians the honor of invading Germany first. Everyone in London is excited and hopeful at the prospect of what this first invasion may do to the morale of a German nation used to fighting its war in other countries.

In an historical sense, East Prussia will deserve whatever it gets. It's a bleak country, cold and sandy, studded with small lakes. Only parts of Hungary can show any comparable survival of village feudalism. On its great medieval estates the junker landlords have grown some of the most dangerous fanatics of modern times.

From the East Prussia came the lunatic Dr. Knapp, who tried to do in 1920 what Adolf Hitler succeeded in doing, thirteen years later. It was here that the Frei Korps, the patriotic societies, and the "Schwarze Reichswehr" started after the last war. It was here that young toughs were recruited to murder Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht and to knife the young German republic.

Partly the barren unfriendly fake-Gothic nature of the land itself must be responsible for what East Prussia has become in the German tradition. It is the rural counterpart to the harsh stone cities of the Baltic. It has the same inhospitable forbidding look of Danzig, without the Geldwasser, the statues and the cosmopolitan infections which spread around any great port.

History has completed what geography began and has made East Prussia symbol in the German mind of what Frederick the Great meant when he first urged Germans to settle there. Germans, he said, must have bowls of iron and a heart of steel, and East Prussia has helped to give them both.

Oswald Spengler made almost a cult of East Prussia. In his "Prussianism and Socialism" the chief argument is a contrast between the spirit of trade, buccaneering and adventure, which he found in the Anglo-Saxon Viking or Norman traditions, and the disciplined spirit of obedience and fortitude of the knightly orders which colonized East Prussia.

The Teutonic knights who first ruled this land, lived on military pillage. Without any important port, East Prussia has never been open to ideas from the rest of the world. Its ruling Junker class, which still owns nearly half of the area of the province, in estates of over 250 acres, has felt itself for centuries, like all Baltic Germans, to be a "herrenvolk" among the human cattle of Eastern Europe.

These ideas will be in the mind of every German when East Prussia is invaded by the Red Army. What happens then is likely to be at least a beginning toward the re-education of the German people.

Both Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Marshal Josef V. Stalin have indicated that East Prussia may figure in the eventual peace treaties as "compensation" to Poland for whatever provinces Poland may give up to the Soviet Union. The Poles in London, although unwilling even to use the word "compensation," are ready to claim East Prussia anyway, and they base their claim on a Polish reading of the history of the land, as well as on the more blunt realities of Polish national security.

It is not a big country. Ten years ago the final census counted 2,333,301 inhabitants. The resettlement of the German part of this population, and nearly all of East Prussia feels itself to be German, is not likely to dismay the experts on resettlement who are being produced by this war.

U.N.R.R.A. officials in London, for example, now estimate that they may have to deal with between 10,000,000 and 20,000,000 people uprooted by the war from their homes. Against this figure, problems on the scale of East Prussia are likely to seem relatively simple.

East Prussia, like Sicily, is physically detached from the land mass of its own country. Again like Sicily, it is rough country, breeding fighting men. Finally, East Prussia may, like Sicily, see and feel the blast of modern war, before the nation of which it is a part. What happened in Sicily went far to break the back of Italian resistance last summer, and there are plenty of people in London who hope history will repeat itself in East Prussia.

"NORMAN ATHENS" TO RISE AGAIN

BY LEWIS GANNETT

(Special to The Montreal Star and The New York Herald - Tribune)

Plans are already being made to rebuild William the Conqueror's old capital of Caen according to reports reaching London. Captain Bancel Lafarge an American artist-architect, is adviser on monuments to the 2nd Army, and is superintending the inventories being made of the old citys damaged buildings.

The two great Romanesque abbeys built by William the Conqueror and his wife, Matilda, to compensate for their sin of marrying although first cousins, emerged almost unscathed by Allied gunfire. They flank the town and if German counter-shelling does not raze them, they will provide a nucleus for restoration of the "Norman Athens." The churches of St. Nicolas, dating from the year 1063 and of Notre Dame de la Gloriette, built in the late 17th century, are also intact.

In the heart of Caen the old Renaissance mansions suffered more severely. The Hotel d'Escoville, built in 1538, was completely gutted, but since its measurements and plans have been preserved it could be rebuilt. The Hotel de Than, dating from 1520 which in later years housed a famous restaurant, was almost completely destroyed. So were the 17th century Hotel de Ville and the 18th century university buildings.

Caen's musuim of antiquities is a mere shell today, but its choicest treasures including 60,000 engravings and paintings had been removed by the French government in 1941, and are presumably still in some place of safety. The great university library, however, with its unique selection of Norman history, is gone, though some of the city archives, rating from feudal days, were saved.

The fine old Church of St. Pierre in the very centre of the city, suffered severely, but can probably be restored. Its airy tower, 255 feet high, built in 1308 which survived the bombardment of Caen in 1586, has fallen and its roof is burned and four vaultings are down, but the frame survives.

Eight miles outside of Caen the inventory makers found the 11th century Church of Norrey was hopelessly destroyed. This miniature cathedral was famous for its five-cusped beside its apse. Its abbots having had the unique ecclesiastical privilege of giving throughout the Middle Ages. Many of the church's fallen stones were used to fill in the ditches when Allied soldiers widened the roads to make possible the capture of Caen.

THE POTTER'S ART

The making of pottery is one of the oldest branches of human industry, probably springing from man's primitive need of a convenient mode of conveying food and water to his mouth. It is believed that Egypt was the earliest home of ceramic art where excavation has unearthed specimens of pottery said to have been fashioned as far back as the 20 Century, B.C. In the East, ceramics have always held an important place in the arts while the earliest times production of the potter has been continuous in China.

The Incas of Peru and the natives of Mexico have left us the most beautiful and ingenious specimens, showing that among these tribes the potter's art had known great development. Many of the objects left by the Aztecs were also elaborately modelled and prettily decorated. The settlers of New England and the Southern States found the pottery industry in the United States has shown a wonderful development. Among the products of European countries several stand out prominently for their beauty and artistic merit.

The basic material for making pottery is clay, to which other substances are frequently added. Cornish clay or kaolin ,a creamy white, plastic substance forms the main body of porcelain everywhere. Ball clay, also known as blue clay, is not as white but much stronger than kaolin. Is very much in demand but it cannot be used alone because it would warp and crack and cannot endure intense heat.

Canada's present day pottery industry may be said to have got its start at the close of the 19 Century and since that time striking development has taken place The industrial clays found in this country may be classified as common clays, stoneware clays, fireclays, and china clays.

In the manufacture of such products as porcelain, sanitary-ware, dinnerware ceramic floor and wall tile, china, clay imported from England is used almost entirely. In addition to clay for ceramic use, large annual importations of china clay are made into Canada for use in the production of fine paper, in the rubber industry and for other industrial purposes.

Haven't you ever talked over the back fence?

MAYBE you have a neighbour who doesn't know what it's all about when it comes to raising cucumbers. Or perhaps he hasn't a knack with roses. So you tell him what spray to get, or you give him a little lesson in pruning. And next thing you know he says: "I'm certainly sold on that advice you gave me."

And that's how progress comes about. A fellow comes along who knows more than you do about life insurance, for instance, and first thing you know you see a way to protect yourself and your wife and the kiddies, a plan you might never have thought of, yet it seems easy once you start.

If there were no salesmen, hundreds of thousands of people now insured would be without the security they enjoy. So many people put off till tomorrow what they should do today—so many neglect provision for the future. That is why the helpful neighbours who sell life insurance have become such great instruments in the promotion of thrift.

At the end of May Canadian prisoners of war numbering 5,278 were scattered through 47 camps in Germany, and 11 camps in the Far East. Of these prisoners, 8 are from the navy, 3,629 Army, 1,496 Air Force, 145 Merchant Navy. Men and non-commissioned officers work in stone quarries, on river work, brick laying, lumbering, agriculture beet factories, anything that is not directly connected with the prosecution of the war. They work usually nine or 10 hours day, and are paid many 70 pfennings a day. The first parcel a prisoner gets is a Red Cross "capture parcel" packed in Canada and stocked in London.

Details of the Sixth Victory Loan are now revealed. On an objective of $1,200,000,000 subscriptions totalled $1,407,547,000, with 3,770,000 individual applications. The armed forces bought $47 millions, those overseas $13 millions. Finance Minister Ilsley told the House of Commons that cost of the issue would not exceed 88 cents for each $100.

With literally thousands of Canadian women making over their own clothes or cutting them down for their children, the Consumers Branch of Wartime Prices and Trade Board has found that many women are on the lookout for used sewing machines. To protect buyers of used goods the Board has set a ceiling for certain second hand articles. The price set for used sewing machines must not be more than 80 per cent. of the current price of a new machine of the same or similar type sold in that locality; or not more than a used machine cost during the basic period September 15 to October 11th. To pay no more than ceiling prices and to conserve material — these are major contributions women can make to the war effort.

The hens of Canada are cackling mightily for Britain. It is astonishing to learn that the Special Products Board of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has bought for export to the British Ministry of food 3,700 carloads of eggs from January 1 to June 28 this year. That means about 2,400,000 cases or 72 million dozen. Last year for this period the purchases were 1,700 carloads. Number of cases purchased from various provinces were as follows: B.C., 155,000; Alberta 363,000; Saskatchewan 455,000; Manitoba 273,000; Ontario 990,000; Quebec 143,000; New Brunswick 2,500; P. E. Agricultural fairs throughout Canada have been a great factor in our social and economic progress and chances are that after the war they will be bigger and better than ever. Some of Canada's fairs are among our oldest institutions. The first organized agricultural fair in Canada was hel dat Windsor, Nova Scotia, in 1765. The first fair at Pictou, N.S., was held 127 years ago. In Ontario the Niagara Agricultural Society held a fair in 1791. The federal Labour Department is making a special effort to get thousands of high school boys and girls to register for summer employment on farms. It is hoped they will help ease the critical situation which threatens in every kind of farming from fruit picking to grain harvesting. Spending a vacation on a farm is not only profitable but a healthy builder as well, and besides it is a contribution to the war effort. Placing officers are very careful in the selection of farms for these young-sters. The provinces have arranged for supervised camps for fruit pickers.

Farming in Canada is really big business. Total cash income from the sale of farm products in 1943 was $1,386.6 millions, against 765.8 millions in 1940, an increase of two per cent. What the increase in the index of farm prices from 1940 to the spring of 1944 was—over 35½ per cent. the increase in the total cash income in the four years was 82 per cent. this being accounted for by the heavy increase in volume of the products put on the market. The increase in volume of products was in much greater proportion to the increase in prices for the products. In the same period increase in farm wages per month was 50 per cent. This averaged for all of Canada was 50 per cent. This shows a jump from $26.42 in May, 1940 to $61.43 in May, 1944.

"GIDEON'S FAITHFUL FEW"

Lesson Text: Judges VII: 4-7, 15-21

The story of Gideon is one of the most dramatic in the whole Bible. Following the death of Joshua the various tribes of Israel went pretty much their own way. It is true that Joshua had achieved a certain unity of unity among them but the unity was of a rather loose sort. The various clans went off on their own clashing frequently with the original Canaanites. Gideon was a leader of one of these clans—the clan of Abiezar, of the tribe of Manasseh. The story of Gideon's strategy is well known. He used several methods to eliminate the faint-hearted and the weak from his army reducing it in size to the almost insignificant number of three hundred. But with these three hundred he won a significant victory, by taking advantage of the element of surprise, and capitalizing on the sense of fear which he was able to arouse in the hearts of the enemy.

From the point of view of strategy there is much to learn from Gideon. The United Nations' initial success in Normandy was due to the element of surprise as much as anything else. The Nazis expected the thrust at Calais. Surprise and fear are two of the greatest military weapons even in days of buzz-bombs and superfortresses.

Of more interest however, to students of the Bible and of the Christian way of life, is the way in which Gideon reduced the size of the army in order to have an efficient and dependable group. We live in a democracy where matters are settled by votes of the people, and where majority votes determine policies, and yet, when it comes to the actual control of a country, the power is delegated to a few. The Cabinet run the country. Mob rule is not feasible nor to be welcomed.

Indeed, it may seem strange that preservation and yet this story bears on its truth. The progress that has been made in almost every walk of life, is a result of the fact that a majority by a few. One man, one small group in the advances that have been made in religion and social life. Because the great majority of the people were content to follow along in the old accustomed ways of life or support a certain manner of living, does not mean that such a way is necessarily right. Was Shaftesbury right when he was battling for the children in English factories or were the majority? Were the majority right when they put Christ to death? Were the majority right when they opposed prison reform, advanced and crusaded for by Howard?

One man with God is always a majority and can do more to change life than any number. One man or one small group in a church can make the veritable dynamo of spiritual power. The United Nations' initial success in Normandy was due to the element of surprise as much as anything else. The Nazis expected the thrust at Calais. Surprise and fear are two of the greatest military weapons even in days of buzz-bombs and superfortresses.

Of more interest however, to students of the Bible and of the Christian way of life, is the way in which Gideon reduced the size of the army in order to have an efficient and dependable group. We live in a democracy where matters are settled by votes of the people, and where majority votes determine policies, and yet, when it comes to the actual control of a country, the power is delegated to a few. The Cabinet run the country. Mob rule is not feasible nor to be welcomed.

TONS OF FOOD ARE GOING TO WASTE IN THIS DISTRICT UNLESS YOU ACT NOW!

NAPANEE! ITS UP TO YOU!

This community is faced with the immediate task of organizing to SAVE FOOD materials urgently needed by our invading Armed Forces.

There is not available at this moment one half the farm help required to save the abundant food crops ready for harvest on farms in this community. Yet these crops must be saved to feed our invading armed forces—to whom food is as vitally important as ammunition. They can't win if they don't eat.

The man power needed to save this food can be provided ONLY in one way; and that way is by the citizens of this community organizing to provide help for its farmers; organizing the "spare hours" of its men in the cause of Saving Food for Victory.

The organization has two parts:

1. Organizing a Farm Commando Brigade, with office and telephone, where information can be given and the enlistments of loyal citizens received and through which men may be placed on farms requiring help most urgently.
2. Enlisting every available man in the community who will pledge his evenings, week-ends, holidays, half-days, every spare hour – during this critical harvesting period.

The Department of Agriculture of the Ontario Government will provide organizers and will co-operate and assist at every point in the formation and operation of the Farm Commandos.

The need is Urgent! It Requires Immediate Action! Unless such help is provided thousands of bushels of vitally-needed grain will go to waste in the fields in this district.

★ Council You can lend, effectively, the weight of your official influence by appeals to your townsmen, by proclaiming a "Help the Farmer" holiday when the situation demands, by permitting municipality vehicles to transport commandos to and from farms; by giving leadership in organization work.

★ Employers You can give vital assistance by releasing a shift, or your entire staff, for a day or more, by impressing the urgency of their going to the farms for the period of release.

★ Merchants You can organize to go in a body with your staffs on the weekly half-holiday, evenings and week-ends, or you could close your stores for an entire day once a week to assist during this critical period.

★ Clergymen You can impress the need on congregations; call organization meetings of your men and boys; assist service clubs and other bodies to organize enlistments.

★ Mechanics Also artisans, labourers, clerks, salesmen, students. You can provide the greatest service because you constitute the largest body of citizens. Assist in organization wherever you can, but particularly in pledging your spare hours to help on the farms.

★ Service Clubs You can add to your laurels of social service by enrolling members for this most constructive task, by forming committees to work in co-operation with commando headquarters on many phases of the work.

CANADA'S EXPORTS SET ALL - TIME HIGH

6-MONTH PERIOD SHOWS GAIN OF $470,000,000

Ottawa, (CP. — The value of Canada's exports during the first six months of this year was greater than "any corresponding period in the history of Canadian commerce," Hon. J. A. MacKinnon, Minister of Trade said in a mid-year review of the Dominion's trade position.

Products exported during the six-month period were valued at $1,746,000,000, compared with $1,276,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1943, an increase of $470,000,000.

The half-year value for 1944 "was also greater than the total export value of each of the years 1939, 1940, 1941, as well as other previous 12-month periods," said Mr. MacKinnon.

"This Dominion is securely one of the select company of the greatest international trading countries of the world, and this relative position is constantly rising."

More than one-third of the exports, or $653,000,000 worth went to the United Kingdom, compared with $450,000,000 worth in the first six months of 1943. Value of exports to the United States totalled $638,000,000.

CASTLES IN SPAIN

BY WAVERLEY ROOT

The cat, it seems to me, is out of the bag; or rather one of a probably large number of cats has escaped from an extremely commodious bag. But no one seems to have called attention to any meowing in Spanish, as that duty, perhaps, devolves upon me.

When Prime Minister Winston Churchill set up not altogether friendly House of Commons that he had come before them to speak kind words about Spain (meaning Franco Spain) and then proceeded to do so, it seemed very obvious that the active negotiations which it was known had been proceeding among Spain, Britain and the United States had ended in some sort of a deal. What Spain could possibly give which would be worth support for an administration hostile to democracy and able to do great harm to its cause, particularly in South America, was a little difficult to divine. The western powers seem to be come to conclusion long ago that they couldn't do business with Hitler, but had failed to apply this patently acquired bit of knowledge to a similar situation and decide that they couldn't do business with Franco either.

Although Britain has usually been in the front rank in dealings with Madrid, the United States has followed in the same direction. Proof of what the United States has received, or thinks she has received, is revealed by the news that arrangements are being made for the establishment of commercial air service to Spain. Three Americans are already in Madrid working out the details.

Plane service already exists from the United States to Portugal, spanning a distance in comparison with which the added extension of service into Spain would not seem to make a great deal of difference. The end of the European war is only a few months off, and since it is likely to be followed by great changes, it might seem reasonable to be content with the American-Portuguese air route for the moment in order to make future arrangements in accordance with a post-war situation which is not yet clear.

Why then this precipitation to establish a commercial air line with Spain? Could it be that the Spanish have taken advantage of the undoubted rivalry which exists between British and American commercial aviation, both of which are looking forward to the post-war period with the hope of being able to secure a predominant position for themselves, and have played one against the other? Is American aviation in a hurry to make arrangements with Franco in order to secure its rights in Spain? And may we not expect to hear shortly that Britain likewise has its post-war air service with Spain already mapped out? Certainly it was not because Britain had been frozen out of any developments in Spain that Mr. Churchill felt impelled to utter his kind words about her.

The important question now arises whether any arrangements made with the Franco Government will be valid for very long in the future. There is a rather general expectation in diplomatic circles that the victory of the democratic armies in Europe will be followed by a revolution in Spain which will drive the present regime out. Unless negotiations have proceeded much farther than appears from the published reports, it is quite conceivable that the Franco regime may have disappeared before the first plane which is due to land in Spain under the agreement made with him can initiate the proposed service. It is also very possible that the succeeding government will be suspicious of all arrangements made by the Franco regime, and disposed to repudiate them. Thus the signing of an aviation agreement with Spain now may actually prejudice the possibility of making a satisfactory accord later.

This is simply the business angle of the matter. From the political standpoint, there are other dangers. All such bargains tend to support the regime that is in power and to prolong its life. There is no advantage in postponing the demise of a moribund government. On the contrary, the sooner it disappears to make way for a regime with more chances of permanence, the better for all concerned.

Secondly, the creation of a tie-up between the maintenance of the present political regime in Spain and certain American interests tends to bring pressure upon the makers of American policy to support a government whose downfall may also mean the cancellation of the agreements made with it. Thus in defence of temporary and limited interests, permanent and general interests may be disserved; for it is to the permanent and general interest of the citizens of all democratic countries that non-democratic regimes should be eliminated.

In the same week in which the news has leaked out of an American-Spanish deal on air service, we have also had report that Madrid is urging on the Allies the negotiated peace which is all Germany has been fighting for since she failed to take Stalingrad, and that General Franco has opened a new powerful radio station, able to make itself heard clearly in South America. This station is to be put at the service of Falange propaganda, which has replaced that of the ousted Axis agents in Latin America. It was significantly built by Germany, at a time when she was able to spare neither engineers, workmen nor materials for any purposes except the most vital. Obviously, Germany believed that the establishment of this weapon of psychological warfare in Spain was of great importance to her aims.

It is an odd moment to find Americans taking a step which is of debatable value from long-range business point of view and which practically can only strengthen a regime which has a communnity of interest with the enemy.

Wife: Have you kept all your New Year's resolutions, dear?

Husband: Yes, I have a copy locked up in a drawer somewhere.

'SECRET FRONT' TO CONTROL GERMANY

BY PERCY CATER
Parliamentary Correspondent of The London Daily Mail

British Intelligence men who have directed blows at Germany's economic front helped the R.A.F. to pick many a "Target for Tonight" and aided the Navy to tighten the blockade where it hurts most, are to make sure that the Germans disarm and also pay for their war.

These experts, who at the Ministry of Economic Warfare throughout the war, have done so much to hurt Germany, are now to form the Foreign Office Economic Intelligence Branch, which Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, is setting up. They will advise on armistice terms, separations, and will see that the terms of the armistice are observed.

They will be concerned with the economic disarmament and economic control of Germany, with the economic effects of frontier ratification, the restoring of property to occupied territories, and the development of the resources of supply on which Europe's recovery depends.

The Earl of Selborne, Minister of Economic Warfare, under whom these experts have worked for so long announced in an important House of Lords speech last night that the Foreign Secretary had decided to create the new branch.

While these "boys of the back room" — as Lord Selborne called them — will be switching over to these vital new activities they will continue while the war is on to be responsible to him for many things.

Their department has been known as the "Enemy Branch" of the Ministry. In future it will be styled "Enemy Branch, Foreign Office and Ministry of Economic Warfare."

These men, who will say how Germany should be made to pay and will advise on the means of rendering her powerless for future war, know Germany through and through.

"Reparations," it was notable, were mentioned twice by Lord Selborne in his speech. Until Lord Cherwell, Paymaster - General, directly referred to reparations in the House of Lords a few weeks ago, the word had not been officially used.

But Lord Selborne, by the way he repeated it, left no doubt that the Allies, having beaten Germany, will exact restitution for Germany's crimes.

While he did not suggest that Germany would collapse because she ran short of this or that commodity, he gave a stark picture of the enemy's growing difficulties.

Germany's "much the most serious deficiency," he said was probably man-power, and on this he made these impressive comments:

"To those responsible for German production, the prospect at this crucial moment must indeed seem sombre. This result is mainly due to three things:

1. The vast expenditure of supplies and reserves and the German losses in Russia;

2. The Allied victories in Africa, and

3. The Allied command of the sea and air."

He also stated:

"The time has now come when the Germans cannot maintain simultaneously even the numerical strength of both their radmed forces and their civilian labor forces, while the quality of both has steadily declined.

"I wish to make it clear that in our (the Government's) opinion undoubtedly the difficulties of Hitler's generals are, being increased every day by the growing scarcity of essential commodities.

"Therefore I say that any neutral who now sends Germany vital war materials is simply prolonging the war, and we shall certainly continue to do our best to prevent that happening."

Lord Selborne alsi asserted: "In my opinion there is no doubt that German military operations have been for some time past severely hampered by shortage of oil. But the Germans' greatest shortage of all is in men.

Germany's stocks, once so plentiful, are seriously depleting.

"Submarine blockade-runners can do little to replenish them. Neutrals are increasingly aloof. Air raids create fresh problems which every day are harder to solve. Surpluses have become deficiencies.

"Germany has for a long time been short of many things essential to modern warfare—oil, rubber, textiles, ferro-alloys."

But on the greatest shortage, of men, he said:

"The effect of the blockade can be seen clearly in terms of manpower.

"For instance, Germany has nearly 1,000,000 more men and women employed in agriculture than she had in the last war.

"This country is importing scores of millions of tons of oil every year, but all the ersatz industries are very wasteful of man-power, and this, combined with her colossal losses in the field, has produced Germany's man-power crisis, which she has tried to make good with European slaves, of which some 7,000,000 are working in Germany itself.

"Now, we have got to the point where Germany is enlisting unwilling foreigners into her armed forces. That is surely very significant."

When Hitler attacked Russia in 1941, said Lord Selborne, he hoped to conquer the Ukraine, the Donets Basin, The Kuban and Caucasus.

"I think," said Lord Selborne "that the measure of his defeat and the precariousness of his economic situation can be seen in that single fact."

And Lord Selborne said what will be a most heartening thing to those who fear that many Government departments will try to maintain their grip after the war.

"I am not in favour of a prolongation of war-time departments beyond their period of usefulness, and if I am Minister of Economic Warfare at that time it will be my ambition to be the first department to close its doors.

"I think that not only the liberties of the subject but the prosperity of the country will be advanced in inverse ratio to the number of Government departments and Government employes who survive this war."

After the sounds of approval which this inspired Lord Selborne explained that this did not mean that economic warfare against Japan would not continue.

But it would no longer be necessary to have a separate Ministry for this purpose.

MOSQUITOES DON'T BITE

It's too bad, isn't it, that along with the violets and lilacs came the black flies, mosquitoes and the "no-see-ums," those tiny flies whose bite is like fire.

There isn't much one can do about the black flies and the no-see-ums, but one can do quite a bit to keep down the mosquitoes. In fact, some towns, such as Orillia, in Ontario, have made such good community efforts in this direction that they boast about their lack of mosquitoes.

The mosquito must have more or less stagnant water in which to breed. In such water the female lays her eggs. The young develop, swim round and grow into what is called the pupae stage, and finally these change into the flying insect that takes such a pleasure in drilling for our blood. Mosquitoes don't bite, though we call it that.

The larvae, or baby mosquito does not look the least bit like the adult insect. It is dark-colored and legless, and moves by wriggling; hence its common name, "wriggler". If you look at one closely you'll note some fine hairs at its tail.

The most unusual thing about them is that they breathe through their tails and that to get the air they must swim to the surface of the water and stick their tails out like periscopes. On this fact hinges our best method of controlling them. We must oil the water.

The oil forms a film over the surface, and the mosquito larvae and pupae cannot get any air, so they die. Petroleum oil is used for this purpose because when it is sprayed on water, it spreads out forming a thin film. One fluid ounce of oil (about a tablespoonful) will cover 16 square feet of water surface.

An unfortunate fact is that mosquitoes need very little water to grow up in; the few tablespoons collected in a bit of broken bottle or an old tin can are ample, and rain barrels are their delight.

If you want to keep down the nuisance around your place, go out and collect and bury anything that holds water, or if its something you need, turn it up so that water won't collect it in. Rain barrels can either be given a layer of oil or screened over with fine mesh wire or cheese cloth.

When there are a lot of mosquitoes and you can't do much about them, try a repellant. One developed by the Canadian Division of Entomology has been found very helpful. It is made by mixing 1 oz. pyrethrum extract, half of oil of thyme and two ounces of castor oil.

If you do get bitten, try a little rubbing alcohol or iodine on the bumps. It helps a lot.—M. E. Hawkes, Junior Farmer Editor, Pamily Herald and Weekly Star.

A British officer was arguing with an American officer as to which Army had the better discipline. As the American was talking one of his men came in. "Cap," said the private, "can I have your jeep tonight? I've got to take out a dame." "Sure," replied the officer. Then turning to the Briton, he said: "There's a proof of our discipline. He needn't have asked me."

All to meet at 2:30 at the picnic ground at Mrs. McLeod's. A paper on the motto "A Sound Mind and Sound Body" was given by Mrs. Robin Fluke. A reading was given by Mrs. Jamieson. A splendid paper on "Social Welfare" was given by Miss Cameron Children must be taught to live correctly, as well as read and write. At a time when enemy forces would try to divide us, to set labor against capital, farmer against labor, Protestant against Roman Catholic and so on it is especially important that we get together more in community affairs, forget the things in which we differ, and concentrate on those in which we agree. Our personal relations mean so much, surely whatever else war does, through anxiety and suffering it will bring in a new sympathy with our fellowmen. A Plea for First Aid: What would you do if your child was badly frightened- How would you treat a black eye? What would you do when a child faints.

Lunch was served by the committee and a social hour followed. The National Anthem closed the meeting.

WEDDING BELLS

ERSKINE - THOMPSON

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday afternoon, July 1st, at Grace Church parsonage, Napanee, when Rev. C. D. McLellan united in marriage Marguerite Helen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Thompson, and Sergt. George Erskine, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Erskine, of Dublin, Ireland.

The bride wore a street-length gown of heavenly blue sheer, a white floral hat with shoulder length veil, and a corsage of pink roses and bouvardia.

The bride's only attendant was her youngest sister, Miss Betty Thompson, who wore a gown of dusty rose with matching accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations with maiden hair fern.

The groom was attended by Henry Schermerhorn.

Following the ceremony a reception was held on the lawn at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's mother received, wearing a gown of black sheer and a corsage of orange blossoms.

The happy couple left later for Toronto and points west. For travelling the bride donned a rose crepe dress with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Peterboro, where Sergt. Erskine is now stationed.

WEDDING BELLS

KIMMETT - LUCAS

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Grace United Church parsonage Napanee, Thursday, July 20th at 2 p.m., with Rev. C. D McLellan officiating, when Janet Emma, the only daughter of Mrs. J. W. Lucas and the late J. W. Lucas, became the bride of Douglas E. Kimmett, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Kimmett, Deseronto.

The bride looked lovely in a floor-length white sheer dress. Her shoulder-length veil was caught with a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a beautiful bouquet of American Beauty roses. The bride was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Angus Smith, who wore a lovely light blue sheer, with white accessories, and a corsage of pink roses.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Donald Kimmett, Deseronto.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's mother to about thirty guests. The bride's mother received wearing a black and white suit and red roses, and was assisted by the groom's mother, wearing a black suit and accessories to match, and a corsage of red roses. The table was decorated with pink and white streamers and a three-tier wedding cake.

Later the bride and groom left for their wedding trip to Watertown and Sacket's Harbour, to visit relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Kimmett. The bride chose for travelling, a brown and beige suit with brown accessories and a corsage of pink sweet peas. Upon their return they will reside in Deseronto.

The groom's gift to the matron-of-honour was a gold identification bracelet and to the best man a leather billfold.

During an air raid a policeman plunged into the ruins of a house to rescue someone trapped in the basement, and after a short time managed to crawl out with his man. He was covered in mud grease, and plaster. "Gosh," said an A.R.P. man, going to his assistance, "you are in a mess!" "Yes" drawled the policeman, "that's the worst of navy blue —it shows every little stain."

A very attractive blonde boarded a bus carrying in her arms a Pekinese dog, to whom she whispered endless endearments. An elderly woman sitting opposite at last could bear it no longer. "Don't you think," she said tartly to the blonde, "that you would look better with a baby in your arms?" "No, I don't," the blonde lisped sweetly. "You see, I'm not married."

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Here this week —but gone next week! That's the story of many of our perishable fruits unless we can do something about saving some for future use. Home canning now means better meals and better health next winter.

Canning in airtight jars or cans is the most widely used method for preserving fruits and vegetables. Success in canning is the result of abiding by up-to-date instructions. Good canning principles are:

1 Can only fresh food, in perfect condition.
2 Have food, jars everything used for canning THOROUGHLY clean.
3 Work quickly, so as to can 'fresh-ness.'
4 Follow up-to-date instructions and time tables.
5 Make sure jars are airtight to keep out air which causes growth of moulds.
6 For water-bath canning have the water hot in the processor when you put the jars in. Count the time from the minute the water begins to boil. The water should be two inches above the top; add hot water if it boils away. Keep a cover on the wash boiler or processor.
7 Heat food hot enough and long enough to kill harmful bacteria which often causes spoilage.
8 Complete the seal of a screw top jar by pressing on the glass top while you tighten the metal ring.
9 Cool jars right end up but do not place in a draught.
10 Label and store in a cool, dark place.

HONIED WORDS

may help sweeten a "sour" man but they don't have any effect in jam making. So use sugar. Use accurate amounts of sugar so that none is wasted. Use fruits that cook to a jam consistency readily—these are currants, gooseberries, crabapples, tart plums, grapes ,strawberries, apricots, and cranberries. When you use smaller amounts of sugar, longer cooking is required. During this precarious stage the cooking mixture should be kept boiling consantly and stirred frequently so that the jam will not be tough or scorched.

A few more points to keep in mind when making jam, are:

1 Use fresh, clean fruit.
2 Use a mixture of one cup ripe fruit to two cups under-ripe to increase the pectin necessary for jelling.
3 Cook no more than three or four quarts of fruit at a time.
4 Warm the sugar in a preheated electric oven to speed up the cooking of jam.
5 Boil constantly and test for jellying point. The experienced method requires correct observations. Lift a spoonful of the cooking liquid and allow it to drip slowly from the edge of the spoon. As the mixture nears the jellying stage it will form two distinct straight-edge drops. Test repeatedly. When the two drops tend to pull together the jam is done. Remove from the electric element at once.
6 Have containers sterilized and hot when filling.
7 Cool and seal with paraffin — pouring around the edge of the jam jar first. Cover with metal cover if possible.

CANNED RASPBEERIES
Raw Canning Method

Six quarts cleaned berries, three Cups sugar, six cups boiling water sufficient for six quarts canned berries)

Prepare syrup: — add water to the sugar; bring to a boil, skim and keep hot. Pack sealers, previously tested for leakage, with fruit and cover with boiling syrup. Leave one-quarter inch headspace in screw or spring top sealers half-inch in vacuum type. Adjust tops and completely seal. Place sealers on pads of newspapers in the bottom of a wash tub —Stand sealers on newspaper and cover with boiling water, having water three inches over tops of sealers. (Be careful not to pour water directly onto sealers.) Cover tub with a blanket and leave overnight, or until cold.

The exact proportions of fruit and syrup are used for canning by the cold pack method. Processing time in the boiling water bath is fifteen minutes for pints; twenty minutes for quarts.

RASPBERRY AND RED CURRANT JAM

Two quarts raspberries, one cup red currant juice, three and one-half cups sugar.

To make currant juice, crush one and one-half cups currants slightly and cover them with three-quarters cup water. Cook until the currants are soft and mushy — about ten to fifteen minutes. Strain through a moist jelly bag.

Add currant juice to raspberries and let stand twenty minutes. Simmer twenty minutes then add sugar. Cook about twenty minutes longer, skim, pour into hot sterilized jars and when cool, seal with paraffin wax. Yield: approximately two and one-half pints.

TAKE A TIP:

1. Unsweetened fruits are processed the same length of time as fruits with sugar.

2. Although sugar is the cheapest form of sweetening, honey may be used to replace one-half as much of the required sugar. Corn syrup may be used to replace as much as one-third of the required sugar. Do not use brown sugar or unrefined sorghum.

3. It is unwise to use a board or towel in the bottom of a water bath as it prevents even circulation of hot water around the jars. It is wise to use a wire rack or strips of wood, e.g., shingles.

Cooling
Home Canned Food is Important:

1. Cool sealers in an upright position.

2. Leave space between sealers while cooling.

3. Place sealers on folded newspaper out of draught and do not cover.

4. Plunge tin cans into cold water and change the water once or twice so that they will cool rapidly.

QUESTION BOX

Mrs. J. C. Mc says:

1 Boiling water should not be used for washing refrigerator trays. (A warm tray will cause the refrigerator to operate longer than necessary.)
2 Fruit should be spread on a platter and kept in the upper part of an electric refrigerator.
3 If you can't buy a pot scraper, do as I do — place a 3-inch piece of clean cotton in the bottom of the teakettle where lime will form on it in about a week. This will make a good scouring pad.

Mrs. D. M. suggests: Raspberries stored raw have kept successfully by the following method: Select firm, clean berries. Pack into refrigerator jars gently. Cover with boiling syrup. Put on a hot rubber ring and adjust the tops. Seal tightly. Place in a tub in which a towel has been folded in the bottom. Pour boiling water down the inside enough to cover 3 inches over the top. Put a lid on the utensil and cover with several heavy towels. Leave in water bath overnight.

Answer: We have found this method successful for raspberries and rhubarb. A cool, dark storage place is essential, however.

THE BATTLE OF THE WHEAT SHEAVES

BY OSWALD DUTCH

Among the many surprises the landings in France sprang upon the world was the enormous number of Allied ships that crossed the Channel to the coast of Normandy. The U-boat attacks on Allied shipping it is true, had greatly fallen off in the last few months, and the British and American ship-yards had performed perfect miracles of new construction. Strange though it may sound, British agriculture made a considerable contribution to this mass levy of shipping for military operations. The battle ofthe wheat sheaves, the enormous increase of food production in Great Britain, saved millions of tons of shipping space. Great numbers of large and medium sized merchant ships were thus spared for voyage across the oceans and could be held in readiness for the landings.

Mr Hudson, the British Minister of Agriculture, recently made a report bearing eloquent witness to the achievements of British agriculture. There is probably no country in the world where, in an emergency, large tracts of land could not be made cultivable or the tilled land made productive. The Third Reich attempted to apply this principle not only in Germany itself but also in the occupied territories. The result, nevertheless, was more than disappointing. The methods applied to force the peasants to deliver their products merely resulted in less being grown. Moreover the Nazi Government could not make the necessary labor available in order to produce heavier yields.

The secret of the battle of the wheat sheaves in Great Britain is not only that the area of tillage has greatly increased, but that labor and machines were made available. Moreover, the British Government refrained from all compulsory measures in agriculture as in most all other branches of production. The British farmer, therefore, entered heart and soul into the Government's plans and the result was really astonishing.

In peace time the agricultural possibilities of Great Britain had not been fully exploited. Consequently it was easier to convert pasture land into fertile fields or to use golf courses or uncultivated land to grow corn or foodstuffs. The increase in tillage in the last few years is nevertheless amazing. In 1939 the area under wheat amounted to 1,670,000 acres. By 1944 it had risen to 3,050,000 acres, i.e., nearly double.

The acreage under potatoes in the same period rose from 454,000 to 950,000, and that under sugar beet from 337 000 to 420,000. Flax, one of the most important crops for wartime production, was very little grown in England before the war. The total area under flax in 1939 amounted to not more than 4,427 acres. To-day fields of flax cover 51,000 acres, twelve times the original area.

Not only the acreage under wheat had to be extended but also that under grass with a view to increased milk production. This is no less important as the bread cereals, corn and potatoes. Last year 25,000 acres of corn land were allowed to run to grass for this purpose. Never before in the history of British agriculture have such quantities of milk been supplied to the home consumer, and there is still enough left to provide for the greater part of the cheese ration of the British population. Milk is distributed absolutely evenly to all sections of the population. In fact, the less well-to-do classes can obtain much more milk to-day than was often the case before the war. Children and nursing mothers receive extra milk rations, which is of the utmost importance for the coming generation.

In the last five years millions of people in the towns have sacrificed their traditional love for flowers to the cultivation of vegetables. The gardens of the small houses now produce such quantities of vegetables, lettuces and legumes that literally millions of families can live on their own produce and often have enough to be able to give some away to friends or neighbors. In the bigger towns, apart from the former flower gardens, large parts of the parks, playing fields and non-built up areas have been turned into allotments, a movement which enjoys the full support of the authorities.

Hitler had hoped that he would be able to starve out the British Isles, by means of his U-boat war. When he was forced to realize the futility of this attempt he still believed that in view of the fanciful reports of sinkings by U-boats there might barely be enough shipping available to ensure Great Britain's scanty food supply. The simultaneous offensives in Italy and Normandy however, have shown the Germans how well the British population has understood how to make itself to a great extent independent of food supplies from overseas. The battle of the wheat sheaves has therefore contributed not a little to the victories on the Continent.

THE MIGHTIEST BOMBING EVER LAUNCHED

BY RICHARD D. McMILLAN
B. U. P. War Correspondent

The following graphic article was written by Mr. McMillan in the official war correspondents' observation post, a short distance from Caen.

A gigantic smoke pall, twenty miles deep and five miles high is twirling slowly over the battlefront around Caen, in the pink dawn, after the mightiest air bombing attack ever launched.

More than 2,000 bombers dropped an 8,000-ton bomb-load on German positions immediately north of Caen and the whole world seemed stunned.

I never have seen such a spectacle of titanis airpower and majestic terror as was thrown against the enemy's lines in a blitz which must have given the frightfully awed German in his trenches final and convincing proof that there is only one thing he can expect if he continues this war—death.

The yellow sun began climbing through rose-colored clouds as the first R.A.F. bombers opened the attack. Within a few minutes, 300 planes had dropped bombs which jabbed the earth in and around the Nazi strongpoints with livid red ochre plumes coned with wide-fanning feathers of black smoke.

Relays of bombers followed in regular procession like black galleons sailing out of the Channel sky from England, until a thousand R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Lancasters and Halifaxes added their blast to the mounting widening inferno of flame and smoke.

Since dawn I have been watching this terrorizing, mesmerizing scene of unholy terror in a satanic setting, from an observation post in the nearly powdered ruins of the episcopal village of St. Contest, completely ravaged in all earlier phases of the war, smoke from the bombings is all around me as it is rising on all battlefronts.

No man in his wildest flights of imagination could envisage the scene. Volcanic spouts of ruby-orange flame spit like automatic fountains from the ground and thrust up to a height over a miles-wide area, to form a curtain of gloom cast to the first hundred bombers.

With the smoke pall flooded by deathly sickening smell, Gala fireworks thrown into the melee by chandeliers and maiming flak blossom out in the evening sky. Then a thousand points of light climb high into the sky and resolve into myriads of black cotton balls—the anti-aircraft ack-ack is busy.

Now the blazing, shattering, deafening nightmare is beginning to fall astern. American heavies in massed order rush upon the scene as all the horizon erupts with cascades of bombs gouging into the face of the earth.

Earth of the battlefield seems to a man remains, wrecks of villages, times of smoke bombs flashing through the smoke screen now and again. Not many for what we are glad, because every one means one of our planes is hit.

We saw one R.A.F. four-engined bomber spit white tongues from its wing. It soared on, then plunged in a ball of fire as it plunged to earth. Its flaming end was like a tiny spark amidst the fires of midnight all over the battlefield. The sun was now yellow with blood rays, but above and through the movement which enjoys the full support of the authorities. hurrying Flying Forts screaming toward their target.

I say "screaming" as a figure of speech. The fact is that the crescendo and crash of bombs drowned out even the roar of a thousand bombers. That's how many it is.

Now another of our planes is hit. It's like a jagged, red-hot fire-cracker drawing an arc through the murky facade, diving at incredible speed to the ground.

Germany's 'International Force' In Normandy

BY NED RUSSELL

Special to The Montreal Star and The New York Herald - Tribune.

A batch of ninety enemy prisoners stood in the sunshine inside a barbed-wire "cage" looking slovenly and exhausted when a mild-mannered British officer called upon "all the pure Germans" to raise their hands.

Nine men raised their hands wearily. Then the officer called upon all the Poles to identify themselves then the Austrians, then the Czechs. They all responded obediently. The officer found out what he wanted to know.

A couple of men in the back of the group began to shout and gesticulate. "I'm a Yugoslav," one shouted. "I'm a Luxemburger," said the other.

Some of the enemy units presently waging an astonishingly stubborn struggle against the British Second Army are a "motley lot," as the officer observed. It certainly is an international force which has been conscripted for some German divisions or regiments.

The Germans seem to be holding this front fairly effectively so far with forces which vary in quality, from some of the Nazis' most elite formations, to regiments which on paper ought to crumble easily. But the fact is, they don't. To be sure, these non-Germans surrender generally, rather than die, but they fight well and hard until they are within a few seconds of being killed.

These non-Germans always tell their captors blood-curdling tales of how they were conscripted into the German army, and how there is at least one German to every two or three of them in a unit. They claim they are helpless to do anything but fight to the last moment. These stories are considered to be true, although it is conceded that some prisoners might color their own tales slightly to impress their captors and gain sympathy.

These motley lots of Europeans fighting for Nazism are not the real German army of today. They represent a sizeable proportion of it, but not enough to cause the German front in Normandy to collapse easily. They are backed up and sometimes mixed in the line with crack Nazi S.S. troops, who are fanatical soldiers with a dual motive — to fight for their Fatherland and for their Fuehrer.

It is mostly among the S.S. troops that you find the teen-age youngsters, boys who say that they first fired an army rifle at the age of 12 when they entered the Hitler youth movement and were "graduated" into the Wehrmacht on their 17th birthday. When they first go into battle ing had six months of army training. They love to fight, and live only to die, preferably in melodramatically heroic fashion.

Recently a 17-year-old Hitler youth "veteran" was wounded badly in the hip while his unit was being gouged out of its position and forced to withdraw. He was obviously in great pain, but he evidently was glad that he had been left behind. He hid in some bushes as the British troops overran the German line. He waited there for three days, and finally was rewarded when a British brigade headquarters moved into the field next to his hiding place.

As the headquarters organization was being set up, a British military policeman spotted the youth raising his rifle to pick off the British brigadier.

The youngster was seized quickly before he could fire. "I've waited here for three days," he said haughtily. "I wanted to kill a British brigadier before I gave myself up." The youngster's wound was in horrible condition and gangrene had set in, but he insisted that he should have fulfilled his self-chosen mission.

An officer reported that these youthful S.S. troops sometimes surrender, but only when all escape is impossible and then usually because they think it is better to give up so that they can live to fight another day — or, rather, another war.

When it is pointed out to them that Germany is rapidly losing this war, they say, "Yes, this war . . . but there will be another war."

These boys still in their teens, already are planning to be the nucleus of the next German army.

FRENCH PEOPLE LOOK FOR STRONG DEMOCRATIC RULE

BY ROGER D. GREENE

Associated Press War Correspondent With British Forces in France

France is awakening from the long nightmare.

In liberated towns and villages French people stand in little knots in the streets and starte at the long columns of Allied troops and tanks and guns moving up to the front.

Sometimes they wave. Sometimes they smile — but not often. Their eyes are dull and you cannot escape the impression that slowly and painfully they are just beginning to rouse themselves from the drugged sleep of German conquest.

Listen to Andrew — 23 years old, a cadaverous, watery-eyed French youth — as he sips a glass of wine in a village bistro at Le Delivrance and rolls a cigaret of black weedy-looking German tobacco.

"The Germans were alright if we obeyed them," he said. "They took all our young men and women away to Germany to work for them. They made us work on their fortifications. But they brought in much money when we had no money. That helped. And we found that only about one Boche in 20 was a Nazi. They were bad ones—the Nazis."

Here was their official diet under German overlords, who themselves lived off the fat of the land: Bread—300 grams a day for adults, 200 for children and 350 for a worker; meat—90 grams a week; butter—80 to 100 grams a week; sugar—600 grams a month, and cheese— one medium-sized piece a month.

But they always had plenty to eat here in this rich cattle-growing farmland of Normandy where the Allies landed. Farther inland in the great industrial cities and less fertile regions the French today are desperately in need of food, according to civilians slipping through the lines.

Here the people look astonishingly healthy — and they are the old, infirm and weaklings. Robut young people have been carted off by the thousands to work for Hitler. Except for children and cripples there are almost no youth left in the villages.

As to the political side — I have discussed it with many civilians in the beachhead towns and this seems to be the consensus:

After the war, they want a strong democratic government, neither Fascist nor Communist and certainly no dictatorship. Some regard Gen. de Gaulle as a good military leader but untested as a politician.

Men of the Welsh Fusiliers wear a historic "flash"—a bunch of black ribbons tacked to the back of the tunic collar, which gives this famous regiment an unusual distinction. The flash was worn in the days of powdered wigs to keep grease from the tunic. For many years the regiment was absent on the Continent. When the soldiers returned to Britain wigs had gone out of fashion. Nevertheless the Fusiliers retained their ribbons.

A Sixty-Mile "Isle Of Freedom"

BY JOHN A. PARRIS
B. U. P. Correspondent

London—British and American parastroops, specialists in sabotage and silent warfare, are operating with French forces of the interior inside a 60-mile "island of freedom," somewhere near Paris, where they roam freely.

According to my informant from inside France these young raiders control this "island of freedom" and use it as a base for operations against German communications and convoys.

They are all volunteers—youngsters who should be just finished college or starting to practice medicine or law. Their assignment undoubtedly is the most dangerous of any present operations. I personally know some of these fighters and they are just boys of 19 to 22.

I had dinner with some of them a couple of weeks before they shoved off. Apparently it was their last night to have a fling and they were as cheerful and cocky a bunch as you ever saw.

Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force recently announced that a new branch of the AEF, the special airborne service, was operating behind the German lines. German communiques recently made special mention of these air commandos being rounded up along with members of the French Forces of the Interior. But the first details of their activities were disclosed in a message from the French Forces of the Interior.

These youthful raiders are of French, Norwegian, Dutch and Belgian extraction and form the nucleus of a "new airborne foreign legion" which is writing a daring epic of military history.

"The Wehrmacht has full powers over the southwestern outskirts of Paris as far as Versailles, Rambouillet, Maintenon and Dreux," my informant's report said, "and then, oddly enough, there's a kind of no man's land of about a hundred kilometres which the Germans do not occupy in any way and where Anglo-American parachutists and French resistance forces roam about freely in complete immunity."

"At the moment German generals are making immense efforts to increase their defensive potential in France. Some forty trains run daily on the line from Strasbourg to Paris bringing tanks and heavy artillery to Paris. The line from Belfort to Paris has been much damaged by resistance and traffic does not exceed twenty trains daily, but it includes much war material."

Another private report reaching the British United Press described a visit to Maquis-liberated territory somewhere in France.

"I was given a special permit enabling me to enter one Maquis-liberated area," my informant wrote, "but I met no control along the small, deserted country road and reached the 'capital' unchallenged. The Maquis were active here for several months but not until the second week in June was it decided to take over. The German detachment in the village was ordered to withdraw to the nearest main garrison, being replaced by Vichy militia.

"Two days later twenty militiamen arrived. The same evening a lieutenant and two militiamen were shot dead. Next morning the local resistance leader called a meeting in the town hall where it was decided to proclaim liberation. That afternoon high army officers of the French Forces of the Interior arrived. During the next few weeks more and more resistance members were directed to the area.

"A high ranking officer with a distinguished war record arrived formed a staff and grouped the men into proper fighting units. Everything had to be done in the greatest secrecy as the Germans might turn up at any moment. It was not until the beginning of July that the Germans realized we were in command. One of the militiamen telephoned daily to the regional militia commander reporting everything to be quiet. We do not know how the Germans finally learned the real state of affairs but it must have been through an informer.

"One morning the telephone line was cut. During the first week in July a detachment of forty Germans tried to break through. They were routed after a few minutes of fighting. No further attempt has been made since."

LOCAL RESERVE BATTERY RETURNS FROM ANNUAL SUMMER CAMP

Two Weeks of Interesting Training at Petewawa

The 44th (R) Fld. Regiment, R.C.A. which the local 47th Battery is part returned from the annual summer camp, which was held at Petewawa, on Saturday afternoon of last week.

From all reports this year's camp was one of the best the local unit has attended. The training received was given to the men and officers by competent active service instructors, and all the necessary equipment and vehicles of this large camp were at the disposal of the various units attending.

On Sunday July 23rd, the 44th were on the ranges, where they fired 25 rounds of 18-pound shells, and again on Wednesday, when another 25 were fired. On Thursday, the regiment was on Tank Shoot with a group of modern 25-pounder, fitted with Bren attachment in order to conserve ammunition. This was one of the most interesting shoots, as the target was a wooden and paper tank driven behind a gun tractor about 3,000 yards away. The local members also had the opportunity to fire were highly praised by the Range Officers for their excellent work, both on the artillery range and the tank shoot.

Six men of the 47th were awarded their safety lays on the 25th and also qualified as a motorcycle rider. The Napanee Battery was under the command of Major C. E. Jamieson and Second-Lieuts. McCullough, Pope and McLellan.

The local Headquarters Staff of the 44th who were in charge of the administration and instruction at the camp were Major E. G. Jones, B.S. (Doc) B. F. and Staff Sergeant Chappew.

The Napanee Battery will, in all probability, resume their training in the local Armouries during the early part of September.

FORTY GIRLS ATTEND CAMP AT CONSECON

Forty V girls attended the Y. W. C. A. Camp, held at Lake Consecon, last week. Included in the group were a number of girls from Napanee, as Rosamond Duff was Camp Greeter.

Every evening camp fire services were held, and a camp paper, edited by Marjorie Johnston and Marjorie Smith, was a feature of the camp programme. Sunday services were in charge of Rev. Mr. Martin, of Trenton. The Tuck Shop was operated by Doris Sills and Eleanor Baldree.

The camp closed with the crowning of the Queen, Eleanor Baldree, of Napanee. Kay Whitley, Brockville, was chosen Lady-in-Waiting, Mildred VanDerin, Wellington, was second Princess.

During the ceremony of crowning the Queen, the Queen held a large lighted candle from which the candles held by the other girls in a circle were lighted. The Queen then led the procession of girls to the beach, where the candles were placed in the sand. The waves washed over the lights, while the girls sang "Let the Lower Lights be Burning".

FOUR UNITS OF 2ND DIVISION NOW WITH INVASION FORCES

Four Canadian infantry regiments, part of the Second Division, which landed at Dieppe, two years ago, have been in the battle of Normandy, sharing in the fierce engagements the Canadians south of Caen. It is permitted to be disclosed last week.

They are:

The Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg;

The Essex Scottish of Windsor, Ontario.

The South Saskatchewan Regiment.

Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal.

The names of these units were released last week as having participated in the recent fighting south of Caen up until last Sunday, July 23. Until recently, only Third Division units have been named as fighting in France.

The German DNB Agency claimed only two weeks ago that "new Allied formations brought up to the front include a replenished Canadian Second Division which carried out a raid on Dieppe."

The recent disclosure was the first word from Allied sources that regiments which fought at Dieppe have been in action in Normandy.

Three Fire Calls Answered Saturday By Napanee Firemen

The Napanee firemen answered three calls to fires on Saturday last. About 6:00 a.m. they were called to a chimney fire below Water Street in a home where an aged blind couple reside, but fortunately the fire caused no damage to the building.

Shortly after 8:00 a.m., the same day, fire broke out at The Napanee Cleaners on Dundas Street. An employee was attending to the fire in the boiler, when a slight explosion occurred and flames rapidly spread in the basement. The firemen were called and were able to get the blaze quickly under control. Considerable damage was done by smoke and water, but fortunately very little harm was done to the machinery used in the plant. As usual at the end of the week a great deal of clothing was in the building in process of being cleaned, but it is not thought that much damage was done to it.

About 5:00 p.m. on Saturday, a bonfire started in the driveway at the rear of Hunter's Cleaners got out of control and the firemen were called. They were able to extinguish the blaze before any damage was done.

Poem Written By Harold Wilson

The following poem, written by S. B.A. Harold Wilson, Cornwallis, N.S., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wilson, was submitted to us for publication:

O God, our Father, hear our prayer,
For those who fight abroad,
Protect them while they're over there,
Please hear our prayer, O God!

We pray for those who fight on land
And for the Air Force too,
Please guard them by Thy holy hand,
As only Thou canst do.

And for the boys who guard the sea
A prayer is much in need;
May strength and power come from Thee,
Encourage them with speed.

Now Lord, on high, we pray to Thee
For all who wait in vain;
Keep up their courage, make them see
That Thou alone dost reign.

Sung to the tune of "O God, Our Help in Ages Past".

Gnr. William Templeton Died of Wounds

On Wednesday, July 26th, the sad news was received of the sudden death in hospital, overseas, of Gunner William Templeton. Death occured on Friday, July 21st the result of first and second degree burns on the head, chest and arms, received while in action in Normandy. The wire reporting the death came as a particular shock to his family his business associates, and many friends, since it followed closely a wire received the previous day stating that Gunner Templeton's condition was improving, and that he was being transferred from the dangerously ill list to that of the seriously ill.

He was injured in France on Friday, July 14th, not more than two days after going into action with his battery, which is part of the Second Division. His wounds were described as first and second degree burns, which, ordinarily, are not considered serious. A few days after receipt of the first telegram, further word was sent from Ottawa that he was dangerously ill.

Gunner Templeton enlisted just two years ago, and after training at Petewawa until December, 1942 he transferred to a different unit from the one in which he enlisted, in order to get overseas as soon as possible. He trained in England until about the 12th July, when he went to France.

When he enlisted in July, 1942 he was manager of The Napanee Beaver, a position which he had held since the death of his father, the late William Templeton, in 1932. He became associated with The Beaver in 1931, at the age of 19, and was the third William Templeton to be in charge of the business, which his grandfather, William Templetop, established over seventy years ago. His death brought to an end a business career which, under ordinary circumstances, should have been long and useful. On his enlistment he faced the possibility of never returning to his home but the call of duty was so strong that he was willing to give his life in defence of his family and his country.

"Bill" Templeton, as he was familarly known to a large number of people, was naturally shy and retiring, but withal there was in him a determination of purpose and a strength which held him firm in any resolution which he made. In giving his life he would consider that he had done no more than his duty, no more than thousands of others have done or are doing. But in the estimation of his friends, he has played the part of a hero. His interests outside of his work were mainly in his home and his family. He was keen about hunting, fishing and boating and spent every possible hour in pursuit of these sports, in which his wife was also greatly interested and took an active part.

Since he left Napanee, innumerable inquiries were made about his welfare, and great regret at his death has been expressed by his many friends and business acquaintances.

William Templeton was the elder son of Mrs. W. A. Templeton, now a resident of Toronto, and the late William Templeton, Napanee. He was born on August 12th, 1912 and had lived all his life in Napanee, prior to going overseas. He attended the Napanee Schools and was, for one year, a student at Pickering College, before going into business.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Georgie Scott, one son, Billy, about three and a half years old; his mother, Mrs. W. A. Templeton, his brother, Lieutenant Robert K. Templeton, now on active service in France, and his grandmother, Mrs. S. A. Templeton, Napanee.

COMMITTEE CREATED TO ASSIST CIVIC GROUPS FOR SOLDIER RECEPTION

Mayors and Reeves to be Notified of Aerivals

Kingston, August 1st. — A special army committee whose main function is to supervise and co-ordinate the handling of servicemen repatriated from overseas to their home towns in Military District No. 3, through District Depot No. 3, Ottawa, and District Depot No. 3A, Kingston, has been set up here. The committee is particularly active in advising mayors and reeves of expected time of arrival at home town destinations, of officers and men who have returned from the fighting fronts. This assistance is facilitating arrangements made by civilian groups in charge of local receptions. Other duties being performed by the committee are supervising the speedy and efficient handling of veterans immediately upon their arrival at Kingston and Ottawa and minimizing the time required before they are dispatched on leave.

The committee, which is under the chairmanship of Major W. K. MacGregor, D.A.A.G., M.D. 3, has as its members Major H. E. Manning, of R.C.A.M.C., officer in charge of hospitalization and supplies for M.D. 3, Captain J. Soutter assistant supply and transport officer for M.D. 3, and Captain F. H. Wooding, public relations officer for M.D. 3.

Under previous conditions civilian groups interested in holding receptions for returning personnel had difficulty in doing so because of a lack of information regarding names of those returning and the expected times of their arrival. This situation is now adjusted since, before soldiers leave the army depot for their home towns, wires containing all necessary details are sent to mayors or reeves who in turn advise the local group in charge of reception arrangements.

The servicemen themselves, meanwhile, are provided with ample opportunity to notify their families of their return to Canada. National Defence Headquarters has authorized each veteran to send a wire to his family immediately upon arrival at the disembarkation point and a second wire telling his next of kin by what means (train, car, etc) he is returning home and the expected time of his arrival. By this means both next of kin and reception committees are kept fully informed.

It has been pointed out by Major W. K. MacGregor, chairman of the Kingston Committee, that while the army is anxious to lend all possible assistance to civilian groups, through mayors and reeves, in providing information regarding returning personnel, there can be no guarantee that soldiers will always arrive home at the time or by the means of transportation originally planned. Frequently, at the last moment, plans are changed by the soldier himself when it is found that bus transportation is quicker than rail, or vice-versa, or when offered transportation in a private automobile.

It is to overcome just such situations as this that many communities hold receptions several days after the soldiers have returned. The time between their arrival home and the reception allows the men to re-acclimatize themselves and also enables the local committee time to arrange a suitable function.

Repairing Dundas St. Pavement Postponed

During the past few days the Department of Highways repair outfit has been busy on Dundas Street, Napanee, filling cracks in the surface of the pavement.

The work of rebuilding the surface of the pavement, which has been under consideration by the town and the Ontario Highways Department, has been postponed indefinitely. Tenders for the work were called for a short time ago, but the only tender submitted was considered too high, and the work will not likely be done until after the war.

In the meantime it is the intention of the Streets Department to fill some of the more serious depressions, which will possibly be done in the near future by a plant from Kingston.

RUSSIANS REACH GERMAN TERRITORY DURING PAST WEEK

Allied Armies Make Imporant Gains in Normandy

WEDNESDAY—

British Canadian and United States troops broke the deadlock in Normandy in the greatest co-ordinated offensive of the invasion. Important gains were made south of Caen and west of St. Lo. Heavy fighting continued.

In Italy, United States and British units were reported to be closing in on Florence from two directions.

Russian troops were within thirteen miles of the Vistula River and had encircled Lwow. The last rail route of escape for the Nazis was cut.

Patrols of the northern and the southern units of the United States forces invading Guam, had made contact, on Tuesday.

The greatest force of heavy bombers ever to be sent on a single mission — 1,500 planes — was turned loose on Normandy, supporting the new Allied offensive.

THURSDAY—

Heavy opposition brought the British-Canadian offensive south of Caen to a stop. West of St. Lo, United States forces pushed the enemy back five miles on a 20-mile front.

The Soviet armies reached the Vistula River on a thirty-mile front in Poland. In Estonia, Narva fell to the Russians. In the Carpathians, Hungarian troops were in steady retreat. At least 50,000 Nazis were said to be cooped up with no chance of escape.

In Italy the British Eighth Army was within eight miles of Florence.

Mass air-attacks were made on Kiel and Stuttgart.

FRIDAY—

On Thursday the Russians took five fortress cities in Poland and Latvia — Lwow, Halicz, Stanislawow, Dvinsk and Rezekne. The Russians were also reported to have crossed the Vistula River.

United States forces shattered the German line in Western Normandy and the enemy was said to be in chaotic retreat, as a result of the break-through. The British and Canadians also renewed their offensive south of Caen, on a twenty mile front.

Polish troops in Italy advancing along the Adriatic, took a strong Nazi outpost on the Gothic Line. Fighting around Pisa was said to be intense and storming of the city by the Americans was a possibility.

Sabang, a naval outpost in Sumatra was bombarded by a British and Allied naval force.

Allied troops in the Myitkyina area in North Burma made considerable headway northwest of the city.

The Japanese are estimated to have lost 815,000 troops through death since the war started.

SATURDAY—

The Russian army was reported to be within twenty miles of Warsaw. Further south the Russians were within a few miles of passes leading directly into Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

United States tanks penetrated the northern outskirts of Coutances and other units were engaged in battle in sight of the sea. The Caen front was reported to be quiet.

In Italy, New Zealand troops were said to be in sight of Florence.

About 20,000 Japs were killed in stiff-ning counter-attacks in Guam.

The Japs were said to be in such swift retreat from northeast Burma in some sections that the British have lost contact with them.

MONDAY—

On Sunday, a Russian army advanced eleven miles into East Prussia on a 68-mile front, freeing 300 towns and villages. Warsaw suburbs were also reported under fire by the Russians.

In Normandy the British gained nearly five miles around Caumont. The United States troops threw another leap to the sea, surrounding quite a large area.

There was little change reported in Italy.

More than 1,000 planes were used to smash a path for the new British offensive in Normandy, around Caumont.

TUESDAY—

United States tank and infantry forces swept out of the Cherbourg Peninsula in a drive that netted them the prize city of Avranches. The Atlantic port of Granville was also taken. The British continued their advance around Caumont.

Russian armies were laying siege to Warsaw and also took Jelgava in Latvia.

1200 heavy bombers and 1,000 fighter planes pounded military objectives in Germany on Monday.

UNANIMOUS VOTE RECORDED IN COMMONS ON CHILD BONUS BILL

Not to become Effective for Year

Ottawa, July 28. — Family allowances legislation, in the second unanimous vote that has been polled in Parliament in five years, Friday, was given second reading on Prime Minister King's motion.

The count, after Government members forced a division to place on record the stand of Progressive Conservative critics, was 139 to 0 out of a House of 236.

That was the count. But before he left Ottawa, R. A. Bruce, (Progressive Conservative, Toronto-Parkdale, who opposed the bill in second reading debate, stood last by his convictions and "paired" with a Government member.

There were cries from Government members when the vote was taken. "Where's the member for Parkdale; where's Bruce"? Henry Golding, Hastings-Peterlin, then revealed where Bruce was—on the motion. "I was paired with the honorable member for Parkdale," he said.

The record, therefore, stands, that if Dr. Bruce had been in Parliament when the vote was taken he would have opposed the motion as he had in debate. Among the absentees were members campaigning in the Provincial elections and an undisclosed number who are believed to have evaded the vote.

The motion was called after Prime Minister King spoke for 80 minutes in rebuttal to criticisms made by the Progressive Conservative and the C. C. F. members. As on Tuesday, when he opened the debate, Mr. King gave a long review of his personal philosophy on human values and the role of social legislation. He defended the Government's decision not to make the measure effective until Dominion Day next year and sandwiched into his talk jibes at the Opposition for having departed from the stand of Progressive Conservative Leader Bracken, indicated by his assertion that the measure was a "political bribe."

Members were directed to a standing vote when the motion was called. Government members stood and members of all groups in Opposition held their places. They were called to express their opinion by saying "aye," and the said "aye."

Then, with Pensions Minister Mackenzie leading, a demand was made for a division. Although there was little real doubt how the Prime Minister would vote, his following gave him by habit an ovation when he stood in support of the bill. There was a long pause while the Government faithful were counted, and there was a moment of tension when the turn came for Opposition Leader Graydon.

Mr. Graydon stood and cheers and cries and applause came from the Liberal side.

"And that goes for John Bracken, too," said Mr. Graydon.

Magistrate's Court

Magistrate A. B. Collins Belleville, presided at the Napanee Police Court on Monday in the absence of Magistrate J. B. Garvin, Kingston, who is on holidays.

The charge of assault on Gordon Stirling, Odessa, laid against Charles Cooney, Kingston, was dismissed. John Regan appeared for Mr. Stirling and W. A. Grange was counsel for the accused.

The charge against Arthur Whitfield, South Fredericksburgh, of maiming three ducks, the property of Edward Parr, was dismissed. K. S. Ham acted for the Crown and J. M. Simpson, K.C., appeared for Mr. Whitfield.

WAR STRIKES HOME

"Bill," as we familiarly called him, has gone. "Bill" Templeton will be generally lamented. But apart from his home where the loss is too deeply felt even to be mentioned, he will be missed most by the boys in the office. Knowing him as one who worked with him day in and day out, knew him, we are confident he met death, stoically, uncomplainingly, and with no thought of himself. "Bill" enlisted when he might reasonably have been expected to consider his work and obligations a first charge on his life. He had much to live for and much depended on him. But seeing his duty, there was nothing else to do than follow it. Whether at the stone, at the case, on the press or in the office, he was always the same — quiet, strong, dependable; always willing to carry a bit more than his share of the load. We miss his droll humour, his merry quips, his willingness to share the labors and burdens of others.

The war came close to us last week, and steeled our resolve that this thing shall not happen again and that war, with all its tragedy and heartbreaks, shall be outlawed from our world when the present holocaust has burned itself out.

THE ACCELERATED CAMPAIGN

The Russian Army is about as far from Berlin as Toronto is distant from Montreal. That is not so very far when it is thought in those terms. Every day brings the Red Army closer to the centre of the Nazi life and activities. The speed with which this army has travelled, and the ability they have demonstrated to keep the supply lines open, have surprised the world. The Germans seem to be quite incapable, as yet, of making an adequate stand anywhere. The Red Army does not stop long enough to give the Nazis time to dig in and strike back. However, it must not be assumed that the Nazis are incapable of such a stand. They are shortening their lines, and getting nearer the source of supplies. Soon, if they are able to do so, they must make the stand which will, at least, demonstrate that their power of resistence is not altogether gone.

While the Russians are thus pouring over Eastern Europe, the Armies of the United States, Great Britain and Canada are pressing on in Normandy. There has been some criticism because they have not moved fast enough, and there has been some comparison between what has been done on the Western Front with what has been done by the Russians. But the comparison is not a fair one. Conditions are totally different. Unable to give equal attention to both fronts Germany decided to concentrate on the Western one, in the hope that having conquered the United States and British armies, or at least held them at bay in a stalemate, she could turn her attention to Russia. The consequence was the great bulk of the armored forces are in the West.

The point we are apt to forget is that the United Nations are working according to a grand strategy, that each nation knows exactly what the other is doing. Russia knows that so long as the United States and Great Britain can keep up the pressure in the West and prevent Germany from transferring troops to the East, they are doing their part in the preconceived military plan. No one nation can claim glory more than another. The whole scheme of offense is designed to keep Germany busy on every front, and prevent her from concentrating at any one point, which was the Germans' practice and the secret of their great military successes in the early days of the war.

WHERE WILL THEY COME FROM ?

One of the questions which must be giving those in authority in the United Nations great concern in the future leadership of Germany is, to whom will the United Nations look for guiding the affairs of state in the Germany that is to be. Hitler has taken every precaution to eliminate all those who are in opposition to his ideas and to whom we might have looked for help in setting the German house in order. When Germany is defeated it may be necessary to divide the nation into three separate states. Indeed, there are not wanting signs that such may already have been decided on by the United Nations. But it is one thing to have the picture on paper, it is quite another to get the plan into operation. Obviously the United Nations will have to occupy Germany for some time, but they cannot go on indefinitely occupying the country. The ultimate responsibility for maintaining order, and developing within the nation a spirit of amity, co-operation and goodwill, must rest upon the Germans themselves. Ten years ago, Hitler ordered a blood purge as a result of which hundreds of those who were democratically inclined were put to death. Other thousands have since then, either been liquidated or put in concentration camps. The men who have been left in concentration camps even if they had the qualities necessary for leadership when put in there, will by now have lost their ability. They have been too long out of touch with things, too long confined on inadequate mental and physical nourishment. The prospect is a rather bleak one. The problem may yet prove one of the hardest to solve, and one of the most embarrassing with which the United Nations will have to deal.

It is to be hoped that leadership may emerge from universal sources. That has happened in Russia — when the Old Guard went the common people showed powers of leadership that have amazed the world. It is not to be supposed that Germany will be much diffefrent from Russia in this respect.

Indeed, when the Common People get a chance they always reveal great capacities. The United Nations may find the leaders they seek among the people who, to-day, are kept from expressing themselves because of the iron - handed dictatorships.

GOOD NEWS FOR FARMERS

Just now the farmers are enjoying good prices for their products. Something approaching a parity between the prices the farmers receive and the prices they pay, has been reached. In this respect as in so many others the Government has shown a good deal of initiative and ability. The control boards have maintained fair prices, without letting them get out of bounds as they did in the First World War.

It is not forgotten, however, that following the First Great War and the inflated prices, there was the inevitable collapse, with consequent hardship, unemployment and suffering. In an effort to prevent a recurrence of this condition, the Commons gave third reading, on Monday, without division to the Government's Bill providing for machinery that would keep the prices of farm products on a stabilized level during the period of transition from war to peace. In speaking on the subject, Mr. Gardiner said farmers would be allowed to sell their products wherever they could make the most profit. When farmers reached the point that they could not sell elsewhere at a profit, they could sell their products to the Board, which would pay a price higher than the average.

This is good news for the farmers. They need not cut production, as they are assured of a fair return for their labors.

HOW LONG CAN THE CHINESE SURVIVE?

BY FLOYD TAYLOR
In The New York Herald Tribune

At heavy cost in blood the Chinese have at least blunted the Japanese drive to take the Canton - Hankow Railway but there is no doubt that the military situation in China still is extremely serious. It is conceivable that the Japanese cherish a hope of bringing to an end all organized Chinese resistance. Japan's armies on the mainland are strong and well equipped and in the past have been able to take most of what they wanted, at a price, despite all the Chinese could do to resist them. They might have taken much more of China than they did had not the price of fighting in the mountainous regions of the south and west seemed high in proportion to what there was to gain.

They now have found urgent strategic reasons for another major campaign and are attacking a China worn by the strain of more than seven years of war, long cut off from any supply route that would give her a fraction of the equipment she needs and afflicted with administrative, political and economic problems, both old and new which are so distressingly difficult that they affect the military picture.

China's troubles do not result from any lack of courage or innate ability in her soldiers. When the Chinese peasant is well equipped, well trained and led led he is a valorous soldier who shows ingenuity in battle and almost incredible ability to withstand hardship. Even without good equipment or training he will march for hundreds of miles through difficult country, see half his companions lost to disease and starvation along the road and still show willingness to fight if he has a leader and is supplied with a little rice and a few cartridges.

The quality of the Chinese soldier under conditions that make quality possible has been proved in Burma and on the Salween but most of the Chinese troops available to oppose the Japanese along the railway are poorly equipped, few are well trained and many are led by officers who have had little opportunity to learn modern tactics. The Chinese soldiers march into battle barefoot or wearing straw sandals. They not only lack tanks and heavy guns but even rifles and cartridges and grenades. They have little quinine to treat ever-increasing malaria. Their clothing is poor quality cotton.

They are in need of almost everything that a soldier uses, for Free China has little industry with which to equip a modern army. The best efforts of their American allies have not been able to furnish what they lack. The Americans who fly cargo over the towering Himalayas while their achievements are remarkable in view of the difficulties and have been made at considerable cost in men and planes, take to China only dribbels by the standards of modern war. They are dribbels of thousands of tons but still dribbels.

These dribbels must supply not only the Chinese along the railway but General Chennault's air force, which is struggling to the point of destruction of men and machines to aid the defenders of the railway, and the Chinese who are climbing and fighting over the precipitous mountain of the Salween front to open a road to the great stores of military supplies in India.

In addition to lack of supplies China's leaders have to contend with political difficulties, especially the unsolved Communist problem, with economic troubles arising from her dangerous inflation and with administrative messes growing out of the evil legacy of ineffiency and corruption left by the Manchu regime, overthrown only a generation ago.

The immediate military task of the Chinese and of the American flyers fighting with them is to prevent the Japanese from capturing the Canton-Hankow Railway, which is the southern half of the line which runs from Peiping to Canton and which bisects China. For several years the Japanese have controlled and operated both ends of the Canton-Hankow Railway while the Chinese, separated from them by two wide strips of no-man's-land, have controlled and operated the middle section, now and then sending out saboteurs to disrupt the Japanese traffic to the north and south. The Japanese now have won control of all the line except a strip of somewhat more than 150 miles in length sogth of Hengyang and if they can take it all they will have a supply route which may be difficult to garrison and vulnerable to guerrilla attack but probably safer than their sea route along the China coast.

They will have a line to supply troops opposing any attempt by American forces to strike ports on the South China coast and will have cut off the capital at Chungking and the American forces in the interior from all contact with coastal areas still held by the Chinese.

Another gain for the enemy will be capture of American airfields along the railway and the winning of bases from which to attack other American fields not far from the line. This might do much to improve Japanese communications as the American fields at stake in the campaign have been used by General Chennault for highly successful attacks on the Chinese coast and within Japanese -occupied China on sea and river shipping, harbors, bridges, roads and railroads.

It will be a remarkable achievement if the Chinese ground troops and General Chennault's flyers who include quite a few Chinese, prevent the Japanese from taking the railway. The Chinese troops need and apparently are receiving all the help the Americans can give them, perhaps at cost to fighters on other fronts. If they fail to hold the railroad the military situation of the Allies in the Far East will be gravely affected as General Chennault has pointed out.

The cost in morale may be even higher, and possibly this is the factor in which the Japanese place most hope. Loss of the railway would discourage every loyal Chinese who has confidence to China's war effort despite economic disaster, famine, epidemic and all the other ills that have been faced by Chinese patriots in the last seven years. It would encourage every Chinese traitor who has collaborated with the Japanese in the coastal cities and would slow down the recent tendency of such puppets to foresee Allied victory and abandon aid to the aggressor.

The morale factor of China is perhaps more important than on any other front, for none of the other Allies has so little with which to fight as the Chinese. The fact that the Chinese have been able to fight at all during the last few years has been more a result of the courage and grim determination of the best men among them than of an ability to find useful weapons with which to wage war.

Because of the obvious importance of morale the Japanese may have developed a belief that a few major defeats would drive China out of the war. If they have they may risk enough men and material despite the imminence of attack on their islands by the forces of Admiral Nimitz, to make the military situation in China a desperate one. They are deluding themselves, however, if they believe they can end Chinese resistance. There is a core of resistance in China, second and tempered by long years of struggle, that is too hard for the Japanese to cut.

The military picture may grow far worse than it is now but the Chinese convinced of the coming of Allied victory and giving thought to recuperation, will not be driven from the battlefield on which they have stood erect and faced a stronger enemy for seven bitter years.

A STORY OF FOUR YEARS TILL D-DAY

BY TOM WOLF
Cabled From Normandy

In February, 1944, the German gauleiter for Normandy sent a report to Berlin on the resistance movement in Normandy. "Normans are apathetic people" he said, "industrious, law-abiding well and living comfortably. To all intents and purposes there is no resistance movement in Normandy."

His report made delightful reading everywhere — but especially in Normandy. It was the only place where one copy was received well in advance of its delivery in Berlin. There Monsieur Reynard, as was must of his line for the time being, leader of all resistance in Normandy, noted with satisfaction that the Germans knew almost nothing about the 2,500 men organized under him for action as and when needed.

The Germans have had ample proof of the error of this report and the effectiveness of Reynard's men, since D-Day. Two German divisions, for instance, had to be brought to the battlefront from Brittany on bicycles because of the sabotage of rail and road communications by the "non-existent" resistance army.

In the living room of his chateau Reynard told me the history of the resistance movement in Normandy and how he came to be its leader.

Reynard is a well-to-do business man in his middle forties. He is short, stocky, with curly black hair, thick, black-rimmed glasses, and the sort of familiar French face that's bound to remind you of someone you can't quite recall.

His part in the resistance movement began easily in 1941, when a friend approached him and asked if he would collect information for the Allies. Reynard hesitated a little but quite trust his friend's discretion — a distrust which later proved frighteningly valid because the Gestapo arrested him — and happily invalid because his friend betrayed no-one.

To prove he was trustworthy, the friend gave Reynard a message: "Elise. Your brother is fine. Signed Jacques." This message, the friend said, would be broadcast during the next few days by BBC. So it was. Reynard started work — as an individual collecting information.

For the first year-and-a-half of its existence, the resistance movement was merely a fact-finding agency. Reynard collected information about the results of Allied bombings, about German fortifications, troop movements, etc. At first, his friend would come around on a bicycle every few weeks and collect information, but soon a regular courier service was organized.

As the movement grew Reynard began to get help. From men working on German constructions, he was able to get complete blueprints of every important fortress the Germans built in the Cherbourg area.

Hiding blueprints presented a problem. Some he hid in a car for which he had made a secret garage out of wood and leaves in the forest behind his house. He levelled out this area, cut only at night, in his stocking feet, wearing a long black cape. Other hiding places included a dog house and even crow's nests high in the trees of the estate.

As his usefulness to the organization grew, Reynard began occasionally to accompany his friends on bicycle rounds to other members of the resistance movement in the area. And when early in 1943, the Gestapo arrested his friend higher headquarters asked Reynard to take over.

He took eight days to decide. On one hand, there were his children (who never knew about his work until after D-Day). There would be great risks—like the time this spring when German officers marched into his house and requisitioned billets in rooms where an illegal radio and arms were hidden. On the other hand, there was France. Reynard accepted.

At the end of 1942, the resistance movement had undergone a profound change. What had been until then purely an information service composed of approximately 100 individuals, then became an action movement. The action movement in France as a whole consisted of three main groups: Organizations Civile et Militaires, Front National, and Liberation.

The Organizations Civile et Militaires, which Reynard belonged to was led by middle class business men and farmers; the Front National by communists; Liberation by left wing groups stemming from the former Chamber of Deputies. But Reynard emphasized that these groups were not non-political in character. Thus Front National, though organized by communists, contained many men who were not.

The action movement was organized geographically — one chief and two aides to each section. No one man knew more than one or two others in the movement, so no one could betray the whole organization if caught by the Gestapo. Even Reynard himself knew only the identity of the leader of the nearest department of France.

Action organizations grew to include some 2,500 men. They were given no military training, merely told to hold themselves in readiness.

Only once before D-Day did Reynard get any call for action. An agent from outside France, wanting to show the world the strength of French resistance, tried to get Reynard to have his agents destroy all butcher shops in every Norman city and village. Feeling that this foolish bravado would needlessly reveal his hand, Reynard refused. In April, 1944 resistance headquarters in Algiers issued orders to three main resistance groups inside France to consolidate into one unit. Accordingly, unified councils were established in every department of France.

Thus, when invasion came, the resistance group was unified and ready. Results of this preparedness are being read on front pages of the world's newspapers, daily.

A Day Aboard The Mighty Battleship 'Rodney'

A London Cable From

The largest British battleship afloat is so big even the ocean is afraid of her. A man would be presumptious indeed to write a story purported to tell all there is to tell in a newspaper article about a 38,000-ton battleship with the heaviest armament in the Royal Navy.

There are certain general facts about M.M.S. Rodney that are possible to tell, however and one of them is the general picture of a day aboard such a monster of the sea. The day begins at 6:30 a.m., which is pretty early for anyone and humbling to a man who has worked on a morning paper all his life. Five-thirty used to be his bedtime.

The only seamen who must arise at 6:30, however, are those under punishment. At 6:30 there is the call to hands, and 15 minutes later the call to cooks. At 6:50 is what they call "breakfast and clean," when the dress of the day is piped. At 7:45 hands fall in and the details begin. With an scrupulous regard for precision the quarter-deck at 9 o'clock. Training goes on until 10:20 and at 11:15 the wonderful order of the day is given, goes under the name of "up-spirits." I think we shall pause at "up spirits."

"Up spirits" sets off one of the grandest or all British naval customs —the issue of rum. The petty officers get it first at 11 o'clock. Then all hands get it in order of rank. Each man gets his tot of rum every day at mid-day — two parts water and one part rum. It is not the kind of rum I have tasted before. IT IS NAVY RUM.

The rum comes out of a heavy cask bound in copper and silver hoops and bearing the words, "The King — God Bless Him." If a seaman gets no longer than 20, or if he does not want his daily issue of rum, he may draw about six cents a day in lieu thereof. That is more than $21.00 a year.

Sweet and quite strong, it tastes like the rum you get on cruises when someone takes you through a plant in Kingston or Port au Prince (or used to, at any rate). When the King comes aboard, or there has been a great victory, there is a double ration and the King's health is drunk. That brings up another topic.

Royal Navy personnel are the only folk in the British Empire who may drink the King's health while sitting down. It goes back to a visit aboard one of His Majesty's ancient ships of the line early in the Nineteenth Century, when the King came aboard For the toast, he cracked his head sharply against the low-timbered ceiling of the wooden confinements of George IV, and made it a rule henceforth that the King's toast was to be drunk sitting down by the Royal Navy. As a guest aboard H.M.S. Rodney, I too have had the privilege.

That is "up spirits" — oh happy time of day. Dinner follows at noon and the men under punishment are released from duty. Those missing the liberty boat, getting drunk and being unable to attend their duties, being insolent or stealing, maiming and killing their shipmates."

The commander takes care of "defaulters" at a morning hearing near the ward room. . . .

Afternoon begins with training work and general toil until 2:30 p. m., when the ship stands easy. At 3:40 there is more training and cleaning of decks (no Dutch floor can ever embed as a battleship's decks are scrubbed). And at 4 o'clock there is tea. There is tea everywhere in the British Empire even in the trenches at Caen, at 4 to 5 p.m. Nothing takes its place and nothing on earth tastes good at that time of day except maybe iced tea with lemon, but where can you get ice or lemons in England, now?

At 4:45 men under punishment are mustered and at 6:45 there is supper, though the officers dress and eat their meal at 7:45. The interval is consumed largely in the ward room where if there is a shortage of any kind of liquor or wine known to the trade I have not been aware of it.

Men under punishment are mustered again at 8:00 p.m., and 40 minutes later the boys turn in for the night. The ship is darkened at 9:30 p.m., and at 10 o'clock comes the original "Pipe down." These events and embroiderles go on more or less the same day after day, with three exceptions. Sunday is number one is a day of a special event. The amount of work done on such a day is strictly limited. On every event the day celebrates. Exception number two is when the ship is being refitted and is almost no one aboard. Exception number three is when the ship is in action, or ready for action, or just finished with action, and all rules change according to the mood of battle. In the tremendous barrage against the Germans in Normandy, H.M.S. Rodney's crew of 1700 men did not sling hammocks for three days and four nights, flopping down for a few moments of exhausted repose when and where they could.

Food on the queen battleship of the Royal Navy is not quite what one might expect. It has everything the civilian has given up for the rest of the war and many he has had at all. All the butter a man can eat, all the cheese he wants, steak mutton, fish, fresh vegetables, milk unlimited, tea and coffee and real hen eggs), porridge, kippers, toast and marmslade, coffee with all the sugar and milk he wants, cereals in an incredible variety, salad dressing and fresh tomatoes crisp lettuce and green onions, bread, and a sort of cigar, any sort of American or British cigarette, Turkish plain tip or cork tip, clean linen and flickering candles on the mahogany tables, candles gleaming in the finest silver candlesticks as well as with the sound and sense of Hitler's front line. How can such a nation lose a war?

After toasts to the King and the American President and "Monty" and "Ike" come the traditional toasts by days. "Monday night we toast "our ships at sea." Tuesday—"our men." Wednesday—"ourselves" (as no one is likely to concern themselves with ourselves). Thursday— "a bloody war or a sickly season." Friday— "a willing foe and sea room." Saturday — "Sweethearts and wives," and Sunday—"absent friends."

The words of the Sunday toast go back to Lord Nelson, as what doesn't in the Royal Navy? The honor of British seafaring people would be astonished and slightly embarrassed if he should ever hear all he had engendered in an island race.

How Aircraft Helped Put U-Boat On Defensive

Many interesting details about the Allied anti-submarine campaign and how it has put the enemy on the defensive in the Battle of the Atlantic is contained in an issue of "London Calling", published weekly for its overseas listeners by the British Broadcasting Corporation, as agency of the British Government.

An article by Carl Olsson summarizes the 1940 achievements of the Royal Air Force Coastal Command.

The bombing submarine construction yards and bases, the protection given convoys by land-based planes practically all the way across the ocean, the attacks by planes from British and American escort aircraft carriers, and the steadily increasing number of surface escort ships, all have had a share in subduing the U-boats. But within his account of the operations of the Coastal Command, Mr. Olsson gives an outline of the successful advance of the entire campaign so that today it is the U-boat that is the hunted and is "in constant peril of detection and destruction."

Describing the steady increase in the ratio of submarine sinkings to sightings by the Coastal Command, Mr. Olsson's article says the U-boats never have been equipped with better defensive apparatus, and never have changed their tactics so quickly and ingeniously, yet the enemy never has lost so many underseas craft and for so little results. His article was written primarily for British Empire readers, and refers principally to British units, but the anti-submarine campaign is a joint operation with the United States having an equal part with the British in developing and executing all new methods for combatting U-boats.

In the first month of 1943, he writes, there was a large drop in U-boat sightings attributable to Allied successes off Gibraltar, causing the enemy to withdraw much of his forces from that area, and a reduction in the number of U-boats in transit through the Bay of Biscay and other danger areas as they first developed their wolf-pack tactics in the central areas of the North Atlantic. In February, sightings went up, as an increase in the number of very long range aircraft countered the wolf-pack attacks by taking over outer areas of patrol and convoy guard duty.

"The upward trend of sightings and attacks continued in March," according to Mr. Olsson's article. "The 'Boffins' (nickname for experts and scientists working for Coastal Command on submarine detection and destruction devices) brought several new gadgets into play. Notably there was an increase in the number of aircraft fitted with the Leigh light. This device, associated with the name of Wing Commander H. de V. Leigh, is a searchlight of many million candlepowers, operated so as to find a U-boat surfaced at night.

May of last year marked the turning point in the battle against the U-boat. The inception of a new system of responsibility for convoy protection, together with a closely co-ordinated anti-submarine strategy between the United States, Canada and Great Britain enabled Coastal Command to set up a record figure for not only sightings and attacks but 'kills'.

"In the battle of wits between the opposing staffs, the Allies played a trump card. The Atlantic Gap was closed by V.L.R. (Very Long Range) aircraft using bases in Canada, Iceland and the United Kingdom.

"In Canada an Eastern Air Command, corresponding to headquarters of Coastal Command in Great Britain provides convoy cover over a certain distance, after which Iceland-based aircraft relieve it and in turn hand over to V. L. R.s operating from the United Kingdom. V.L.Rs. from the United Kingdom or Newfoundland can and do operate either side of the Atlantic, as well as in Iceland instead of having to return to their bases.

"Also a combined system of intelligence and signals procedure was agreed between America, Canada and ourselves. Every morning a three cornered telephone conference takes place between the A.O.C. in C. (Air Officer Commanding in Chief) Coastal Command, the Admiralty and the C. in C. (Commander in Chief) Western Approaches about convoy positions and required cover.

"The Admiralty U-boat Intelligence Section takes part in this conference and all sightings which come in the night before are available and appropriate action given to the unit commanders who will cover the route.

"Almost as important was the plotting up of a combined training area for anti - submarine warfare. Marshal Sir John Slessor, commander in chief of Coastal Command, had a great deal to do with the inception of this centre and with its policies.

"Toward the end of June, the enemy drastically changed his tactics following the tremendous destruction of U-boats in May. He abandoned his group system through the whole area in small packs, leaving the command a problem of how to get his U-boats over from the Atlantic bases to their home grounds with the least chance of getting through unspotted.

"In July, for instance, two or a pack of three were sunk by aircraft and another every day was wiped out by combined action of aircraft and sloops.

Later in the year the enemy introduced a new gliding bomb and anti-submarine surface vessels. Olsson reports that countermeasures already are in progress. In addition he reports, recently acquired bases in the Azores are providing further mid-ocean shelter and air coverage for Allied shipping.

Belgian Unity, At Home And Abroad

How closely the Belgian government in London maintains contact with public opinion at home is reflected in the underground press which reproduces the public speeches official announcements and decrees published in London.

La Libre Belgique the best known patriotic paper, which prints news reports under the heading "Today's Problems Seen From London," emphasizes the close contact between the "two Belgiums," at home and abroad."

Despair, another secret paper, publishing the government's immediate program on the country's reconstruction, points out that the government would establish prompt relations with resistance movements and political parties.

La Belgique Nouvelle praises the Government for its "faithfulness to treaties and the pledges it made to the country's traditional allies. The only acceptable policy on which Belgian unity can still be based. It rejects the announcement that traitors should be punished bec et oncle coach nails", the paper expressed confidence in the prompt fulfillment of the government's promise to execute the purifying task that awaits them."

The Belgian Government's stock of gold to the British Treasury at a critical moment in March, 1941, before lend-lease made such payments unnecessary, has been approved by Liberation, an organ of the Independence Front.

In commenting on a speech declaring the Belgian Government's intention to re-establish the national army, Independance Belge says it is liberated La Libre Belgique says: "We assure the government that their attitude and policy are in accordance with the wishes of the whole population."

"POWER THROUGH SELF-DISCIPLINE"

Text; Proverbs 1: 7-10. Jeremiah 35: 5-10. I Corinthians 9: 24-27. I Thessalonians 5: 22.

We, on this North American Continent, are not noted for our self-discipline. When the war broke out we were made painfully aware of that. Indeed, for many people, democracy simply means the right of a person to do what he or she likes. And that is exactly what a lot of people were doing. The law of the jungle was smart—if you got away with it—of course this is not a condition that is new in human history. It is as old as man himself. Early in the history of the Hebrew people, men of God, men who were idealists, and conscious of the need of moral and social stamina protested against the lack of self-discipline. Many of the sayings of these wise old men were collected and have been preserved for us in the Book of Proverbs, from which the lesson this week is taken. The Proverbs that have been chosen for study suggest to youth that they should listen to the advice of parents, and that they should steel themselves against temptation.

Perhaps discipline is best reflected in the way young people act toward their elders. Children should be taught not only to obey, but to respect the wisdom of mature years. I know this sounds a bit old-fashioned for a generation which looks on age as mid-Victorian. And yet, there is still room in the passing years, especially in those years have been properly spent and the lessons taught by experience properly learned. Obedience and respect for age and experience are two of the indispensables for building a strong character and developing that sense of self-discipline without which character cannot be achieved.

Jeremiah felt the burden of his people's conduct as a personal matter. He saw his people heading for destruction because of the way in which they were drinking. The king said the court set the standard and the whole people merged through all society. It is remarkable how sheep-like we are. A few leaders in every society set the social standards and do set them for the whole community. Only let the top few start a new vogue in entertainment and soon everybody's doing it. Some church families have it in their hands to set the proper standards.

Jeremiah knew the situation was beyond his powers to lead it. But what seemed the best to him, he followed a plan which has been followed ever since. He organized a small group of conscientious people who would stand for God's standards of conduct. His plan was bound to bear on them. Failing to make a dent on the whole environment of a few. Perhaps is the way to work yet. It may that if we could multiply small groups of conscientious people, who were conscious of the need of moral and social stamina protested against the lack of self-discipline. Many of the sayings of these wise old men were collected and have been preserved for us in the Book of Proverbs, from which the lesson this week is taken. The Proverbs that have been chosen for study suggest to youth that they should listen to the advice of parents, and that they should steel themselves against temptation.

While no one was at home during the afternoon some sneak thieves helped themselves to about $10.00 worth of tame raspberries in their garden in the west end of the village. FRANCE UNDER THE GESTAPO RULE

In 1944 the kaleidoscope of collaborationist politics in France has clicked into a new pattern. This new pattern has significance both for the future of France and for the situation which United Nations armies of liberation will find when they set foot on French soil. In a word, the centre of gravity at Vichy has shifted nearer to the out-and-out collaboration of Paris.

The announcement from Vichy that Joseph Darnand is now to control the distribution of food is the latest sign of the new kind of dictatorship which is growing up in France. Since New Year's eve Darnand has accumulated one power after another, until he holds — like Himmler in Germany—virtual power of life and death over every person in France. He had made himself, during the last three years, the key man in all the main legions and para-military formations into which Laval has sought to absorb or coordinate rival movements. As organizer of the Tricolor Legion, of the "African Phalanx" to help Germany in North Africa and head of Laval's Militia schemes to keep control of every effective armed force. On New Year's eve he was given official power in the Vichy Government as Secretary-General for the Maintenance of Order. The decree announcing appointment stated:

> The decision has been taken today to reorganize and reinforce completely the system of security which is linked with the Ministry of the Interior. These changes are intended to give the Chief of Government, as well as the Ministry of the Interior the means of getting from his services closer cooperation and greater efficiency.

Further decrees gave him supreme authority over all the police forces of France, and empowered him to suspend ordinary criminal laws and institute courts-martial of three men appointed by himself. He has the important power of protecting his own militia men in all the crimes they care to commit. Now he has control of food supplies. The banditchief has become police chief and food controller all in one. It is a concentration of power that is new in France.

The importance of Darnand lies partly in what he stands for and partly in what he is doing. This capo-dand conspirator with a criminal record has become the focus of self-defence among all the anxious collaborators of both Vichy and Paris. The prelude to his rise was a joint meeting in the Velodrome l'Hiver in Paris, of the supporters of Deat, Phillippe Henriot of Gringoire, and Jean-Herold Paquis of the Parti Populaire Francais. Darnand presided and claimed that now "a rapprochement has been achieved between all the parties" — "not a parti unique but a front unique." When Darnand took office Henriot also became Secretary of State for Information and Propaganda, and the Fascist Press unanimously welcomed the appointments. The ministerial reshuffle against the pushing out of a Pétainist like Lucien Romier and a Doriotist like Paul Marion.

The background to this overhaul was direct pressure from the Germans, exerted through Abetz and Renthe-Finck, and aimed at getting a reliable "invasion Cabinet" in Vichy. This in turn was prompted by the virtual breakdown of the Vichy machinery of order by the end of last year. Sabotage, assassination and partisan fanfare had spread enormously, and the passive resistance or half-hearted obedience of Vichy police and Civil Service had almost led to the paralysis of government. Common fear for their own safety brought the most conspicuous collaborators together and rallied them behind Joseph Darland, whom the Germans also welcomed as ruthless enough to stem the riot. He himself left no doubt as to his mission:

> We have to face two kinds of people who are a perpetual menace and a mortal danger to the country; the gangs in the maquis and the mass of those who by feeding, informing, and sheltering them become their accomplices. I shall strike at all equally hard.

Darnand has been busy with two main tasks: purging the administration and police of all suspect officials; and waging ferocious and intensifying war against all forces of resistance. During January and February about two-thirds of the former Regional prefects were moved round or pensioned off as were some fifty Department prefects. Wherever resistance has been on a large scale the prefect has been changed, and chiefs of police in the big towns like Marseilles ,Dion, Lyons, Toulouse, have been dismissed. Thus the levers of control have been strengthened. For the past year the collaborationist Press has lamented that—as the Cri du Peuple expressed it — "the French police does not always cooperate as it should" with the authorities, and too often allows the escape of arrested patriots. Darnand has dismissed thousands of lesser police officials and arrested some hundreds of them though he is finding considerable difficulty in finding others willing to replace them.

The counter part of this drastic reorganization of the police is the new campaign against resistance. In January Radio Paris announced 360 arrests in one day, and in February reported that 500 people had been arrested "for antinational activities". To carry out waves of "preventive arrests" is the familiar method of Himmler, and a normal part of the Nazi technique of terror. So, too, is the method of massive local deportations, such as Darnand carried out in Grenoble in the middle of February. In addition to occasional pitched battles between partisans and militiamen such as that near Toulouse the militias have been ordered to shoot at sight all suspect resisters who carry arms. Darnand has undertaken to arm and equip all loyal gendarmes, police, watchmen, and even firemen. The partisans reply by daring rescues of their comrades from prison, and individual assassination of notorious collaborators, as well as by even more extensive sabotage of locomotives and electrical power-stations. France is already a battlefield between the forces of collaboration and these advance guards of the French armies of liberation; and the battle is fought on both sides with all the bitterness and ruthlessness of civil war.

The number of men at Darnand's disposal can only be estimated. He has spoken of 115,000 police, and Lesdain, in Illustration, has given 100,000 as the total number of militiamen, including the militias of both zones. Laval's "First Regiment," founded last year as a primarily military body, numbers some 3,000 highly trained and well-equipped soldiers. When various other auxiliaries are added to these forces probably some 250 000 men are mobilized for the work of repression under Laval and Darnand. The militiamen now have to take an oath of allegiance to Hitler, and their number gives little impression of their real power without taking account of the Gestapo forces in France, which work in close contact with Darnand, and the German troops of occupation which — though kept in the background as far as possible—are the ultimate guarantee of Darnand's power.

Whereas these forces are officially organised and equipped, the forces of resistance are dispersed, underfed, poorly armed, sadly depleted by the systematic deportation of younger men to Germany. Over 2,200,000 of the best of French manhood is kept from participation in resistance by direct German supervision as prisoners of war, deported workers or members of the Todt organization in France. The field is left free for the tyranny of the thugs. What manner of men some of them are is shown by the employment of famous gangsters such as Spirito and Carbone as leaders of the mobile anti-terrorist squads." Carbone Venture, the Corsican "Al Capone" of the Paris and Marseilles underworld, risen to power since 1940 as a henchman of Doriot and is typical of the toughs who have won key positions in the collaborationist legions. He is reported to have been "killed in a train accident."

Banknotes Second To Barter

BY NED RUSSELL

Barter is better than banknotes in France. Whoever wrote "Yes, We Have No Bananas" made a mistake. It should be "Yes, We Have No Eggs!"

We think sadly of the last time we ate fresh vegetables, potatoes and bread. If you haven't got good teeth, you need a pair of pliers to eat your biscuits. And if you haven't got a good imagination and a bit of nerve you've just to continue wasting away on field rations.

One sure way of getting anything you want out here is to offer coffee. A Frenchman will give you almost anything you like for coffee. If the Germans had more sense they would have imported shiploads of it to induce the French to work harder. Anyway they would certainly have pretended with more energy than they actually did!

Tea won't get a thing for a thirsty soldier. They don't like it around here. As for canned milk or butter it's like carrying coals to an Englishman in Newcastle. Nobody wants either. They don't know what to do with their stocks now that the black market has gone with the German occupation.

Bread is on coupons here. Troops therefore cannot get it. But the sentimental French listened sympathetically to their hard luck stories And it wasn't too difficult to obtain a bit of bread once in a while by saying how sick one was of biscuits and other field rations. Now the authorities have prohibited French bakers from selling any bread at all to troops.

This ruling cramped the style of one bird I knew, so he tried the following line:

"Could you sell me a small slice of bread monsieur?" he asked "Dessole monsieur," said the baker, confirming the order that he must not sell to troops.

"But monsieur, I am an officer! Apart from the monsieur, I'll give anything to stop you from making me a small gift?" he asked pulling a pack of cigarettes out and tossing it in the air tantalizingly.

He walked out of the bakery with a small loaf of bread hidden in his tunic, and 29 cigarettes short? No sale. One more barter!

The French are all the more willing to barter because they don't think a lot of the value of paper money Besides for four years they have been used to bartering goods among themselves.

I know a woman who virtually bartered her services away. During the occupation the Germans paid a thousand francs a month for a charwoman As a result the French could not get servants. Threats of compulsion even more than the good pay made it dangerous for French servants to refuse to work for German officers.

But this woman was overage, and not the type suitable for serving at German officers' dinner parties. She looked too clumsy, like the fat farmer's wife she is. So she could demand almost any price she liked from wealthy French farmers who fancied her services. She got it. In addition one farmer kept her supplied "with a bit of butter." Another gave her "a bit of cream." Yet another gave her enough forbidden wheat to make her chicks lay eggs. And when someone slaughtered illegally a beef or a calf, Mere Adam invariably took a nice morsel home with her

One day she explained to me in a scandalized tone of voice, a certain farmer had the "impudence" to say that he didn't think he could spare any more that time. So Mere Adam said O.K., no meat, no laundry. And she walked out. A couple of days later an emissary of the farmer brought a peace offering in the shape of a nice juicy steak. So Mere Adam went back and has washed the farmer's linen once a week ever since!

The other day I saw a farmer's wife walking down the village street with a basket of gooseberries. I said "Combien?" She replied to the effect that no amount of money would buy them because they were already sold and she was delivering them to the customer right then and there. I sighed and at the same time I toyed with a can of chopped ham and eggs which a U. S. officer had given me the day before. I got the gooseberries!

During the last war, an ingenious and audacious crook dressed in the uniform of a U. S. Army major (in fact he was a private and deserted) sold a car—and of course—petrol! The buyer was a gullible and culpable French furrier. I am sure I could buy half a French village with a couple sacks of sugar and two bags of coffee!

I am beginning to wonder if the people who fixed the present rate of exchange for our dollars and pounds, didn't do so to stop us from buying up the country. It's amazing how little so many of us can buy with so much.

A man who had been stopping at a fashionable hotel was paying his bill. He looked up at the girl cashier and asked what it was she had around her neck. A ribbon, of course, she said. Why? Well, he replied, everything else is so high around here that I thought perhaps it was your garter.

He was kicked out of school for cheating. How did it happen? He was caught counting his ribs in a physiology examination.

SQUASH, A VERSATILE FRIEND CAN MAKE APPEARANCE IN ANY COURSE

Squash is a vegetable that is steadily increasing in popularity among Canadians. It is becoming an important vegetable in our diet, and if more was known about the varieties and methods of serving this vegetable, you would probably use it more often.

We will consider the varieties first. Squash is classified as winter and summer squash.

1 WINTER. These varieties mature in the fall and will keep well into the winter. They should be fully matured before being stored in a dry room at a temperature between 50 and 60 deg. F. The winter squash varieties are Acorn or Pepper (small and green), Golden Hubbard, Hubbard (green), Banana squash, Golden Table Green. You may not have realized that winter squash is an excellent source of Vitamin A.

2 SUMMER. These mature earlier than the winter varieties and will not keep as well. The straight neck, White Bush, Scallop and Zucca are the most common types of summer squash. Their mineral content is similar to the winter varieties but they are much lower in Vitamin A.

Next we will examine various methods of serving winter squash. You have probably been serving your family only baked or mashed squash and found they tire quickly of these two. There is no need for monotony in your meals when you are serving winter squash. It lends itself to many combinations and may be used in a wide variety of ways. As a dessert, main dish, vegetable or soup squash can make its appearance in any course.

In preparing squash you should wash it, remove the seeds and pithy part and cut to desired size for serving.

GLAZED SQUASH

Prepare as above and peel. Steam until partially tender, brush each piece with melted butter, season, sprinkle thickly with brown sugar and finish cooking in hot oven.

SQUASH AND PEPPER CASSEROLE

Prepare as above, cut squash into half-inch slices and bake at 350 deg F. for 35 minutes in a covered casserole with thin rings of green pepper a little onion butter, bread crumbs.

The Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has several recipes for squash dishes.

The Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has several recipes for squash dishes

Squash Puff

Three cups mashed squash, one cup soft, stale bread crumbs, half-teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, half-teasp on baking powder, two eggs, one tablespoon melted fat, one tablespoon brown sugar

Combine squash, bread crumbs, salt pepper and baking powder. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a greased casserole, brush over with melted fat and sprinkle with brown sugar. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 deg. F., until well puffed and set, about 40 minutes. Six to eight servings.

Squash Chiffon Pie

Three and a half cups cooked squash or pumpkin one cup of brown sugar, three eggs, one and a half-teaspoons ginger, one-quarter teaspoon cloves, half-teaspoon mace, half-teaspoon allspice two teaspoons cinnamon, one teaspoon salt, two cups milk two baked pie shells, nine-inch

Bake or steam squash or pumpkin until tender, press through a sieve. Measure and mix with three-quarters cup brown sugar, beaten egg yolks, spices, salt and milk. Cook in the top of a double boiler until thickened about twenty minutes. Beat egg whites until stiff beating in remaining one-quarter cup sugar and fold meringue quickly into the squash mixture. Pour filling into the baked pie shells and bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 deg. F. for ten minutes. Cool and serve.

Squash Fritters

Two men pedalled their tandem bicycle up a very steep hill and stopped to rest at the top. "Sure," said one, "that was real hard work, I did not think we'd get here."

"Nor did I," said the other, "I was afraid we would run backward," "that's why I kept on the brake."

THE DRAMA OF THE GENERALS

BY WAVERLEY ROOT

The plot of the generals against Hitler is only the third act played in 1944, of a piece whose first performance was given in 1941. The dramatis personae, exception made for a few who died during acts one and two, are the same. In October, 1941, the generals of the German General Staff knew what was not yet common knowledge: that the attack against Russia had failed, and failed disastrously. They feared what they had also feared when some of them opposed the Russian venture in the first place—a British attack in the west which would catch too many between two fronts. The old school generals of the Reichswehr, those who had always considered Hitler and Nazism simply as implements of their policy, to be discarded whenever they ceased to serve, decided that the time had come to discard him, before the disaster in the east became known and before a disaster in the west could occur.

They formed a group which they referred to as the Dritte Front (the third front), whose plan was to unseat Hitler, renounce Nazism, turn to the west with an offer of peace, and, having bought off all enemies but Russia, be enabled to win the campaign which had begun to badly. After that — well, was it necessary for them to tell the British what their plans might be after Russia had been eliminated?

This was a strategy that would have appealed to Hitler. He also believed in dividing his enemies, taking them one at a time. He had already, through Rudolf Hess, offered peace to England in order to have a free hand with Russia, and had been refused. Only a week before the generals hatched their scheme, he had made another unsuccessful attempt to conclude a peace in the west. But his plans did not include his own elimination. The generals considered that it was Hitler himself who was the stumbling block to the achievement of peace with the western powers. They assumed that if he were displaced a Germany which proclaimed itself non-Nazi could deal more readily with London than could Hitler.

But Heinrich Himmler's Gestapo, which had spies in the army as in everywhere else, got wind of the plot. They brought proof to Hitler that no fewer than twelve generals, of these, two of them marshals, were preparing to get rid of him. Five of them held important commands on the eastern front. Two commanded occupied regions. Five were in Germany, two of them in key posts in Berlin.

The threat was serious. The generals intended nothing less than the establishment of a military dictatorship to replace the Nazi regime. Hitler hastily sent trusted party members into all the important military areas to take over the key posts. SS men were placed at strategic positions in Berlin and Munich. Machine gun positions were established at important points in both cities.

His precautions thus taken Hitler set to work to purge the rebellious generals. It had to be done discreetly, for he did not want the public to infer that opposition to himself was strong in the upper circles of the army. General von Brauchitsch, commanding in the east, was not in on the plot; but he objected to the removal of generals under him who were. That is why he was deprived of his command at that time. His name has reappeared, this time as a probable member of the conspiracy in the third act of the army revolt which is being played out now.

Some of the guilty were removed to less important posts, some were arrested, some died. The degree of punishment depended less on the degree of guilt than on the amount of scandal that would be caused by strong action in each case. There were no admitted executions, but Marshal von Reichenau died of "heart attack" and certain other officers disappeared from public sight.

Hitler went before the Reichstag and asked for full powers to judge and punish by himself. He did not need to make that request from his rubber-stamp legislature. He had been exercising those powers for years. But what he really wanted was a public demonstration of his strength to cow any who might still be tempted to rebel against him.

It seemed to work. There was no further rebellion from the Army until the fall of 1943. Then more than a disastrous situation in Russia was coupled with the fear of invasion in the west. This time General Franz Halder, chief of staff, was discharged in ignominious fashion. Hitler called him in before the full staff, subjected him to a violent tongue lashing in which he heaped abuse upon him for having failed to implement his plans for the Russian campaign, and then announced his demotion to him with the concluding words: "You may go." Halder also appears to be in the new plot — and so does the man who succeeded him. General Kurt Zeitzler an SS general who was a personal friend of Himmler's. Perhaps that is why, when Hitler announced in the speech which revealed the attack against him that Zeitzler had been replaced by Guderian, that he attributed the change only to "reasons of health." In 1942 Zeitzler had been considered faithful; in 1944 that seems to have changed.

There was no open rebellion at the removal of Halder, and also of the air and navy chiefs of staff (the former, Gen. Erhard Milch, who was partly Jewish died in an airplane "accident"); but the generals' junta was formed, a sort of continuation of the Dritte Front which included, according to reports I received at the end of 1942, Gen. Halder, Marshal von Brauchitsch, Marshal Fritz von Mannstein, Marshal Karl von Rundstedt and Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz (the last like Zeitzler, originally a "Hitler general.") The names of most of these men appear in the report now coming out of Germany as members of the group which sought to overthrow Hitler with the reappearance of the conditions which promoted them in 1941 and 1942—defeat in the east and invasion in the west, the latter, this time, no longer a threat but an actuality.

The events of July 1944 appear, therefore, to be only a continuation of those of the autumns of 1941 and 1942. There is one important thing to remember about this difference of long standing between Hitler and the generals. It is not a difference on aims. It is a difference on means. The generals, as much as Hitler, want to make a world which shall be dominated by Germany. They have only one quarrel with Hitler. It is that he is not succeeding. They have only one reason for wanting to eliminate him. It is that they may succeed in his stead. Let the United Nations remember that, if they should be tempted some day, at the end of act three (or act four or act five), to take the hands of those whose only merit is the overthrow of Hitler.

A FARMER'S CREED

Canada's farms and farming communities are the backbone of the country. This "Farmer's Creed," which has been widely used in an adapted form in the United States, will help farmers to give a stable leadership in the years ahead.

OUR LAND A TRUST: We will treat our land as a heritage from the past which we will hold in trust for future generations. The soil has taken thousands of years to build and we will hand it on richer and more productive than we received it.

FREEDOM OF ACTION: We are called on to feed the nation now in time of war and a starving world when the war is won. In a spirit of unselfish patriotism we will play our fullest part in the nation's war effort and in her task of remaking the world.

DEFENCE OF THE NATION FROM THE FOE WITHIN: We can defend Canada from the foe within, while the men at the front defend her from the foe without. Canada has no more deadly enemy than those forces which work to break down her moral character, to destroy her faith in God and divide her by setting class against class and race against race. When the farmers stand firm and fight for the moral re-armament of the nation, Canada will be proof against these evils.

SOUND HOMES FOR SOUND FARMS: We will make our home life a pattern for the nation. A Country is as strong, healthy and united as its home life. A sound home makes a sound farm, a home where everybody in the family plays his part.

GOOD NEIGHBOURING: We will be good neighbours. Neighbouring was once the secret of our democracy. Now is the time to bring that spirit back. We need each other today. "Each man for himself" will not build the community or Canada we want. Neighbouring means sharing our tools and our time, knowing our neighbours' needs and doing our best to help them.

END PRIVATE WARS: We will end all private wars. Honest apology starts teamwork. National unity begins when you and the fellow you don't get along with straighten things out. Unity between the nations will only come through the same spirit.

END WASTE: We will be thrifty in the kitchen, the cash-box, the machinery shed, the barns, the fields, the orchards and the forests.

GUARDIANS OF NATIONAL CHARACTER: We farmers of Canada are guardians of the nation's character as well as of her soil. "He shall have Dominion from sea to sea" was the vision of the Fathers of Confederation. With our dependence on God we can make that vision live again as the secret of Canada's strength.

THE REAL BATTLE OF FRANCE

Military observers in Washington believing that an Allied advance out of the confines of the Normandy Peninsula would widen battlelines beyond Germany's ability to "plug the holes" look on the current fighting today as "the real battle of France."

One authority says the Allied success will so strain the German defence pattern in Western Europe that victory possibly can come with a speedin startling contrast to the sluggishness that has marked our campaign in France, thus far.

The optimistic aspects of the new successes in Normand yare tempered with reserve, however, by the knowledge that Germany still has an estimated two or thre earmies in France and apparently is determined to fight it out with a minimum of retreat deeper into Europe.

Increasing German resistance, steadily fore ferocious since D-Day, is considered confirmation of the belief that the Nazi High Command has decided to stake all on fighting in Western France and has abandoned the strategy of falling back and picking its own battleground.

Also significant. It was pointed out, is the unprecedented proportion of Hitler's elite SS Troops in France. They made up an estimated 30 per cent. of the total German forces in Normandy.

However, the cream of Germany's fighting men, the SS troops, have made up only 16 per cent of the German prisoners taken by the Americans and British, other reports indicated. This seems to prove the determination of Germany's best soldiers to fight to the end.

THE CANADIAN AIR FORCE

Present Strength About 200,000 (Women's Division Included)
Prewar Strength About 4,000

The Royal Canadian Air Force has three objectives:

1 To administer the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.
2 To maintain and supplement the air force overseas.
3 To provide for the aerial defence of Canada and to combat enemy submarines from the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

In the four war years the R. C. A. F. has expanded from a force of little importance to the fourth greatest air power under the United Nations and fifth in the world.

There are 36 R. C. A. F. squadrons in the United Kingdom but for every Canadian in them there are about ten other Canadians in the Royal Air Force. Thus while R.C.A.F. units participate in every major operation originated by the R.A.F., members of the R.C.A.F. comprise a very large number of the crews in virtually every raid by the R.A.F. With the exception of radio mechanics, nearly all R.C.A.F. ground crew serve with the R. C. A. F.

The first R.C.A.F. unit sent overseas was an army co-operation squadron which reached England in February, 1940. A fighter squadron arrived the next June and these fliers helped turn the tide in the air battle of Britain.

When the Germans in North Africa were driving on Cairo and then when they were reeling back again, R.C.A.F. personnel fought side by side with the R. A. F., first on the defensive and later on the offensive.

For a long time R. C. A. F. squadrons have been participating in the great air attacks on Germany and German-held territory. In one raid on Hamburg some they dropped five times the tonnage of bombs ever dropped on London in a single raid.

At least nine R. C. A. F. squadrons were included in the striking force which dropped 2,000 tons of bombs in an attack on Magdeburg early in 1944. In the Berlin attack on the night of January 20-21, 1944, the R. C. A. F. bomber group sent more than a dozen of its planes and scored on a single operation. These planes dropped the heaviest weight of bombs up to that time.

The Canadians, too, are adept at "nuisance" raids in which from low levels and at tremendous speeds they blast locomotives, freight cars and railway junctions.

From North Africa, from Sicily and from bases in Italy itself, the R. C. A. F. has been hammering the Axis forces in Italy.

R. C. A. F. fliers had a share in the successful Battle of Malta.

Through the vigilance of R. C. A. F. airmen in Ceylon that British outpost was saved from a Japanese raid and in Burma today R. C. A. F. fliers are helping to harass the Japanese entrenched in the jungles there.

The R. C. A. F. issued its first communique of the war in 1942, long after it had assumed an active role in the conflict. On January 1, 1943, an R. C. A. F. bomber group was formed in the United Kingdom, and on February 8, 1943, the formation of an army co-operation wing comprising three squadrons of Mustangs was announced.

Two of these squadrons received their baptism of fire in the attack on Dieppe on August 19, 1942, and from their experience a new phase of operational flying was developed. Each pilot spent a month with various army units, studying infantry, tank and artillery tactics before going out on low-level reconnaissance raids.

Thus from the army co-operation wing have grown Canada's tactical air units. When the United Nations armies storm across the English Channel in the great offensive that will carry them to Berlin, Canada's airmen will be co-operating effectively with them.

The R. C. A. F. now is awarding an operational wing to members of air crew who complete a tour of operations (30 operational flights) against the enemy and an additional bar for each additional tour. Air crew operating both in Canada and overseas may qualify for the award.

Canada bears the entire cost of pay, allowance, maintenance and equipment of all R. C. A. F. squadrons operating overseas and the pay, allowance and maintenance of all R. C. A. F. personnel in the R. A. F.

The R.C.A.F. squadrons engage in all kinds of aerial warfare and fly all types of planes. One of the most recent developments was the formation in November, 1943, of a squadron of night-fighting Mosquito planes. A later project, one of the most ambitious ever attempted by the R. C. A. F., was a new overseas mail squadron which operates a 7,500-mile air line for Canada's three armed services.

Approximately 1,400,000 letters from servicemen were brought back to Canada on the first return flight of this squadron. They were delivered on an average of eight days after being mailed overseas.

While the diminished threat of air attack on the North American continent has made possible a shifting of some Canadian defence squadrons overseas, special operations in Canada have not suffered as a result.

Convoy patrol and anti-submarine activity remain the most important duties of the air force's home war establishment.

Favorable war developments have prompted disbandment of the aircraft detection corps in Ontario, Manitoba and western Quebec and the release of more than 9,000 civilian observers. Some 20,000 observers in eastern Canada, western Canada, Newfoundland and the Hudson Bay and Hudson Strait areas are not affected.

READ THE CLASSIFIED ADVS. ON PAGE SIX

ALL ODDS FAVOR THE RED ARMIES

Military observers in Washington say the rapid advance of Russian forces through Poland increases the likelihood that it will be the Red Armies which administer the coup de grace to Germany by being the first to surge into Berlin.

Not only are the Russians much closer to the German capital than the western Allies — about 370 miles as compared to 600 — but their rate of advance is many times faster than Allied progress in the West.

Moreover, the Russians have greater power assembled on their route to Berlin. On the Eastern front from Lwow northward, there are seven armies hammering crumbling German defences. There are only two Allied Armies in Italy and but two whose presence has been announced in Normandy.

In the east, the Germans have committed such huge forces that their destruction would be a mortal blow to the Nazis. As of now this is not true in either Normandy or Italy.

There is now no indication that the Russians will not be able to maintain the terrific rate of progress they have registered thus far. In one month's time this advance has ranged up to a maximum of about 250 miles. The German must stem this movement soon or be in the gravest danger.

A collapse of their defences either in Normandy or Italy would be serious for the Germans. But it would bring to the Nazis no immediate danger greater than now exists in the east.

Observers believe it is quite possible that the end of the present wasting struggle in Normandy may be the collapse of German defences there. But even so, great distances and formidable obstacles must be crossed before the heart of Germany can be reached from that direction.

Between Normandy and Berlin there are such river barriers as the Seine, Somme, Meuse and the Rhine, the Ardennes, the fortification of the old Maginot and Seifgried lines, and such new defences as the anti-invasion positions along the Pas-de-Calais coast.

In the same way the western Allies do not have the power to administer a death blow to the Nazis in Italy. If the enemy's Pisa-Rimini line gives way, the Germans can stand at the Alps.

An Allied victory commensurate with the capture of Rome would carry them no farther than those mountains and gain the destruction of not many German divisions.

In Loving Memory

SEDORE — In loving memory of my little niece, Shirley Mae Sedore, who went to be with Jesus August 1st, 1941, at the age of 1 year and 9 months.

There's a little girl in heaven tonight
An angel with golden hair.
Her eyes the blue of heaven's blue
And her soul so pure and fair.
God lent her to earth for a short sweet time.
To us it seemed but a day.
But heaven must have been very sad
The little while she was away.

Ever remembered by her aunt,
31ap MARJORIE TYNER.

HARTIN — In memory of a good friend and neighbour, William Hartin who died August 5th 1941.

Memories are treasures no one can steal —
Death is a heartache nothing can heal.
Some may forget you, now you are gone,
But we shall remember you, no matter how long.

Remembered by his friends
31ap MR., MRS. HUGH TYNER

LASHER — In loving memory of Daniel H. Lasher, who passed away on July 31st, 1941.

You're not forgotten, father dear,
Nor ever shall you be,
As long as life and memory last
We shall remember thee.

Ever remembered by 31a VIOLET and FAMILY.

JOHNSTON — In loving memory of a dear cousin, Ruth Johnston, who passed away August 5th, 1942.

More and more each day, we miss her —
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed.

Ever remembered by FRANCES, STEVE, VIOLA JUBY

THE LATE MILTON B. HUGHES

The funeral service for the late Milton B. Hughes, of 9929 — 80th Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta who passed away in a city hospital on July 6th, at the age of 65 years, 10 months and 19 days, was held on Saturday, July 8th, from Andrew & McLaughlin Funeral Chapel, Rev. M. M. McLean, of Sedgwick, a former pastor and personal friend of deceased, officiating.

Mr. Hughes had been in indifferent health for a number of years. He was born in Roblin, and came west in 1915 and settled on a half-section of land, four and a half miles east of New Norway, south of Camrose, Alta. where he farmed until 1935, when he sold the half-section and bought a quarter-section at Hoadley Alta. THE TREATMENT OF PRISONERS

We are hearing a good deal these days about the Geneva Convention, the international agreement concerning the treatment of prisoners of war. The document is apparently more respected than read, for much that is written concerning it is not borne out by its text. For instance I have recently seen two references to its application in the case of Japan one which called for protest of her violation of it, while the other inveighed against some fancied abuse of the Convention terms by the United States on the ground that it might cause Japan also to cease respecting it. Both of these arguements were invalid, from the legal standpoint because Japan never signed the Geneva Convention.

Another fallacious reference to the Convention is frequently made when the question of reeducating or, if you prefer, propagandizing prisoners of war in the United States in favor of the democratic philosophy of government is suggested. The objection is made that this would be contrary to the terms of Geneva. Actually the Convention contains no explicit prohibition of this practice and it seems clear that its drafters did not intend that one should be read into it for such a clause was proposed and was rejected by among the countries which opposed it was Germany —who, incidentally, propagandizes all the prisoners in her camps.

Germany has a record for breaking and evading her signed engagements, but she rarely has the courage of her convictions. She seeks a subterfuge to permit her to violate the spirit of a pact while retaining some basis for an argument that she is respecting the letter. It does not have to be a very good argument, for she is quite willing to display the point in bad faith. It is only a pretext which she seeks.

Therefore, the terms of the Geneva Convention do exercise at least as much restraint upon her as is required by the necessity for finding a pretext. If she shoots R.A.F. prisoners in cold blood, she claims that she did it while they were trying to escape. And when she presses men from the occupied countries into her armies contrary to the Hague Convention, which clearly forbids this practice, she also finds a means of getting around the provisions of the pact without admitting that she is violating them. Thus in Poland she persuaded and coerced thousands of Poles to allow themselves to be declared Volksdeutsche — that is members of the German race — by discovering or alleging to have discovered a single German in their families a common enough circumstance in this region of mixed population. Once Pole had assented to this classification with, no doubt, the comforting reflection that after all it would mean better rations for them, Nazis drafted the Poles. If they were called to account under the terms of the Convention, they could claim, ingenuously, that they had not drafted Poles, only Germans.

Germany has been living in the very act of violating the law is characteristic of many other devices of the Germans in the occupied countries. It is accepted by international law that an occupying force may assess the costs of the occupation on the invaded country; so the Germans have called upon their victims to foot the bill, but have made the charges so excessive that the result is equivalent to wholesale plundering. German soldiers "buy" goods in other countries, in perfect legal fashion, but the money they use is not redeemable so that the procedure is equivalent to looting.

While the Germans are thus abiding by international agreements in their fashion — the United States is ignoring the provision of the Geneva Convention, which appears in Article 9. It reads: "Belligerents shall as far as possible, avoid assembling in a single camp prisoners of different races or nationalities."

Camp commanders in America have no doubt failed to consider the legal status of Austria, whose nationals, imported into the German Army, are confined in the same camps with Germans. The official position of the United States is that Germans and Austrians are of different nationality. The State Department has declared for itself that it has never considered that Austria has been legally absorbed into the Reich and the United States joined with Russia and Great Britain at the Moscow Conference in stating that "the annexation imposed on Austria by Germany" is "null and void."

I bring up this point, not because of any taste for legalistic quibbling, but because there is a practical value in separating German from Austrian prisoners; and before someone pops up to say that this would be contrary to the Geneva Convention, it is perhaps advisable to point out that it is actually recommended by it. Various reports have made it clear that Nazis are continuing to maintain their hold over non-Nazis by terroristic methods, even in American prison camps, with the intention of keeping their venomous doctrine alive and continuing it into the postwar years, to the future discomfiture of the democracies. It may be taken as an axiom that the proportion of Nazis among Austrians will be much smaller than among Germans. And the number of Austrian prisoners susceptible of being steered along this Fascist path is smaller than for German prisoners, and that segregation of the two would thus take a small first step along the path of combating the first psychological offensive of the next war, which is being waged right under the nose of American jailers.

This isn't all that might be done, but it is a start.

— THE BALKANS — ANOTHER WORRY FOR HITLER

BY RUSSELL HILL

The Red Army's drive for Lwow, whose fall enables the Russians to sweep westward across southern Poland, represents a potential threat to the German weakened southern flank in the Balkan Peninsula.

This is so because less than twenty under-strength German divisions in Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece are finding it increasingly difficult to control the rapidly deteriorating situation there. The defection of any of several wavering satellites could cause a collapse of the entire rickety structure of Nazi defences in the Balkans.

This possibility cannot be lightly dismissed. For one thing, there are no Nazi divisions in Bulgaria at the present time, only a few communications troops and liaison officers. On the other hand, there are 20 divisions of the Bulgarian army 10 within the boundaries of "Old Bulgaria" and ten more in unsafe occupation of South Serbia, Macedonia and Greek Thrace.

Bulgaria, therefore, is a freer agent than Italy was last summer when the German divisions there were able largely to nullify the effects of the armistice, or than Finland where the presence of Nazi troops played a part in that country's refusal to make a separate peace.

Already there has been a steady trickle of Bulgarian deserters in Serbia into Marshal Tito's Army of National Liberation. However, a chance of policy in Sofia which would realign the Bulgarian Army on the side of the Allies would be necessary to upset the present equilibrium of forces. And it would undoubtedly have that effect for German divisions in Greece would thereby be cut off and most of Serbia would automatically be liberated.

The popular theory is that Bulgaria will do nothing until the Red Army reaches the Bulgarian frontier. However it is believed that when the presence of the German divisions which are now holding the Rumanian front but would by then have fallen back into Bulgaria.

One reason for Bulgaria's hesitancy to abandon the Germans is that Czar Boris's policy to a large extent dominated by fanatically irredentist army leaders who hate the idea of giving up any of the territorial gains which have made Greater Bulgaria the largest state in the Balkans. So they are sitting tight waiting to see what will happen when the Russians arrive.

The offensive through the Galati Gap, the flat country beyond the Carpathian Mountains and the town of Galati where the Prut River flows into the Danube, must be tempting the Soviet leaders, for it could easily bring about a collapse of the Balkans. At the moment, however, they are naturally tempted more by the possibility that the drive across Poland into eastern Germany might end the war quickly.

Even if the Russians do not launch a Balkan drive the threat implied through Poland will represent an out-flanking threat to the Germans in the Balkans. Russian armies will be moving forward along the northern frontiers of Hungary and Czechoslovakia. In the latter country Russian activity might flare up at any time opening to the Russians the gate into the Hungarian plain. And even in Hungary traditionally anti-Slav and ruled by pro-Fascists there is always a possibility that at some time the opposition will get control.

Meanwhile, German garrisons in Greece are feeling increasingly isolated. With the Allies nearing the northern end of the Italian Peninsula, with Slovenian Partisans operating along the Austrian border and Serbian Partisans repeatedly attacking the German lifeline — and Belgrad—Salonica railway — and with the Russians on the edge of Roumania, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the four or five German divisions in Greece can hardly help feeling that they are out on the end of a very brittle limb.

Still less comfortable is the position of Nazi garrisons in the southern islands. Crete, Scarpento and Rhodes form a chain which is a first line defence against attack on the Balkans from the south. For if the Allies can seize islands they would have air and sea bases from which they could advance step by step to and through Greece.

The Germans appear determined to stay on these islands but lack the shipping to supply them adequately or to evacuate them if necessary. Therefore, some 30,000 Germans on Crete, 10,000 on Rhodes and a smaller number on Scarpento must be regarded as suicide, or rather sacrifice, troops, for they did not go there voluntarily.

Allied aircraft which range over the Aegean Sea, take a steady toll of enemy ships which attempt to get supplies onto these islands and with the stiffening of Turkish policy about the passage of shipping through the straits the Germans will be unable to replace these ships.

The whole situation in the Balkans can probably best be characterized as one of uneasy equilibrium which could be upset by any one of several developments — possibilities which will become probabilities as the general position of the German armies deteriorates.

Russia is called after the Russ, a tribe who lived there long ago.

VON RUNDSTEDT: A Typical Prussian General

BY WAVERLEY ROOT

Among the officers reported, still unconfirmedly, to have died for their part in the recent revolt of German Army leaders against Hitler, was Marshal Karl Gerd von Rundstedt the arche-type of the German, or, if you prefer, Prussian professional soldier.

What happened recently in Germany could have been no surprise to von Rundstedt. He had, indeed, foreseen it years in advance. To him, it was axiomatic that when Hitler should cease to be useful to the elemental forces behind him — the army or the Junkers the industrialists the bankers — he would be liquidated. And that whether he were willing or not. Indeed, he preferred, perhaps, that Hitler should not be willing, that his removal would have to be accomplished by force. That would be more spectacular, more telling. It would make it easier to derive a profit in dealings with the enemy if Hitler's end were sensational and bloody. The conspirators who disposed of him at the end of his career would seem to derive all the more merit from their act.

Suppose we look at what has happened through the eyes of von Rundstedt. It happens that I have in my files some statements which he made in the past.

• • •

For von Rundstedt, Germany had remained throughout her history a military power of which the direction had always been in the hands of the generals, though that fact had often been disguised by various governmental facades. Like most of his fellow officers, he considered Hitler and the Nazi doctrine as passing phenomena, useful to the Prussian militarists because they had permitted them, unperceived, to retain control of the reins of power while the Nazis were monopolizing the attention of the public within Germany and without.

The Reichswehr had been instrumental in bringing Hitler to power because he was useful to them. He had performed the task of arming Germany for the carrying out of the aggressive aims of the military men. The Reichswehr in von Rundstedt's view, was entitled to remove Hitler once more when he ceased to be useful to them. That was what had happened when his leadership direction of Germany towards defeat. For him, the thoroughly compromised commander with whom the enemy would make no pact, to continue to speak for Germany was now the surest guarantee that the ambitions of the militarists would not be satisfied. Therefore, they would sacrifice Hitler in the hopes that his executioners could make a better, and more deceptive, deal.

In advance, von Rundstedt had perhaps estimated the length of time during which Hitler would remain likely to be useful as rather less than most of his colleagues. It was even before the reverses of the first Russian campaign that he remarked in private conversation: "The substance of the nation is being exhausted because of the war and because of our political regime, which would weaken organisms much stronger than the Reich's."

During the winter of 1941, von Rundstedt expressed openly his fears of what might happen if during the summer of 1942 the Allies invaded in the West while Germany was engaged in the East. By 1943 or 1944, at the time when the decision to attack Russia was being made, he had already foreseen this development. In a report which he handed on that date to leaders of the Nazi Party, he wrote that a British attack in the rear, at a moment when Germany was hotly engaged with Russia, "might easily hasten the debacle. And give to the signal for a revolutionary movement not only in the occupied countries, but even in Germany itself."

That cause Nazis to lift their eyebrows, for they wondered whether von Rundstedt was thinking about a popular revolution or about a military coup intended to replace themselves a Reichswehr dictatorship. They knew that he had harbored such thoughts, for he was outspoken among his friends, and made no bones about criticizing the regime or speculating on the fashion in which it would meet its end.

"When Germany," he had said, "is on one occasion, to a group of fellow officers, "becomes once more a decent nation, in which law will be law and justice justice, then Great Britain and the United States will be confronted by our Germany, the Germany of the German generals."

That is what the old lone Reichswehr officers have just tried to do. They attempted to launch the "revolutionary movement" of which von Rundstedt had spoken in 1941 and to confront Great Britain and the United States with the Germany of the "good generals," as they are sometimes called.

But there are no good generals in Germany. Where among them is the man who has ever led a democratic cause? Where is the one who opposed any of Hitler's aggressions, for any other reason than that they feared it might not succeed, and so would have postponed it to another time or operated it after another fashion.

There is none in Germany, none who did not wish to wage an aggressive war against his neighbors, for no other reason than to establish power over others. If, one day, the military conspirators succeed, and if they confront Great Britain and the United States with the "Germany of the German generals," the democracies can only say to them, "We see no difference. Germany today looks to us just as she did before you threw your mask away."

V

HITLER IS DOING US A FAVOR

BY DeWITT MACKENZIE

Hitler seems to have held his home-front fairly steady thus far in face of the rebellion by the Prussian High Command, but we need feel no great disappointment over that since our main interest really lies in the military aspect of the situation — and things are coming our way fast.

Of course it would be a matter of vast rejoicing if civilian Germany should bring a quick ending to the enemy dictatorship by gangster whom Prime Minister Churchill labelled with an appropriate name which corresponds delicately euphemized into "bounder". However, the belief is widespread among statesmen and military men that we shall get a more lasting peace if we smash it through a crushing defeat of Germany's armed might on the battlefield. We've had the experience of letting Prussian militarism save its skin by yelling "kamerad."

Whichever way you look at it, we have the satisfaction of knowing that, as Mr. Churchill told the troops in Normandy, recently "there are grave signs of weakness" in the Reich and the war "might come to an end earlier than we have a right to say." The enemy's "central power is crumbling."

Hitler's blood purge, which is reported to have liquidated some of the greatest of the Prussian High Command, and a host of lesser officers who supported them, is doing a grand two-fold job for the Allies:

1. It's saving us the post - war trouble of removing these sorts of militarism from civilization permanently.

2. It's knocking out Germany's military brains since this is simplifying our task of smashing Reich's military machine.

SELBY

Selby, July 31. — The ground has been broken for laying the foundation of the new building for the storing of township equipment, which will be erected in the very near future.

One of the heaviest electric storms, accompanied by rain and hail, occurred on Friday evening. Mr. Gardner Jackson's grainary was struck, but not seriously damaged.

Mrs. John McConnell is a patient in the General Hospital, Kingston, where she underwent a heavy operation on Tuesday.

Mr. Joe Tate and Lois McConnell spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bell, Desmond.

Mrs. Wilde spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Carman Hyland, Bickford's Corners.

Mrs. A. F. Reid, Napanee, was the guest of Mrs. B. P. Denison for a couple of days last week.

Mr. Arthur McKnight is taking an enforced rest, owing to a loosened cartilage in his knee.

Mrs. Sislands and children, of Demorestville, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Wood.

Mrs. Vernie Booth, who was taken suddenly ill on Friday evening and removed to the General Hospital, in Kingston, had her operation on Saturday morning. We hope for her speedy recovery.

Mrs. Ross Winter was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Winter and other friends for a couple of days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Grange and Joan, of Deseronto, were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dorland McCutcheon.

Some of our young people spent the week end at Oak Lake Camp.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Robinson, also Frances and Harold, and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McLeod spent Sunday in Kingston.

Mrs. Demill, of Melrose, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hudgins and Miss Lue Hudgins.

Muriel and Olive Irwin are holidaying at Newburgh, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dorland Wood.

During the worship service of the United Church on Sunday evening, Rev. Mr. Merrick unveiled an Honor Roll containing the names of those from our community and church who have enlisted for Active Service in the present conflict. The list included Geo. Johnson, Wil Johnson, Percy Rose, Mate Gray, Norman Jackson, and Nursing Sister Audrey Dudgeon.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Merrick are leaving today for a two weeks' holiday. Service next Sunday evening is withdrawn.

On Thursday the regular meeting of the W. M. S. will be held in the Sunday School room at 2:00 o'clock. Mrs. Fred Jackson has charge of the program. All the ladies are invited.

DORLAND

Dorland, July 29—The heavy rain during Wednesday night really got to the roots. The scattered showers that have been occurring all week slowed up work, but grain cutting is well along, and the hum of the threshing machine has already been heard.

A life-long resident of this neighborhood passed away on Friday afternoon in the person of Mr. William Gallagher, eldest son of the late Jas. Gallagher and Ellen McKeever. Mr. Gallagher had been in failing health for nearly a year, but had been able to be about the house most of the time until the very last. The funeral services will be conducted on Monday afternoon. The sympathy of the district is tendered to the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman John and son, Morris, spent a couple of days this week with friends at Denbigh.

Mrs. W. J. McCrudden is spending a few days in Kingston with her son, Gunner O. W. McCrudden, who is in hospital there, having recently arrived from overseas.

Everyone is glad to see Gunner N. E. Brooks able to be around.

YARKER

Yarker, July 31. — Everyone was shocked on Sunday when news came of the sudden passing away of Rosemary Dobbin, in Kingston, where she had been visiting for a few weeks, along with her mother, sister Phyllis, and baby sister. The family came to Canada a couple of years ago, when Mr. Dobbin, a member of the R.A.F., was sent to Collins' Bay Airport. Then he was returned to England last spring, his wife and children came to Yarker. The sympathy of everyone goes out to the sorrowing parent's and sisters.

Mrs. Myrtle Clayton, of Toronto, is visiting friends here.

Miss Madelon Greer, Reg.N., of New York, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Foster, last week.

Mrs. Ruth Westley, who visited Mrs. J. M. Wright for a week, returned to her home in Cobourg on Monday.

Mrs. T. Melville and Patsy, of Detroit, have returned home, after visiting Mrs. Melville's mother, Mrs. W. Smith.

Flt. Sgt. J. A. Wright, who is in hospital at Westmount, Que., for a few weeks, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wright. Mrs. Wright and baby, Nancy, accompanied him.

Rev. W. G. Fletcher and Mrs. Fletcher are holidaying for the month of August.

"Bullet Proof" Tire

It was announced recently that the British "bullet-proof" tire is in wide use in Normandy. The tire is being manufactured in Britain and in America, to a British design made available to the United States under reverse lend-lease.

It is not actually bullet-proof. There is no such thing as a bullet-proof tire but by reinforcing the walls, providing an inner ring and strengthening the beading, that tire can be run for 40 miles before it is completely ruined. The new tire when flat can carry the weight of a vehicle without slipping.

The bullet-proof tire was preceded by another British invention which made its difference between victory and defeat in North Africa—a combination of cross-country and sand tire which prevented vehicles from bogging down in the desert. It was designed on the camel theory: a camel crossing the desert sinks into the sand much less than any other animal. This is due to the fact that the area of a camel's foot is greater in proportion to his weight than that of other animals and also has a specialized structure.

Depressed Indifference

The morale of German troops in Norway has sunk to abysmal depths following the recent military events, according to reports from reliable sources to Norwegian authorities in London. Both German officers and men are in the grip of depressed indifference, bordering on apathy in regard to what is happening on the different fronts.

Norwegians who have to come in contact with German soldiers say that the Germans are no longer careful to avoid criticism of Nazi leaders, and they openly admit that the German's cannot win the war. Soldiers who have been to Germany on leave depict the terrible effect of Allied air raids. "Germany is pure hell today," they say, adding that the troops on the Eastern Front are well off compared with those at home.

Hitler's popularity is gone and it is very unusual to hear the traditional greeting "Heil Hitler."

His defeatist mood is causing many Germans to lead a reckless life, drinking heavily to forget about tomorrow. They have only one desire and that is that the war will soon be over—no matter how. The terror of the Gestapo is stronger than ever, and it remains to see if the people will take the initiative to cut their agony short.

Living In A Fog

Recent German newspapers arriving in London reveal the fog of propaganda in which the ordinary German lives. The latest issues of the Nazi party organ, the great Voelkische Beobachter, did not print a line from the Russian front, not even the communiques.

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt alone still bravely prints the communiques, but a small story of "Soviet Pressure on the Dvina" is buried under flaming headline. The German Soldier, Too Hard and Too Tough—affirmation of Anglo-American war correspondents."

All the German newspapers feature what they call the "desperation" of London in the face of the flying bombs and the stoutness of the German defence in Normandy. The Voelkische Beobachter for July -- features a pathetic picture of American prisoners fighting for German cigarette butts, and includes a curious story about a French peasant who was reported to have dashed his cup of milk to the ground rather than give it to a wounded Briton as he was told to do by the Englishman's kind-hearted German captor.

The general picture which the German soldier reading a paper from home must get is of an enemy world, desperate and befuddled, dashing its strength against the steel wall of German defence, as stories of hunger in India revolution in South America, of a new deal in Roumania, and about the scenery of Inner Mongolia, stumble over one another. Russia seems to have disappeared from the German newspaper map.

DO YOU KNOW THAT —

Rice is better than maize starch for cold water starching?

Bran water is excellent for stiffening colored things, such as chintz and cretonne?

Many small articles, such as handkerchiefs, pieces of lace, and so on, will look exactly as if they had been ironed if, after washing, they are pulled into shape pressed against a window frame mirror or tiled wall, and allowed to dry there?

Pieces of ribbon dry splendidly if wound round a large bottle and left for some hours.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers: It is now time to give thanks for your garden efforts. This weather makes people hanker for salads and for long cool drinks made of fruit juices. It certainly is lucky that there are lots of makings of both in the market now.

Berries, for instance can be used to make a delicious juice steeped in water. It is good combined with any of the other stewed strained fruits—rhubarb for instance will add flavour and tartness, or orange juice may sweeten the beverage. Iced tea makes a good base for a fruit drink, too. The tea will make the juice go farther.

There are all kinds of vegetables now that are better in salads than in purees. Why not gather an assortment of fresh vegetables — enough for lunch, prepare chill and serve. For instance, a bowl containing wedges of lettuce, carrot sticks onion rings, radishes, goes well with scrambled eggs, boiled potatoes and some hot corn muffins. Put a tall glass of combination fruit juices beside each plate — and your family won't complain that they are too hot to eat.

Cherry Punch

one cup water, half-cup sugar, one-cup cherry juice, half-cup orange juice, half-cup grapefruit juice, 1 quart ginger ale.

Make a syrup of sugar and water boil five minutes. Cool. Prepare fruit juices; strain. Add syrup and ginger ale or ice water, just before serving. Serve with ice and garnished with cherries.

Special Supper Salad

One cup cooked, diced potato, half-cup minced onion, half-cup grated carrot, one-quarter cup minced green pepper, one cup of string beans, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon chili powder, two tablespoons vinegar, 3 tablespoons salad oil, one cup salad croutons, lettuce.

Mix vinegar, seasonings, oil and croutons together. Add to vegetables and toss together. Serve in a bowl lined with lettuce.

Boiled Salad Dressing

One and one-half cups of milk scalded; one cup of milk, cold; one-quarter cup sugar, two tablespoons mustard one and one-half teaspoons salt, fg. pepper and cayenne, half-cup flour, one egg, one-quarter of cup vinegar, half - teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one tablespoon butter.

Mix dry ingredients and combine with cold milk, stirring until smooth. Add slowly to scalded milk in the top of a double boiler and stir till thickened. Cook ten minutes, stirring occasionally. Beat eggs, add vinegar and Worcestershire sauce and egg mixture slowly into milk mixture. Cook and add butter. Store in a glass jar.

While distant fields seem very attractive to picnic planners, it has taken an "A" plan to provide enjoyable families to discover the possibilities of their own backyards. After all a picnic is more or less a matter of eating outdoors. So why not plan frequent suppers or lunches that can be carried outside. You'll find the children think it is an adventure, and it's not much trouble. A shady spot with some cushions or a rug to sit on, a place to put the extra food and you are all set. If you have enough small trays, so that each person can have his own it will be perfect.

Lunch

Picnic appetites are likely to be big, so plan the menu accordingly. Sandwiches are easy to prepare and good to serve, use soft rolls or bread sliced not too thin. Salads in chilled bowls should be filling potato with onion, raw cabbage with radishes, jellied beet with peas, string beans with raw carrots. Relishes, the ones you can pick up with your fingers, stimulate the picnic meal,— radishes, wedges of cucumber, small tomatoes, strips of pepper, pickled eggs, etc. Desserts are not a problem during the fresh fruit season, serve fresh fruit and a few cookies. Order half pints of milk for the day and chill before serving.

Sandwich Fillings

1 Five medium sized eggs will make about one cup of filling.

2 Mince or grind cooked tongue, beef, pork or other meats. Season with salt pepper and mayonnaise or relish.

3 Crisp vegetable fillings may be served at the picnic on the lawn since they may not be shortly before the meal. Shredded lettuce, sliced tomatoes minced onions, grated greens, etc. are good, moistened with very little seasoned salad dressing.

-:-

TAKE A TIP:

1. Do not mishandle fresh greens. Wash under running water and place on clean towel, fold and shake gently.

2 Do not add too much salt to prepared greens or they will wilt as salt draws out the juices.

3. Vegetable juice may be added to boiled dressing instead of oil. To obtain the juices, grate carrots beets or onion. Put in a piece of cheese cloth and wring out the juice.

4. It is desirable for both attractiveness and flavour to leave a small green leaf on the top of the radishes.

Stains on summer clothes may be removed at home if treated immediately using the following steps: a few drops of stain remover should be applied to the stain. Rinse material. If stain is stubborn, hold the stain in steam over the spout of a boiling kettle. Apply remover again.

1. For berry stains use javel water on white cotton, linen, or rayon. Sponge coloured cotton, linen, or rayon with warm water before applying lemon juice or peroxide.

2 Mercurochrome stains are removed by treating all fabrics with wood alcohol, then vinegar, and then wood alcohol again.

3. Mildew left for any length of time is almost impossible to remove. Wash as soon as noticed in hot soapy water, then put into javel water and exalte solution (three or four tablespoonfuls, for quart of water) alternately.

4. Grass stain on white cotton linen, or rayon may be removed with javel water or peroxide, but use wood alcohol on coloured fabrics.

5. Lipstick: sponge marks on cottons and linens with a stain remover of carbon tetrachloride; on all coloured fabrics, work in cold cream, then follow with carbon tetrachloride.

6. Paint may be removed by soaking stain in turpentine or carbon tetrachloride.

All stain removing agents should be removed by sponging or washing all material, then press, using absorbent cloth over cleaned material.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. E. L. asks: How can you account for the loss of two jars of peas out of seven which were processed in a pressure cooker on a small electric element? Both jars to preserve peas were from the same fresh batch?

Answer: The cooker should have been placed on the large electric element instead of the small one because the latter is not apt to have been receiving the same amount of heat. The jars should not be placed in a circle to avoid. The two jars may have cooled too quickly.

Mrs. S. T asks: Is it possible to stack tin cans when processing?

Answer: Yes, but be sure there is sufficient space around the sides, over and under them. Racks in the form of strips of shingle may be used under and over the cans, but the space around the sides should be about two inches.

Mrs. M. B. G. asks: Should jelly be boiled slowly or rapidly?

Answer: Jelly should be boiled rapidly. Long slow boiling will destroy the pectin necessary for jelling.

Miss J. B. asks: Should jam be made with cane or beet sugar?

Answer the test on cane and beet sugar shows them to be chemically the same. Either will be successful.

PUNISHMENT FOR THE WAR GUILTY

-BY DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

One of the grave questions of this final phase of the European war is whether there's likelihood of liberated peoples taking matters into their own hands and exacting reprisals on the Hitlerites who not only have enslaved them, but have committed wholesale atrocities.

To put the matter bluntly, the problem is whether there may be bloody massacres of vengeance before the Allied military is able to control the situation.

Certainly the Germans are afraid of this, and there's no doubt they have reason for fear. The opportunities would seem to be ample. Quite apart from the occupied countries, Germany itself is full of slaves — French, Netherlanders, Belgian, Polish, Czech, Italian — many of whom are aching for revenge.

Well, what would you do if you were a slave and perhaps had seen your loved ones tortured or killed? Better not, perhaps, eat one until they've counted a hundred. That reminds me of a conversation I had with a woman, a distinguished American friend who, incidentally, was a soldier in the last war. He got going on what ought to be done to reform the Nazis and since I've heard many similar views lately I'm going to repeat what he said.

"If I were a soldier again," he exploded, "I'd bayonet every Nazi civilian I could reach."

"Wait a minute," I grinned. "It's a hundred to one bet that even if you were commanded to bayonet civilians, you wouldn't do it. Moreover, you wouldn't be ordered to do anything of the kind. That's exactly the sort of thing the Nazis are fighting to wipe out, and their armies won't permit any illegal killing if they can prevent it.

"However, I agree heartily that unless the Germans are heavily punished, and are rendered absolutely impotent to engage in further aggression, they'll break the peace again as soon as they're strong enough. We've got to be just — but mighty tough."

A little later my friend reverted to the subject rather sheepishly.

"About bayoneting civilians"! he grunted. "You're right. I couldn't do it."

Of course he couldn't, and no more could any other civilized soldier. But that doesn't mean we've got to be soft with the Hitlerites. As a matter of fact the Allied chiefs have promised just but stern retribution. The Reich is going to lose territory. It will be deprived of all means of making war. It will be occupied for years by Allied troops. Nazism and Prussian militarism are to be wiped out.

Still, with all this, there's something missing. It's the something which my friend had in mind — something over which the enslaved people of Europe are brooding — and that has to do with what punishment is to be meted out to individuals for war crimes, from Hitler down to the soldier who commits an atrocity under orders.

But all that will be taken care of under the program we've been led to expect. If that is carried out there will be thousands upon thousands of trials for war crimes and the punishments will fit the crimes. Furthermore, the Allies have agreed that the accused shall be tried in the countries in which they committed the crimes. Thus for example the Russians will control trials and punishments for a vast list of Germans and against whom cases already are prepared.

War guilt includes both the one who committed the crime and those who ordered it. Thus it runs directly back to Hitler and his lieutenants.

Presumably there will be many desk executioners and many life imprisonments.

And this will be official and legal. But that won't stop cases of personal vengeance by civilians who have suffered under Hitler, though the Allies will do their best to prevent them. Revenge is being exacted already, and will increase as occupied countries are freed.

Fighting In The Monsoon

In past years the arrival of the monsoon in Burma has usually meant that all major military activity has come to a standstill. But this year the most important Allied victory in Burma have been won since the monsoon began six weeks or so ago.

The reasons for this are several. For one thing, better communications have been developed; and the strength of the Allied forces is greater; superior Allied air cover dominates the Burma air. But more important than these are the intensive study of jungle warfare during the last two years and the lessons learned from past experience.

From this study and these lessons, equipment has been improved to meet the requirements of monsoon fighting; the secrets of jungle camouflage have been discovered; field hygiene has been greatly improved; the troops have had not only intensive training in jungle tactics, but also a great deal more actual experience in jungle fighting. The experiences of the late Major-General Wingate's raiders are, of course, being exploited to the full by Major-General Lentagne's British and Indian "Chindits."

This ability to fight on during the monsoon has been decisive in Burma But even more decisive has been the unity with which the widely separated fronts under Admiral Mountbatten have been operating, for the benefit of the campaign as a whole.

The Allied objective is to make possible the opening of a land route to China, and to open the Burma Road. To accomplish this Lieutenant-General Joseph W. Stilwell, with American and Chinese forces has been advancing down the Hukawng Valley. The Japanese concentration has been to isolate the British and Indian Fourth Army Corps at Imphal in Manipur, and to cut off General Stilwell's Army in North Burma, leaving him stranded. The Japanese were fully aware that if they had succeeded the Allies, would have had to abandon the hope of opening the new routes to China; for this reason they turned nearly half of their forces in Burma against the Fourteenth Army Corps under Lieutenant-General A. P. Scoones (which is a part of Lieutenant - General W. J. Slim's Fourteenth Army, consisting of British and Indian troops).

The Japanese failed in their Manipur campaign, thanks to the resistance of the Kohima garrison and the brilliant counter-offensive of the Second British and Fifth Indian Divisions. General Stilwell's drive continued on his way down the Hukawng Valley, confident that he would not be left stranded.

The Japanese failure was sealed with the capture, two weeks ago, by the British forces of Ukhrul 24 miles northeast of Imphal; and they have no hope of reversing the decision. The Japanese Commander, General Mutaguchi, realized this himself. In order of the day, a copy of which was captured, confessed his difficulties in restraining tears when ordered to attack Kohima and to prepare for a decisive strike against Imphal. In order that these are the intensive study of jungle warfare during the last two years and the lessons learned from past experience.

From this study and these lessons, equipment has been improved to meet the requirements of monsoon fighting; the secrets of jungle camouflage have been discovered; field hygiene has been greatly improved; the troops have had not only intensive training in jungle tactics, but also a great deal more actual experience in jungle fighting. The experiences of the late Major-General Wingate's raiders are, of course, being exploited to the full by Major-General Lentagne's British and Indian "Chindits."

This ability to fight on during the monsoon has been decisive in Burma

GEO. J. TUSTIN, M.P. RAISES QUESTION ON CHILD BONUS BILL

QUESTIONS GOVERNMENT IN REGARD TO CHILDREN UNDER C. A. S. SOCIETIES

In the debate in the House of Commons on Tuesday of last week Mr. Tustin, M.P. for Prince Edward-Lennox brought up the question as to whether children under the age of the Children's Aid Society could be entitled to receive benefits proposed by the family allowance act.

Apparently the point raised by Mr. Tustin had not been considered in the preliminary drafting of the regulations concerning the payment. The following letter from Brooke Claxton, M.P. Parliamentary assistant to the Prime Minister gives some idea that the question will be considered.

Ottawa, August 4th

George J. Tustin, Esq., M.P.
House of Commons,
Ottawa, Canada.

Dear Mr. Tustin:

I am very much obliged to you for your letter and will see to the matter of the new Department gives it the consideration I think it deserves.

May I also say that both the Prime Minister and myself appreciate the way in which you brought this forward and thought that it was a most constructive participation in the Debate.

Yours sincerely,
BROOKE CLAXTON.

The following is the debate as recorded in Hansard:

Mr. Tustin—I believe that certain institutions are to be granted this family bonus?

Mr. Mackenzie King—Institutions do not get it.

Mr. Tustin — In many parts of Ontario there are children's aid societies which are maintained by the municipalities and which receive grants from the provincial government. In the community from which I come we do not keep up an institution for these children. Our children are boarded out in private homes which we think gives them a much better chance than they would have in an institution. Will these children receive the allowances when they are under the direction and supervision of families in private homes? Mr. Claxton — Under this bill the allowances are payable to parents with respect to children and to persons who maintain children wholly or in part. The payment is to be made to a parent as defined in the bill and he must maintain the child in order to qualify. Once you have a parent who maintains a child then a child is qualified under the bill. He would receive the allowance and this would continue properly, make the arrangement with a boarding school, a child welfare organization or anyone else whereby the child would be boarded and supported. The parent may pay the necessary amount to the institution and still continue to receive benefits under this bill. The allowances to be paid are payable to parents who maintain children.

It is contemplated that in a small number of cases it may be necessary for the application of a child welfare organization or a provincial or municipal welfare officer, to consider whether or not the special circumstances of a given case the allowances should not be diverted from the true parent to another from the parent to a guardian appointed by the court or to some other person, which other person may conceivably be an agency or organization.

Mr. Tustin — Perhaps I did not make myself clear. I did say, we do have such an institution. I would direct the attention of the parliamentary assistant to the fact that many of the children in Ontario being cared for by the children's aid society have parents who are deemed not capable of looking after their families. In our particular case we place these children in private homes instead of in the province's institutions. As I said before, the province does make a small gift to the children's aid society. I received a letter today asking me about this very point and I should like to get a clear answer. Will any assistance be given to these underprivileged children who are being maintained by the children's aid society in private homes rather than in an institution?

Mr. Claxton — It is difficult to give a categorical answer to the hon. member. There are many provinces and in every province there is a multiplicity of agencies which deal with children. There is a variation in the provincial arrangements and those of the municipalities, and at times there is a variation in the financial arrangements made by a particular institution. As I have said, the bill provides for payment to parents, excluding institutions. Institutions may be defined by regulations under the bill. If there are cases which indicate clearly that it is only right and just and in accordance with the general purpose of this bill that payment should be made, those cases will be taken care of. As I say, it would be difficult to give a categorical answer because what might be taken as indicating a line of policy which might not be susceptible of application in every type of agency.

Mr. Tustin — If consideration has not been given to this matter, I trust the government will give some real consideration to it.

Mr. Claxton — It has been considered and will be further.

Mr. Tustin — It appears to me that this is the class of child that should receive assistance under this bill. He has been removed from his family because the home is not a fit and proper place for him, because his parents are not fit and proper persons to look after him.

Silver Anniversary

By NORMAN MARSHALL

Ottawa, August 4th — On August 7, Prime Minister King celebrated his 25th anniversary as leader of the Liberal Party in Canada. His well-wishers threw a party in honor of such an important occasion.

Looking back 25 years, it is easy to be wise after the event. Mr. King's policies—or lack of them—which he has supported and imposed upon the whole of Canada have not always been those which have been for the greatest good of Chadians generally. He has a tendency to think regionally, and for his actions upon such a basis, rather than to grasp the fundamental importance of a unified policy for the whole of Canada.

Mr. King is a master strategist who can play both sides off against the middle or for that matter the middle put one side against the other side—and who has done so at every opportunity, to the consequent deterioration of the general internal relations in Canada. Specifically, he, more than any other living person, is responsible for the cleavage between Quebec and the rest of Canada.

On the credit side of the ledger, Mr. King talks like a radical. It is, however, the principles of a rad cal socialist or corporative statist. Individual liberty is no concern of his. He thinks in terms of what the government can do for the people rather than in terms of what the people do for themselves.

Less the indictment appear too damning upon such an occasion two things may be pointed out. Mr. King has the faculty of making hosts of friends who follow him with a fanatical faith which is only partially dependent upon Liberalism. He appears to many as a saint in armour whose middle course has preserved Canadian unity.

TIRE BLOW OUT CAUSES ACCIDENT AT STELLA

A bad motor car accident occurred last week at Stella, on Amherst Island when a car driven by Vincent McMullen who was accompanied by Mr. Harry Filson and his sister, Miss Catherine Filson, overturned when a tire blew out.

Miss Filson and Mr. McMullen were pinned under the car, but Mr. Filson was able to raise the car sufficiently to release them.

Miss Filson was rushed to Kingston General Hospital where it was found she had five broken ribs and a broken collar bone.

A WAR EFFORT!

The need for more blood plasma, and the increasing number of new donors, caused the Connaught Laboratories in Toronto to close down for July while extension to the plant was made. There will be an appeal to Canadians again to come forward in this war cause in order to have a blood bank built up. Now that the invasion is on, the demand for transfusions is great. No amount yet given has been enough. The more donors who help, the more wounded men return.

The next clinic in Napanee will be Thursday morning, August 17th. Come and bring that friend. An examination may be made at the Clinic.

VICTORY GARDENS

Wartime gardens in Canada produced approximately 115,000,000 lbs. of vegetables in 1943 in urban centres with a population of 1,000 or more. The estimated total number of such gardens was 209,200, and the production per garden about 550 pounds.

It has also been estimated that one urban household in every seven had a wartime garden in 1943. There were about 15 per cent more gardens in 1943 than in 1942, and 24 per cent more than in 1940.

Of the total volume or vegetables produced, about 37 per cent was potatoes; 14 per cent tomatoes; 10 per cent carrots; 6 per cent beets; 4 per cent cabbage; 4 per cent beans, and 3 per cent each of onions, cucumbers, rhubarb and turnips. Peas and sweet corn each represented 2 per cent, and all other crops 1 per cent or less of the total quantity produced.

The other answer to criticism might be that, since Canadians have so overwhelmingly endorsed Mr. King's actions at election after election, it may be that his lack of color and his pedantic tendencies represent the will of the whole of Canada.

WASTE PAPER HELPS SAVE LIVES OVERSEAS

The five-year-old on the left is collecting old newspapers for salvage. The wounded soldier at the right is receiving a blood transfusion in a field dressing station. The blood plasma which may save his life was shipped overseas in processed paper that Canadians from five-year-olds to 75-year-olds have helped to collect. That's the story of salvage!

Wastepaper has not ceased its purpose when Canadians have no further use for it. It is only just beginning and the role it will play comes close to life and death. 700 000 manufactured items are shipped overseas in paper. Food, blood plasma, medical supplies of all kinds are shipped in containers made of paper. The need is vital....urgent....now!

CHURCHILL BROADCAST RAISES HOPES OF AN EARLY VICTORY

SAYS AXIS ARMIES RECOILING ON ALL FRONTS

London, Eng. — Premier Churchill said last Wednesday he felt that the end of the war against the Axis would come sooner, perhaps much sooner, than he once expected.

"On every battle front all over the world," he told the House of Commons, "the armies of Germany and Japan are recoiling. I am increasingly led to feel that the interval between the defeat of Hitler and the defeat of Japan will be shorter—perhaps much shorter—than I had at one time supposed."

He mentioned no dates. But, confident and cheerful, he sketched bright pictures of a swiftly-approaching victory. He spoke one hour and 45 minutes before the House, which had just voted itself a seven-week holiday.

Aside from the Japanese reference, the most definite statement he made on this score was:

"I fear greatly the raising of false hopes, but I no longer feel bound to deny that victory may come perhaps soon."

In the same vein he said that "one cannot take more than a sweeping glance of the world war as it approaches the end of the fifth year and as it approaches perhaps its closing stage."

VICTORY PLANNED AT QUEBEC

The Prime Minister disclosed that the Normandy invasion and the coordinated Red Army offensive resulted from an agreement with Premier Stalin at Teheran on a plan approved at the Quebec Conference.

Speaking of the Normandy fighting, he said the Canadians, with the British forces, had taken "our full share in fierce and prolonged conflicts."

"We have fulfilled the indispensible part which was assigned to us by the supreme commander and under him by Gen. Montgomery," he added. "Losses of the British and Canadian forces together were about equal to those of the larger United States forces in proportion to relative strengths. It has been share and share alike in good fortune and bad all along the front."

The news from Normandy, he told a cheering House of Commons, is extremely good and "the First American Army advancing along the Atlantic coast might well be approaching the important railway centre of Rennes, about halfway across the base of the Brest peninsula."

Of Italy he said: "We may hope that operations of the utmost vigor will be continued by General Alexander (Allied commander-in-chief) and his army throughout the summer and autumn."

But he added that while things were going well there, "it is the Russian Army who have done the most work tearing the guts out of the German Army."

The Prime Minister brought the war sharply home to Britons with the disclosure that 4,735 persons have been killed by rocket bombs, with 14,000 injured, 17,000 homes destroyed and 800,000 damaged since the attack began June 15.

NEW LABOR LAWS COME INTO EFFECT SEPTEMBER 1ST

NO MORE THAN 48 HOURS FOR HOTEL, RESTAURANT AND RETAIL INDUSTRIES

The Ontario Labor Relations Board has ruled as the result of a conference July 26 that the standard working week for employees in the hotel industry, restaurant industry and in retail stores shall be 48 hours, beginning Sept. 1. Labor Minister Charles Daley announced Friday.

In the hotel industry the maximum work week is exclusive of meal-time periods and overtime hours of work are permitted as required subject to agreement between employers and employees "as long as the present labor crisis exists and the demands of war remain acute".

In retail stores, beginning Sept. 1, under the 48-hour week, "daily working hours may be arranged by an employer with his employees to exceed eight hours on a specified day or days, but the remaining day or days of the work week shall be reduced by the number of hours worked in excess of eight in any day or days" so that an employee shall not work more than 48 hours a week. Overtime is not to exceed 120 hours during a calendar year.

The Board met members of the Canadian Restaurant Association in August 1 and has ruled that, as well as working the standard 48-hour week restaurant employees must be on the premises nine hours where meals are served to them. In view of the present labor crisis, overtime work is permitted "in ratio per calendar year of 100 hours for the period from Sept. 1, 1944, to Dec. 1, 1944," this extension of overtime to be reviewed by the board before the end of this year. All rulings are based, the Minister said, on mutual consent of the parties concerned.

ACT NOT SUSPENDED

Labor Minister Daley in announcing the rulings, stated that the Hours of Work and Vacations With Pay Act, passed at the last session of the Legislature, "has not been suspended either as to the hours of work or vacations.

"Had the labor situation and the demands for war materials remained as they were when the act was enacted," he said, "it would have been very simple to have put in effect, but, as you know, the demand for war materials became greater, the labor shortage became more acute and so it became necessary for the Industry and Labor Board who are charged with the responsibility of administering the act to give every consideration in the powers they have had to administer this act with common sense, having regard for the successful prosecution of the war.

"Therefore," Mr. Daley continued "on representations from the Department of Munitions at Ottawa it was felt that in priority war industries considered essential to the full maintenance of the war effort, the act should be delayed as to working hours only, not with any intention of changing the 48 hours, but simply permitting a greater amount of overtime or allowing a continuance of hours already established at the prevailing rates of pay for overtime as already set up in most cases by agreements.

NO DEFINITE DATES FIXED

Postponements granted are not only with definite date, he said, but only while labor supply is short and war demands acute. The Board has met representatives from almost every type of industry in Ontario and of most Unions, Mr. Daley stated and in nearly every case where changes were made, it was by agreement between industry and labor. No request has been made and no assigns on of the holiday with pay section of the act has been ordered. Every person continually employed by the same employer for a year prior to July 1, he maintained, is entitled to receive a week's holidays based on 2 per cent of total earnings, the date to be set by the employer and, wherever possible, by agreement with employees.

The Minister announced that in the construction industry, the nature of which is intermittent, and employees might therefore never be able to qualify for vacations with pay, a system of Vacation Credit Stamps is being set up.

"At the end of each working day or working week," he said, "the employer shall affix to each record book Vacation Credit Stamps issued by the Minister of Labor." Employees may present these books on or after May 30 each year to any Provincial Savings Office and receive the money accruing to them on a vacation credit under this plan. All employers must keep record books of employees and working and overtime hours.

MORE ABOUT ROBOTS

There are those who wax eloquent about the diabolical nature of the Robot warfare. It is described as brutal and inhuman and the implication is that it ought never to have been invented, nor used and that the people who invented it and are using it, have done something which puts them quite outside the pale of civilized people. We have no brief for those whose inventive genius has been turned to mad destructive devices. It is a sad commentary on our civilization when nations use their gifts and brains to such a purpose.

What we fail however to take into account when we condemn robots is that they are the inevitable result of the war system. After all there is not much difference between firing a gun twenty miles, and putting wings on a projectile and sending it a hundred miles. Once admit that shooting is justified, or that bombing is a legitimate phase of modern war, then the matter of winged bombs, or unwinged bombs is beside the point. In the first world war poison gas was used. It would be used in this war except for the fact that Germany knows that it would not pay to start a chemical war. The United Nations now having command of the air would beat the Germans at their own game should they ever start to use gas. We may be perfectly sure that the Germans are not moved by any qualms of conscience by refrainmge from chemical warfare.

The use of Robombs cannot legitimately be denounced on the grounds that they are inhuman. All war is inhuman. There is no such thing as a gentleman's war. Once admit that war has a place in our society, that it can be resorted to in the final test, then whether we use robots or bows and arrows really does not matter. Indeed the more destructive the engines of war the more efficiently they fulfil the purpose. That is the only logical position to take.

The inventive genius of man seems to know no bounds. The present war has accelerated the development of all sorts of secret weapons. Every so often we read that another is taken from the secret list. If anything were needed to demonstrate the utter futility of war the recent inventions of destruction provide the evidence. The human mind was made for something more than this. The first great war was fought as a "war to end war." We failed then because of the lack of spiritual power to take advantage of the opportunity the peace presented to the world. Perhaps we will succeed this time, not because we are spiritually superior to those who sought to direct world affairs after the first world war, but because of the sheer necessity of the occasion. We have learned now that there is no limit to the destructiveness of modern scientific warfare. The desire for self preservation may after all be the determining factor of eliminating war from the human race. If the race is to continue, we cannot go on inventing even more potent engines of destruction. There is a limit and that limit will be the end of civilization as we know it.

THE BABY BONUS

There has been a great deal of controvery over the proposed baby bonus bill. It is described by those in favor of it as a forward-looking piece of social legislation. By those opposed, it has been denounced as sheer political bribery. However when the bill was finally passed not many members voted against it. Few people are opposed to family allowances as a principle. We are living in a swiftly moving world — a world in which social legislation undreamed of a few years ago is now a matter of law or at least of immediate prospect. The changes in the distribution of wealth covered by the rapid industrialization of society has changed our whole point of view with respect to money and the part it plays in life. We remember in the early thirties when ther was wide unemployment and money was so unequally divided, that while dividends mounted so did the number of people on relief. The economic position of people with large families was serious enough. The wartime prosperity has changed that temporarily at least and on every hand we hear it remarked that if the government can get money enough to run a war it can get enough to keep the people from going hungry in peace. The size of a family is to a large extent an economic condition. No way seems to be possible, apart from some sort of bonus, of seeing that parents of large families are enabled to meet the economic need. No employer would be willing to give a higher hourly rate to a man because he had a large family than he would give to the man who had a small family or no family at all. It is to meet this situation that modern social workers suggest a bonus. The new law when it becomes operative next year will provide a monthly payment to each child of six dollars, up to and including the fourth child. For the fifth child there is a reduction of $1.00 a month; for the sixth and seventh a reduction of $2.00 a month; for the eighth and all over the eighth a reduction of $3.00 a month.

The opposition to the bill has not been on the principle of it. Opposition has centred on it because of the proportionately larger families in Quebec. It is argued that Quebec will receive the larger share of public funds. Nothing can be done about this situation. If we are to have a united Canada, we must accept the dual nature of our population and frame our legislation in spite of the fact that one part of the nation will benefit more than the other. 200 million dollars a year will be needed to make the payments to the children. That is a lot of money, but it is a drop in the bucket compared to what we are spending on war. If this money will relieve parents of worry and provide children with the necessities of life and equalize the burden between the taxpayer with the small family and the one with the large family, we are all for it in spite of the political aspect of the situation.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

The United Nations have probably a plan for the future of Europe. There are not wanting evidences that there will be a move to dismember Germany and divide the present state into three separate states. That is good so far as it goes. But it will not settle the problem of Germany. The future of Europe will depend more on the political and economic set up than upon geographical boundaries. The whole world is up in arms. In every nation the war is being fought because the common man wants a better deal than he has had. Unless there had been dissatisfaction and unrest among the common people there would have been no war. War does not come when nations are prosperous and happy.

When the war ends in a victory for the United nations, the people of Europe will be expecting great things. We can imagine the Russians saying to the Germans, twenty-five years ago we were in your position, beaten, discouraged, poor. Now look at us. What made the difference? They will answewr their own question of pointing to their socialistic form of government. That type of government will be hard to resist. The evidence will be so apparent that the Germans with their logical minds can be counted on to accept it or at least to consider it seriously.

Among the United Nations there has been right along ever since the rise of the USSR a great fear of the effect the success of the Russian experiment would have on the people of the democracies. Even during the war there has been a tendency among them to do business with those on the right rather than with those on the left. We have not forgotten the Darlan incident, the kind words to France and the rather tolerant attitude towards Vichy. In the price which has been paid by the United Nations in the best of our youth is not to have been paid in vain, some sort of progressive social and economic system should be encouraged in the defeated countries. There is one thing sure as day and that is if the United Nations set up a reactionary regime, and place the government of the defeated nations in the hands of those who have had anything to do with the parties or groups we have been fighting, a wave of unrest, disappointment and disillusionment will sweep Europe into the whirlpool of internal revolution, the end of which cannot be foreseen. To prevent this the United Nations must see that the position of the common man is improved and that the system to be established will fulfil the hopes of all those who have been looking for a better day and struggling for it in the only way they knew how.

THE BIG BOMBERS PROVE THEY'RE FLEXIBLE

Air warfare history was made on July 18 when the R.A.F. heavies, which for nearly four years have been used as night bombers, smashed the German defences at Caen in daylight in a devastating 40 minute attack in which more than 1,000 bombers dropped 5,000 tons of bombs.

In this attack, which paved the way for General Montgomery's offensive, several new departures were made from the established role of the British heavies. In fact experts talk of it as one of the finest examples of the flexibility of air-power. These innovations were:

1. The use for the first time of more than 1,000 R.A.F. heavy bombers in daylight.

2. The bombing of German troops and battle equipment within a few yards of our own troops by such a large force of Halifaxes and Lancasters.

3. The variety of fuses used to make the right sort of craters, so that terrain over which Allied tanks were to advance immediately after the attack would not be rendered impassable. Other fuses allowed the bombs to penetrate some distance into the ground before exploding thus making huge craters capable of both blocking the way to the enemy vehicles and also blanketing the view of his guns.

4. And, finally, this was the first time the enemy had been bombed while our bombers were still in friendly territory. The R.A.F. heavies actually released their load while inside the British lines and the bombs, hurled forward by the great speed of the bombers, curved down to their targets on the enemy side as the planes were wheeling round for the homeward flight.

* * *

These innovations seem to have caught the Germans by surprise. There was no fighter opposition and everything points to the enemy having underestimated the possible power of close support of heavy bombers. Indications are that they expected this close support of ground troops to be given by small aircraft of the fighter-bomber type and the tenacity with which they have fought to hold airfields in Normandy, which are essential to fighter-bombers, seems to support this belief.

Another factor which must have been overlooked by the Germans was the ability of the heavies, as a result of years of night precision bombing experience, to take on targets on the battlefields without endangering the lives of the adjacent British troops.

The size of this 40 minute, 5,000 tons attack may be gauged by the fact that this weight of bombs is nearly as great as that dropped by the Luftwaffe on Britain during the whole of last year and the year before. It is far more than the total weight of flying bombs launched on England since these indiscriminate attacks began, and it is 20 times the tonnage the Germans dropped during the notorious Coventry raid.

In military terms it would have taken the field artillery of 16 British divisions, plus 400 .155-mm. guns to have put down a comparable barrage in the same short space of time.

Experts believe, now the possibility of such an unprecedented air barrage has been demonstrated, with such devastating effect, in breaking defensive positions, that it is likely to become a permanent part of the artillery barrage which usually opens an attack by ground forces.

Farm Floor Prices

Some stability of income is essential to the foremost of Canada's primary industries, agriculture. Too long, farmers in the Dominion have been dependent, in selling their produce, upon the whims of the powerful buyers' market, at the same time buying the essentials of their occupation and lives in a tightly contracted sellers' market. No one has attempted to give the farmer justice and a decently high standard of living.

Farm floor prices, while attacking only a part of the whole problem, attack only a part and leave the rest untouched. Their administration will require another army of surveyors with endless forms to be filled out in triplicate.

Farm floor prices are feasible only where the government controls the amount grown of every product. You cannot subsidize without controlling and it will be necessary to decide between various crops and products in setting floor prices.

Canada's most skilled agriculturalists have long pointed out that Canada's chief problem in agriculture is one of outlet. When a mass production grower, that she has tried to be the grain bin of the world and has neglected to outline in particular precisely which world sell upon their names and reputations. As long as you are trying to sell tremendous amounts of wheat in an open market, your price is dependent on a fluctuating world standard of living. But for the good, specialized product, there is seldom any lack of market at even high prices.

Farm floor prices are going to add to the cost of food to every Canadian because the money, every bit of money for public spending, comes originally from the people's pockets in taxes. The permanent high taxation level forecast by current legislation before the House of Commons will inevitably reflect itself in a continuation of wartime taxes into the peace.

In passing it is interesting to note that in the United States, only now has the taxation level approached that of pre-war Canada. In other words, since war taxes never completely disappear when peace comes, a Canadian has to earn more, from the very beginning, in order to have the same amount left over as our southern neighbors.

Which will probably be a factor in post-war emigration to the United States.

Sugar Saved by Canning Method

Matching the sweetness of the syrup to the sweetness of the fruit being canned saves sugar, say the experts in the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. So does a little time spent in estimating the amount of syrup needed to can a batch of fruit. They suggest using a very thin syrup for really sweet fruits like pears—a thin or moderately thin syrup for peaches and sweet plums, and a medium syrup for sour fruits.

Large fruits such as peaches and pears will take about 1¼ cups of syrup per quart jar, while small fruits only need about one cup per quart. The proportions of sugar and water for the different syrups and the yield are:

Very Thin Syrup: 1 cup sugar, 3 cups water, makes 3½ cups syrup.

Thin Syrup: 1 cup sugar, 2 cups of water, makes 2¾ cups syrup.

Moderately Thin Syrup: 1 cup sugar, 1¼ cups water, makes 2 cups of syrup.

Medium Syrup: 1 cup sugar, 1 cup water, makes 1¾ cups syrup.

To stretch sugar further half honey and half water may be used in making any of these syrups.

Known the world over, Salvation Army Grace hospitals take a leading place in the field of medicine. Last year in the 37 Salvation Army Homes and Hospitals across Canada, 20,104 persons were admitted. Owing to the war, and the fact that more people are earning money now and can afford hospitalization, there is a growing need for additional accommodation in all these hospitals.

People often write to National Defence headquarters at Ottawa asking "the present location of Thomas Smith, who is in the Canadian Army". Well, there are 124 Thomas Smiths in the Army, 14 of them from Toronto, for instance. Hence the necessity of supplying full Christian names, rank, number, and properly spelling the surname. Here's why. There are 5,118 Smiths in the Canadian Army, 362 of them answering the Christian name of William. There are: Allan 308; Allen 759, Cook 746; Cooke 221; Johnson 1807; Johnston 1,114; Johnstone 232; the McDonalds in various ways of spelling total 3,754; Arsenault 551; Arsenault 184. So just picture the task of clerks at N.D.H.Q. when enquiries come in. They would appreciate your co-operating with adequate detail.

Most employers in Ontario got a letter from Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, asking for their co-operation in the saving of vital crops, by giving leave of absence to their able bodied employees—wherever possible—for harvesting. The letter also intimated that the Department of Labor, by arrangement with the railways, will run a harvest excursion to the Prairie Provinces late in August and early in September, and for this the granting of temporary leave to experienced farmers, or other able bodied persons in industry is sought. The government will provide men going West for harvesting with return tickets at a cost of $10.00 to the man. Mr. MacNamara says that employers in other provinces will also be invited to give leave to men for harvesting in their localities.

The response of the farmers of Canada to the appeal of the government to raise more sugar beets to ease the sugar situation is indicated in cold figures. The Dominion-Provincial Agricultural conference in December last year set an objective for 1944 of 63,400 acres, but latest report is that the actual acreage contracted for between the companies and the growers this year totalled 71,438 acres. At the middle of June, Ontario reported plantings of 16,000 acres; Alberta, 30,000; Manitoba, 14,000, and Quebec, 9,500. Prospects at present are good for the crop, with help supplied by Japanese and German prisoners of war, conscientious objectors, Canadian soldiers and civilians.

Until November 15 farmers may use their trucks to transport harvest help, and a general permit has been issued for the harvest season exempting farm truck owners from the ban of carrying passengers except in the cab of a vehicle operated for transporting goods. It does not, however, exempt one from provincial or municipal truck regulations or the 35-mile travel limit on trucks not transporting farm goods. Special provisions are, of course, in effect allowing the conveying of persons to and from church or religious ceremonies or for medical assistance.

Greater than any corresponding period in history of Canadian commerce was the value of our exports during the first six months of 1944, a total of $1,746 million, an increase of $468 millions over the same period last year. Canada's contribution to the fighting strength of the Allies is something we can point to with pride. Just a few items for comparison with the last six-months period. We sent motor vehicles, such as tanks and trucks to the value of $224,000,000, nearly $60,000,000 more than a year ago. Wheat export at $196 millions was a great advance over the $80,000,000 in the period a year ago. Meats were almost doubled, so were flour, fish and eggs. It is notable that wool exports advanced from $1,400,000 to $10,700,000.

Acreage seeded to wheat in Canada's three prairie provinces in 1944, amounting to 23,052,500 shows an increase over 1943 by 37.8 per cent, the June survey shows. The increase, however, is at the expense of feed grain crops, flaxseed and summerfallow. Oats seeded is 10,446,900 acres down 11.4 per cent; barley is decreased by 14.3 per cent, while flaxseed shows a decrease of 53 per cent. Summerfallow was 1,210,000 acres less than in 1943.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON AUGUST 13th, 1944

"THE PRIEST IN THE LIFE OF ISREAL"
Lesson Text: 1 Samuel 2:27-36, 35; 4:12-18

Israel early developed a priesthood. To this priesthood Eli belonged. He was one of the better type of priests and endeared himself to the people for a long period of years. But his two sons, also priests, were not so worthy. They were "gluttonous, avaricious, and irreverent." It is around this relationship that the story in today's lesson centres. The lesson opens as "a man of God" confronts the priest. He reminds Eli that he had been chosen for a special purpose, to conduct the ritual and to lead the worship. But Eli had honored his sons above his duty to the service, and, according to "the man of God", had kept the best portions of the meat offered in the sacrifice for himself. Because of this, Jehovah has changed his mind, and will lightly esteem Eli and his sons because they had not honored him.

It was bad for Eli, an old man, to be thus humiliated by one who had never been a priest, had never been ordained, but who spoke the truth as he saw it. It was hard, too, because so far as Eli himself was concerned he was not deserving of the censure. His weakness was in having two sons who were a disgrace to the revered calling. It is a question as to how far a parent may be held responsible for the actions of his children. No doubt about it, the parent cannot escape responsibility altogether. Indeed, the home training has more to do with the character and actions of children than we are sometimes willing to admit. The rapid expansion of juvenile delinquency can be traced in no small measure to the breakdown of home discipline due to war conditions. Eli must accept his share of responsibility for the actions of his children. On the other hand the boys were themselves accountable for their actions. It is quite the modern way to blame our parents and our grandparents for inherited tendencies, and for the temperament which we possess. When all is said and done, the way men and women act is a joint responsibility of the parents first, and then of the people themselves. Certainly the sons of Eli cannot blame their own lack of reverence, and their own immorality entirely on their parents.

Another point arises out of the lesson, which has far-reaching implications. It has to do with the relative value of the priest to the prophet. The priest is primarily interested in the church as an institution. In the ritual, in the performance of his religious duties, with worship and with creeds. The prophet is concerned with morals, public and private, and with reforms. He is interested in human behavior, in morals, in all that degrades human personality. He receives his inspiration direct from God and not through the mediation of any institution, or organization. Amos, Hosea, Micah, and a long list of others have left a deep and abiding impression on society, quite in spite of the fact that they had not been trained for a life of service in the church. We cannot get along without the church. It is the agency of facts revealing grace but we are constantly to be on our guard against the church becoming just an institution to be kept going and a life whose duty it is to do the prescribed things in a prescribed way. The church without its prophets is a dead institution.

Eli's sons paid the supreme price. They were killed in a battle with the Philistines. They did not shirk the responsibility when the final test came. They gave their lives in defence of their nation. The effect upon the death of the two sons on Eli was to cause his death. He was an old man, ninety-eight years old, when the word came that the boys were gone. He was unable to survive the shock. Eli was a good man, but a weak one. He was a sad ending to a life of devotion to the temple. Perhaps the key to his failure to live up his sons right is to be found in the words recorded in the 27th verse. It was when he heard that the priest was taken that he finally fell backward dead. After-all—the boys should have had as much attention as the ark. They should, indeed, have had more attention, being human. Sacred personality must always have priority over an institution. Tradition is custom.

ONTARIO TO FIGHT FAMILY BONUS BILL SAYS PREMIER DREW

SAYS RIGHTS TREATED WITH ARROGANT CONTEMPT

Richmond Hill — Premier Drew said last week that in the family allowance bill which has been passed by the House of Commons, Premier Mackenzie King "has stripped from the clearly defined constitutional rights with arrogant contempt." He added that the Ontario Government will "resist, in every way possible, this carefully planned attempt to break our constitution by a steady process of attrition."

Addressing a Progressive Conservative rally in this York county town, Ontario's premier said that while the province was not consulted on the bill it was committed to pay $100,000,000, half the initial cost of the allowance scheme. If that money were handled by the provincial government, expenditure of $45,000,000 could provide family allowances for Ontario on a more generous scale than under the federal legislation, and the remaining $55,000,000 used for educational and health services, highway construction and debt reduction.

DECLARED "HIGH-HANDED"

"These are the things the people of Ontario would have for the same $100,000,000 if we retain control over the social services which was given to us by the British North America Act. That is why the Government of Ontario will not concur in any such high-handed procedure."

Mr. King had said in the House of Commons that the Federal bill would be discussed at the coming Dominion-Provincial conference, and that the provinces would be asked for their co-operation in regard to several of its details, said the Premier, adding:

"Mr. King makes it quite clear that the provinces have a joint interest in the administration of this bill, and yet he has the sublime effrontery to pass this bill without consulting the largest province, whose co-operation he now asks."

Premier Drew said he had been urging for nearly a year the calling of a Dominion-Provincial conference and had received "no reasonable explanation" as to why it had not been called sooner. It was essential that such a conference be held "before legislation was introduced into the House of Commons affecting the joint interests of the Dominion and Provincial Governments."

BRIBERY CHARGE REITERATED

He also criticised Mr. King for his objection to the bill being called a bribe and said that "if anyone had any doubt on that score it must have been removed" by speeches Tuesday night by Mr. King and Premier Godbout of Quebec.

Mr. Godbout told a political meeting that "this baby bonus is the result of his collaboration with Mr. King, and in the same evening Mr. King went out of his way in the House of Commons to point out the very special advantage th's bill offered to the people of Quebec."

"On Mr. Godbout's own statement, supported by the evidence of Mr. King himself, this bill is an outrageous bribe offered to the people of Quebec immediately before an election, upon which Mr King's last chance of political survival depends."

Mr. Drew said "this sort of conduct on the part of the Prime Minister of Canada can lead only to domestic chaos."

The Allies are Ready For Nazi Collapse

Plans for immediate follow-up of the surrender or collapse of Germany are reported here to have been worked out in great detail.

Officials familiar with their provisions say that they call for full co-operation among Britain, the United States and Russia in the hour of Victory.

For this reason and because of the general pledges of co-operation made at the Moscow and Teheran conferences last year, American officials say they are convinced beyond any doubt that it makes no difference whether Russian or Anglo-American forces get to Berlin first, or which first accepts a major German army surrender.

Early victory forecasts by Prime Minister Churchill last week brought a renewed wave of speculation in Washington over what will happen if the Germans surrender first to the Russians, or what difference it will make if they give up instead to British-American forces.

The answer given to both questions in official quarters is:

It will not make any difference. Either will accept Germany's unconditional surrender at any time or place — in the name of all Allied powers.

Britain and the United States pledged unconditional surrender at Casablanca conference 18 months ago. Russia formally subscribed to it at Moscow. A further commitment to joint action in peace and victory as well as in war was made at the Teheran conference.

The European Advisory Commission of British, American and Soviet representatives was assigned the task of working out plans for military and political co-operation when Germany quits. The Commission has completed its work.

The plans cover two distinct periods:

1. The end of organized resistance. These may cover several days or even weeks or may come as a single orderly surrender. The enemy's eastern front may collapse and the Russians march through Berlin while British, American and Canadian troops are still fighting their way through France.

2. Occupation. This provides for three-way occupation of Germany by British, Russian and American troops, joint occupation of Berlin, creation of a joint military commission to administer the country and means of getting civil authorities functioning again. Completion of the task of disarming Germany, including destruction or conversion of its armament factories.

The period of the greatest confusion will be the first. Initially Berlin may be occupied by an army alone or most of Germany may be overrun by one United Nations' force or the other before all organized resistance halts.

Plans for this period, therefore, are reported to be general and to provide several alternatives.

In official quarters here there is hope that Hitler will still be alive and can be found to sign the surrender. It is said that this would in no way prejudice the terms which would then be imposed and which are understood to call for turning over Hitler and other war criminals to the Allies for trial.

A Mother's Prayer

A mother's heart forever aching,
The sun it never seems to shine,
Each night you'll hear her softly praying;
Bring back that soldier boy of mine.

Every mother's heart is burdened,
But her love will always shine
As she prays to God in Heaven
Please watch o'er that boy of mine.

Be he one in Brita'n's Navy,
On the land or in the air,
Pu him somewhere a mother's praying!
Of my boy, dear God take care.

Though her courage lives undaunted,
Within her heart there is no joy
As she sits each night a rocking
Praying for her soldier boy.

May our mothers' prayers be answered,
May this futile war soon end,
Restoring peace throughout the nations,
To remain everlasting friends.

This poem has been received by Mrs. L. Hartin, Napanee, from her son, Gunner Dorland Hartin, serving somewhere in Italy.

GASOLINE
THE VITAL WEAPON

Gasoline may well be called the strongest single weapon of this mechanical war. To move an armored division one mile requires 2,000 gallons, and a fleet of bombers and escort fighters raiding Germany uses up 5,250,000 gallons of high test aviation gasoline.

Canada could not become the hub of the world's largest air training plan without sending Canadian consumption of aviation fuel to staggering heights. For instance, in one 30-day period, aircraft operated by the Royal Canad'an Air Force in Canada and Newfoundland consumed an average of 548,000 gallons daily.

Although Canada must provide all the fuels required for its expanding navy, which consumes more than 2,150,000 gallons each week, for its bombers leaving Labrador and Newfoundland for the United Kingdom and for those leaving Edmonton for Russia; although the Dominion must fuel aircraft operating under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the convoys leaving its shores, the army, war factories, agricultural machinery for food production, and essential transportation — not one aircraft, ship or machine tool has been stopped for lack of fuel.

The consumption of aviation gasoline, including exports from Canada, for the five calendar years commencing with 1939 and ending with 1943, and for the 12 months ending March 31, 1944, shows a spectacular 34-fold increase:

	Gallons
1939	5,453,980
1940	12,661,425
1941	57,181,905
1942	119,740,110
1943	173,208,910
1944 (year ended March 31)	176,298,570

Pre-invasion estimates of the export of Canadian aviation gasoline for the entire year 1944 are approximately four times the exports of last year.

Canada is dependent on outside sources for 85 per cent of its petroleum requirements, 60 per cent of which must be brought in by ocean tanker, transportation which has been in short supply since 1941. The Dominion is drawing on the same sources, inventories and transportation facilities as its allies, and the sources of crude oil supply are dwindling. Meanwhile invasion warfare is making even greater demands on these sources.

Motor gasoline consumption in Canada for the four years from 1941 to March 31, 1944, for all purposes, including the Armed Forces, the Alaska Highway, agricultural and other war essentials totalled the huge sum of 3,428,354,440 gallons:

Year ended March 31	Gallons
1941	882,216,930
1942	944,178,060
1943	787,710,630
1944	814,248,820

This covered a period of great war developments. Trucks and equipment collected for the construction of more than 120 additional airports for the R.A.F. and the R.C.A.F., many far removed from rail heads. Also the trucks and equipment for the Alaska Highway and a greatly increased truck haulage of materials from widely scattered war plants were fuelled. All this was done, and at the same time, largely as a result of civilian rationing, the consumption of motor gasoline in the last two years was reduced slightly under that for the year 1939, which totalled 824,-997,390 gallons.

In the first eight days alone of the invasion campaign allied aircraft flew 56,000 sorties. In the 84 days preceding invasion more than 200,000,000 gallons of aviation fuel were consumed in anti-Axis bombing. To supply 500,000 European invasion troops for one week requires more than 25,000,000 gallons of petroleum products. Many thousands of oil burning warships and landing barges are shuttling ceaselessly across the English Channel. Tanks, trucks, mobile artillery, tractors, ambulances in fantastic numbers are in action.

Every barrel of petroleum products which can be saved means just that much more for allied battlefronts and the transportation necessary to get war materials on hand on time. Every gallon of gasoline conserved at home is another gallon for the planes and mechanized equipment of Canadian fighters in foreign fields and skies.

A STORY OF HORROR

A Message to Canadian Troops From Brigadier Crerar

I consider it necessary that all Canadian troops serving in the 21st Army group should be informed officially by me that on June 8 near Payie, in Calvados, Normandy, certain personnel of the 3rd Canadian Infantry Division who had been captured by the enemy were murdered by members of the German army.

A court of inquiry assembled at my request and composed of senior officers of the British, American and Canadian armies has completed exhaustive enquiries and has examined all available evidence.

It finds that on that date and place mentioned above 19 Canadian soldiers, including one officer, were deliberately murdered by members of the 12th SS. Panzer Division — (Hitler Jugend) — in clear violation of the well-organized laws and usages of war. All were members of a Canadian Infantry Brigade.

This is a brief story of an abhorrent act. There is no shadow of doubt as to its authenticity nor can there be any doubt as to the deep anger which will rise in the heart and mind of every Canadian on hearing of what has taken place. It is because I realize the anger which you all will feel that I want definite guidance from me to reach all ranks at this time.

The universal and natural determination of Canadian soldiers to avenge the death of our comrades must not under any circumstances take the form of retaliation in kind. The commission of atrocities will be left as a bestial prerogative of Hitler's Germans. Instead, Canadian anger must be converted into a steel-hard determination to destroy the enemy in battle, to hit harder, to advance faster and above all never stop fighting and fighting hard while life remains.

If any reminder was needed by any of us concerning the issues we are fighting for and the evil force we are fighting against, this has surely been provided.

Dish Fit For King!

Spanish steak, first cousin to Swiss steak, uses tomatoes and is a dish "for the King's taste." It can be a real economy dish, too, if made from one of the forequarter cuts of beef which have recently been reduced in price.

The secret of its goodness, according to the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, is the long slow cooking which blends flavors and tenderizes the meat.

Those who must prepare dinner quickly at the end of a working day often feel that such dishes are not for them. Pre-cooking is the answer here. Start the steak tonight, let it cook for about 1½ hours and pop it into the ice box. Tomorrow it will finish cooking while the vegetables are being prepared.

SPANISH STEAK

1½ to 2 lbs. lean beef (chuck, blade, shoulder, cut 1 inch thick), 2 tablespoons flour, ¾ teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 1½ tablespoons melted fat, 1½ cups stewed tomatoes or 4 medium tomatoes, peeled and cut up, 2 onions, sliced.

Mix flour salt and pepper. Sprinkle half of the flour over one side of meat and pound thoroughly into the meat, using the edge of a plate. Repeat on the other side, adding remaining seasoned flour. Sear meat in hot fat in heavy frying pan. Add tomatoes and onions. Cover closely and simmer over low heat for about 2 hours, or until meat is very tender, adding more liquid during cooking if necessary. Six servings.

WHISTLING IN THE DARK

The German Minister of Finance, Walther Funk, came out with a plan in which he pledges that the output of German factories after the war will be used to "wipe out the clearing balances Germany owes other countries."

The whole plan sounds very much like an effort to bribe the occupied countries in helping Germany preserve German industries in the case of defeat.

The Nazi-controlled Amsterdam newspaper "de Telegraaf" of July 13 said that Funk had described the plan in a signed article published July 11 in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

"This plan, as indicated in "de Telegraaf" would serve the Germans in a dual manner. It would rid Germany of the large clearing balances the country now owes and at the same time create an outlet for much German manufacturing capacity after the war.

"De Telegraaf said Funk's plan would probably work out as follows:

Any country having a large claim on Germany which is at the moment unpayable would issue an internal loan of the same value as the claim and strike the claim out of its budget.

"Subscribers to the loan would receive priority in the delivery of German machines, quality products and so on, after the war."

"The productive power and technical achievements of the German industry form an economic guarantee for the loan," de Telegraaf added. "The clearing debt thus becomes an advance payment on German postwar deliveries, and would take the form of a fund negotiable on the stock exchange." So far "de Telegraaf."

In this clever plan the loot taken in occupied countries is converted into a "debt" which the Germans would be oh, so willing to redeem if only they can retain full industrial power.

WEAPON MAY HALT ROBOTS

Washington. — Close study of dispatches from Guam describing the effectiveness of the new secret weapon ill use by U. S. armed forces in the Pacific led to speculation here that the weapon may be put to use against Hitler's robot bomb installations along the channel coast in Europe.

Washington correspondents know from long experience that inquiries as to the nature of the secret weapon would have no point, for such things simply are not discussed by responsible officers, let alone written about if any information is given out. However, this paragraph, in a dispatch from a war correspondent on Guam brought no challenge and gave rise to the speculation.

"It is truly fearful and it is extremely doubtful whether any human being within 100 feet of its action would be able to survive. It is easy to forsee the devastation and death which would result from its use on such targets as the crowded cities of the Japanese homeland."

Correspondents have not been allowed to state even how the secret weapon is employed—whether it is fired from a gun, dropped from a plane, shot from naval batteries, or how.

Nevertheless, the question was being asked "if the secret weapon is so fearful that nothing can live within 100 feet of its action, would it not be the logical weapon with which to assault the rocket bomb launching platforms?"

Deferments Go With Call-Up Papers

Ottawa. — National Selective Service officials said last week that arrangements are being made to have forms for postponement from military service for farm workers accompany call-up notices.

In the meantime, farm workers who receive orders to report may make application for postponement by writing the mobilization registrar and enclosing letters from two prominent citizens. In such cases when approval is given by the registrar the applicant will not be required to undergo medical examination.

Application for postponement should be made before a medical examination is taken.

Civil Service Check-Up Made

Ottawa. — Only 385 of 1,400 draftage civil servants checked in a special mobilization survey recently were found fit for Army use, a Selective Service official said. The survey now is extended to Government offices across Canada.

The official said one result of the survey would be to "effectively kill the popular fiction that draft-age men were being hoarded in Government offices."

Of the 385 fit men, about 110 were found to be "absolutely essential" in their jobs. Many are research technicians.

BEHIND YOUR TELEPHONE...

HIGH USAGE
A RESULT OF LOW COST

Here in Canada where the telephone idea was born, more telephone calls per capita are made than in almost any other country in the world.

Usage is surely the final test. Telephone users get the greatest possible value for what they pay. Reasonable rates and speedy, dependable, courteous service—all these encourage telephone development. They account for Canada's leadership in the use of the telephone.

Of course, war-time scarcity of vital materials has sharply restricted growth, but telephone service has been maintained at high standard. It has made an outstanding contribution to the Victory to come.

Residents of Canada and the United States make many more telephone calls per capita than any European country.

In Europe, Sweden leads. Latest official figures available (1941) give Sweden 196.5 annual calls per capita as compared with 262 for Canada.

OBITUARY

CHARLES FERGUSON BLACK

There passed away in Prince Edward County Hospital on Sunday, July 16th, Charles Ferguson Black, in his 85th year.

The late C. F. Black came to Prince Edward County in his sixth year from Enterprise, Addington County, and had since made his home at Solmesville.

In his younger days he took an interest in the militia and for several years was captain of a company in the 16th Regiment of Prince Edward County. As a young man he belonged to the Young Briton's Lodge, and in later years was a member of the Orange Lodge and the Black Preceptory.

He was the second son of the late Chester Black and Sarah Ann Dingwall. In 1885 he married Ann M. Cannniff, of Tweed, and to them three children were born, Ernest, who now resides in Chicago; Mrs. Chas. Peck (Bertha), of Big Island, and Mrs. Harold Barker, (Frances), of Northport. He is survived by his wife and children; a brother, James, of Red Deer, Alberta, and two sisters, Mrs. Williamson, of Nakina, North Dakota, and Mrs. H. E. Putman, of Desceronto, Ont. A brother, Henry, predeceased him some 38 years ago. Five grandchildren and two greatgrandchildren also survive.

In religion he was a member of the United Church. As a young man he took an interest in the work of the church and at the age of 27 he was made a trustee, an office which he held until his death.

The funeral was held from his late residence, Solmesville, on Tuesday, July 18th, with his minister, Rev. G. H. Steers, taking the service.

The beautiful floral offerings showed the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Ernest A. Blaind Died Suddenly

Thursday morning of last week death came with startling suddenness to Ernest Alexander Blaind, a valued and efficient employee of the Napanee Express. He was a linotype operator and was at work as usual on Wednesday, and when he left at five o'clock apparently was in his usual good health. About 8.15 on Thursday morning a telephone message reached the office stating that he would not be in to work as he was suffering from a slight attack of indigestion. About thirty minutes later word was received that he had passed away in his room at the Richelieu Hotel. He evidently suffered a heart attack and died almost instantly.

He had been an employee of the Napanee Express for about three years and prior to that time he had been employed at the Beaver Office. He was a capable linotype operator and an efficient workman, and had a host of friends in Napanee who regret his sudden passing. He was a veteran of the First Great War.

Deceased was born in Trenton, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Blaind, but had spent practically his entire life in Belleville and Napanee. For a time he was employed at the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer.

In July, 1943, he was united in marriage to Lillian Flynn, who survives him. Also surviving him are two sons, and two daughters, by a former marriage. They are, Thomas and William Blaind, both of Belleville; Mrs. Walter Day, of Dunnville, and Miss Margaret Blaind, of Belleville. One brother, Thomas Blaind, of Rochester also survives.

The body was removed to the Wartman Funeral Home and rested there until 4 p.m. on Friday when it was conveyed to Belleville where the funeral service was held at 2.00 p.m. on Saturday and interment was made in the Belleville Cemetery.

1,000,000 New Jobs For Post-War Canada

Vancouver — There will be 1,000,000 jobs in Canada after the war ends in existence in 1950, Dr. G. M. Weir, acting director of training in the Federal Pensions Department, told the Vancouver Board of Trade.

Provincial and municipal services would provide 320,000 jobs, Army, Navy, Air Force, and equipment plants 150,000. Some 2,400 industries in Canada are expected to employ 25 per cent more in the first year after the war than in 1939, Dr. Weir said.

WALLACE'S GOOD SPICES MAKE GOOD PICKLES!

EXAMINE YOUR CONSCIENCE

Royal Canadian Mounted Police vigilance has frustrated a plot to disrupt the whole of Canada's gasoline rationing programme. The Mounties have done their job; it is up to the public to help them curb the further activities of these racketeers of all sorts.

Racketeers do not operate unless a willing public buys what the racket has to sell. It is not yet clear whether or not the ring which forged coupons enough to purchase 5,000,000 gallons of gasoline had had time to get many of the coupons into circulation. If they did succeed in selling some, then there are many Canadian motorists who should examine their consciences before presenting the coupons at gasoline stations. They know they possess forged coupons and make themselves just guilty as the issuers of they use such coupons.

Police officers tell us that the coupons served in a Quebec printing plant are excellent forgeries, difficult to distinguish from the genuine coupon. That means that the gasoline station operator who accepts one may make a legitimate error, but the man who uses one must be aware that he is committing an offence against the regulations, an offence which, given the great need for gasoline overseas, amounts to sabotage of the war effort.

The R.C.M.P. as we have said have done an excellent job and are to be congratulated on their efficiency. If, however the racket is to be halted, the public must co-operate — Montreal Star.

RESEARCH IN WAR MEDICINE

One of the ironic paradoxes of war is that while one group of men become specialists in killing, another makes great strides in the art of healing. Where bullets burst and guns roar the men and women of medicine follow, and out of the shambles of the battlefield comes a newer and brighter hope for medical science.

War med cine begins when the raw recruit first reports to the recruiting office door. There follows the greatest possible stock-taking of national resources which only war has been able to devise about so far. Standards of fitness for the armed forces "medical categories" are measurements of ability to do specific jobs under conditions of active service.

Once the recruit is in the forces he gets the most meticulous care. He becomes accustomed to competent medical attention; this is one of the reasons why war may well carry a beneficent imprint into the post-war future. The man in uniform develops a health consciousness, he will wish to maintain for himself and his family when he returns to civilian life. If the uniformed forces become quest to the assurance of their own health, the population as a whole may adopt a similar consciousness.

The armed forces prove the ideal field to demonstrate and emphasize the benefits of preventive medicine. The value of inoculations, vaccinations, and other methods of disease control become self-evident. War also proves to be a stimulus in the field of general medicine. Out of each great war emerge one or two outstanding therapeutic measures. In this war the sulphur drugs are finding a large and important use, and more recently penicillin therapy has opened great and unpredictable vistas for healing. From World War I came the development of the art of blood transfusion, which has saved thousands of lives.

War medicine provokes a practical type of research. The scientist has always been interested in purely academic problems, but he is even more interested in a practical application of his laboratory findings. These efforts have brought an accuracy to the work in the armed forces which formerly was not possible.

Much of the remarkable research done in Canada during this war cannot be revealed for security reasons, but a survey of a few of the projects gives some indication of its immense scope and practical nature. This experimental work is being carried on by the medical research staffs of the three services under the co-ordination and administration of the National Research Council.

Among the studies by the army medical research branch are those outlined in this article.

NUTRITION

After the Battle of Malta it was found that dehydrated foods were not adequate to maintain optimum manpower efficiency. Food with a high vitamin C content which would most nearly approach fresh vegetables was aimed at. Recent studies showed that dry seeds in general are devoid of vitamin C, but when soaked and sprouted until the seeds begin to green, the seedlings contain a considerable amount of this vitamin. This is also true of certain of the components of vitamin B complex.

As a result much research has been done on sprouting seeds in large quantities and using the sprouts in highly palatable attractive ways as the Chinese have done for centuries.

This study was to determine the vitamin C potency of sprouted seeds in a wide range of common grains, especially those which would be available on a large scale, and to recommend varieties and methods suitable for production of vitamin C under practical conditions for Canadian soldiers at home and abroad, and for populations of countries isolated from enemy occupation.

It was found that field pea varieties were the best because they combine a reasonably high vitamin C potency with availability of seeds in large quantities. The English broad bean or bean is placed second, and the Chinese salad bean third. The dry seeds are soaked for about 24 hours, then spread one to two inches deep in shallow trays with screen bottoms for drainage. They are sprinkled and kept at a temperature of between 60 and 70 degrees. Sprouts will be ready for use in about three to five days, depending on variety—roughly when sprouts are about one inch long. Seed should have a very high germination percentage, since only germinating seeds produce vitamin C.

Further research was conducted to develop suitable methods of preparing sprouted seeds and legumes to supply balanced nutritional supplements. Dietetic studies were developed which included the testing of each type of sprout in the preparation of hot and cold dishes. To evaluate the nutritive value, analysis was made for vitamin C before and after cooking.

NUTRITIONAL SURVEY

The primary purpose of the nutritional survey was to observe the effects of Canadian Army rations and training on men newly inducted for compulsory military service. Complete pre-enrolment histories were taken, and special physical examinations made to arrive at their nutritional status. The dietary intake was assessed from a study of the socio-economic background and the dietary history. This included details of the eating habits of the men, methods of cooking employed in the home, individual food likes and dislikes, the approximate amount of various foods taken per week and assessment of the "dietary intake of a typical day." It was found that the main pre-enrolment dietary inadequacies had been in the intake of calories and vitamins C, B, and A.

Two months after induction a second complete check-up was made of the same men who were then at four or five different camps. The results showed a decided gain in physical fitness and morale—especially in those camps where messing was good and food was prepared attractively.

The research resulted in several recommendations. One was the suggestion that provision be made for further education in nutrition to acquaint the general population with the most recent advances in nutrition and in the choice of nutritious foods and their correct cooking. Another recommendation proposed the standardization of messing and catering in the Canadian Army and that personnel supervising nutrition be adequately trained at recognized universities. Further proposals included the training of all ranks in the Canadian Army in the importance of proper nutrition and the raising of the status of cooks in the army.

HYDROPONIC GROWTH METHODS

The value of fresh fruits and vegetables as opposed to synthetic vitamins cannot be overstressed in maintaining the health of troops. Apparently fresh fruits and vegetables contain balanced nutrients and also specific factors essential to health which have not yet been isolated.

In North America Canadian troops are generally issued fresh fruits and vegetables, but in certain areas because of transportation difficulties or because of soil or climatic drawbacks they are difficult to supply. Among such isolated garrisons are those of the army and air force in Labrador, Newfoundland and other northern areas.

In these areas, especially Labrador, there is no true soil, and the layer of sand is very thin. Grass, vegetables and fruits cannot be grown in quantities here, and this condition is responsible for the high incidence of nutritional diseases among the white civilian inhabitants. Supplies of vegetables for the forces in Labrador have to be taken in either by convoy with extremely high spoilage or flown in by air which is expensive.

It was decided that an attempt should be made to supply fresh fruits and vegetables to the men by growing them by the hydroponic method of chemical agriculture. Accordingly experiments were conducted at Goose Bay in Labrador to produce growth in sand and gravel by irrigation and chemical fertilization in artificial beds. The project, which was largely experimental, demonstrated the feasibility of hydroponic vegetable production in the subarctic. Areas in northern areas devoid of productive soil. On account of closer planting, yields can be obtained equal to or even greater than those obtained in normal field production. Although installation costs are high, production is thought to be economically sound when the cost and percentage spoilage of such imported produce is considered.

SACCHARIN SAVES SUGAR! IT IS HARMLESS TOO!

In 10c. and 25c. packages for canning; in tablets at 17c. a hundred for tea and coffee. At WALLACE'S, Napanee's Leading Drug Store.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Pickling is one of the many ways to save surplus fruit and vegetables. Cucumbers are one of the common vegetables that may be preserved in many ways to give variety to our inexpensive winter menus. Pickling is a matter of timing and stirring, without destroying the color or flavor, or food value.

The equipment needed is comparatively simple, but you must be able to store in a cool, dry place if you are storing in odd jars sealed with wartime wax or crocks.

We suggest recipes requiring little or no sugar although we have had several requests for those using sugar. But, naturally, if you have sufficient sugar, "go to it" and make the kind that pleases your family.

SACCHARINE PICKLE

1 teaspoon powdered saccharine, ½ cup salt, 2 tablespoons white mustard seed, ½ cup dry mustard, 2 tablespoons tumeric, 1 teaspoon curry powder, 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper, 1 cup cold vinegar, 1 cup corn syrup, 9 cups cold vinegar, 1 large cauliflower, 3 large cucumbers, 10 small green tomatoes, 6 small onions.

Combine saccharine, salt, mustard seed, dry mustard, tumeric, curry powder and cayenne very thoroughly; mix to a smooth paste with the 1 cup vinegar, adding it gradually a little and combining thoroughly after each addition. Add corn syrup and the 9 cups vinegar. Place fruits dressings in a thoroughly clean large crock.

Break cauliflower in small flowerettes and soak in salted water about half an hour. Drain, cover with boiling water and boil 10 minutes. Drain and let cool.

Wash cucumbers and tomatoes and peel the onions; cut all into small cubes.

Add prepared vegetables to dressing in the crock and combine well. Cover crock with a clean tea towel or other cloth, and cover with the thoroughly clean lid. Place crock in a cool place (the cellar floor is good) and stir the pickle twice a day for two weeks.

CHILI SAUCE

12 large ripe tomatoes, 2 large onions, 3 green peppers, 1 tsp. salt, 4 tbsp. brown sugar, 1 tbsp. cloves, 1 tbsp. cinnamon, 1 tbsp. allspice, 1 tsp. grated nutmeg, 1 pint vinegar.

Peel the tomatoes and onions. Cut tomatoes in small pieces and chop the onions and peppers fine. Add the remaining ingredients, heat gradually to boiling point and cook slowly two and one-half to three hours, stir frequently. If the vinegar is strong dilute it with water.

DILL PICKLES

Select cucumbers of "dill" size. Wash and arrange in jars with layers of dill and mixed spices in the bottom, centre and top of the jar. Cover with hot brine made of ¼ cup salt to 7 cups boiling water. Seal and let stand two months before using.

PICKLED ONIONS

1 qt small pickling onions, 1 qt. white wine vinegar, 2 teaspoons of pepper corns, 1 teaspoon salt.

Bring vinegar and seasoning to boiling point and remove scum. Peel the onions, put into the boiling liquid and simmer about three minutes or until the onions are transparent. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

TAKE A TIP

1. Too much salt or sugar or too strong vinegar may make pickles shrivelled and tough.

2. A brine too weak will tend to soften pickles. The recommended solution to crisp cucumbers is one pound of salt to five quarts water.

3. Keep pickled cucumbers green, put a thick layer of fresh green grape or cherry leaves between layers of cucumbers and on top of them before pouring on the brine.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. R. B. asks: Why does chili sauce, cooked in an enamel pan, turn a brownish color?

Answer: Allspice and cloves tend to darken sauces more than other spices. We suggest exact measurements of the seasonings.

Mrs. K. F. asks: Will a zinc tub be all right to soak cucumbers in brine?

Answer: No. We suggest that you put them in two or three crocks or enamel basins in preference to zinc or tin containers.

Mrs. T. B. asks: Recipe for Bread and Butter Pickles.

Answer: 6 qts. cucumbers, sliced; 1 dozen onions, sliced; 4 green peppers, sliced; salt, ½ cup; 6 whole cloves, 1 qt. vinegar, 8 cups sugar, 3 tablespoons tumeric, ½ cup mustard seed.

Wash cucumbers and slice without peeling. Arrange vegetables in alternate layers in a large bowl, sprinkle with salt. Let stand for three hours, then drain. Cover with cold water, then drain. Combine remaining ingredients and heat until sugar is dissolved. Add the vegetables and bring just to the boiling point, but do not boil. Seal in sterilized jars.

Mrs. S. T. asks: Ingredients for syrup to use on fruit to pickle.

Answer: 8 pounds fruit, cinnamon, 2 tablespoons whole cloves, 4 cups vinegar, 2 tablespoons whole allspice, 4 pounds sugar, 2 cups water.

It Doesn't Leave a Lot for the Civilian

WHEN war demands have been filled . . . when invasion gasoline, aviation gasoline, Navy fuel oil, petroleum for the manufacture of explosives, synthetic rubber, and gasoline for war industry, farming and essential trucking all have been taken from Canada's oil supply — it doesn't leave a lot for the civilian!

Figure it out for yourself. It takes 5,250,000 gallons of gasoline to fuel 5,000 bombers and fighters for a mission over Germany. It takes enough oil for one fueling of a battleship to heat an average house for 350 years. It takes 18,000 gallons of gasoline to keep one armoured division on the move for one hour.

From petroleum and petroleum gases we obtain the gasoline and fuels needed to power planes and ships and tanks as well as the raw material for acetone, ammonia and toluol for explosives, organic chemicals for anaesthetics, naphthas for camouflage paints and plastics and resins for war weapons production.

This is why civilian gasoline is short. This is why it's up to every motorist, to every owner of an oil-heated home, to exercise the strictest economy in gasoline or fuel oil usage. Every gallon we can do without here at home is one gallon more for the fighting men. And they need every gallon they can get.

Two full years of gasoline rationing and fuel oil control in Canada have saved 393,000,000 gallons of gasoline and 175 million gallons of fuel oil — a total saving of 568,000,000 gallons of petroleum products. Yet, despite this saving, gasoline stocks on hand in Canada, as of March 31st, this year, were 55,000,000 gallons less than at the commencement of rationing, April 1, 1942.

Oil has a mighty war job to do — yet supplies are short and are constantly dwindling. Oil powers the attack on every front. Oil can mean the difference between success or failure, between light casualty lists and heavy. Oil is vital ammunition — not to be wasted, not to be needlessly, frivolously spent.

LESS CIVILIAN GAS MEANS MORE "FIGHTING GAS" FOR THE FORCES
An announcement issued by The Department of Munitions and Supply, Honourable C. D. Howe, Minister

Answering Your Questions about the Gasoline Shortage

What are Canada's total requirements of motor gasoline . . . Approximately 800,000,000 gallons. Do these requirements have to cover both military and civilian needs? . . . Yes. Why cannot this supply be increased? . . . Because total hemispheric supplies are inadequate to meet both the colossal war demand and civilian needs. There is not enough oil, there are not enough tankers, for both. How much of Canada's petroleum needs is supplied from Canadian wells? . . . Only 15%. Why can't this home production be increased? . . . Every effort is being made to do so. More new wells are being drilled or prepared for drilling than at any time in the history of Western Canada, but we have yet to find a new Turner Valley. War does not wait for new production.

VAST CANADIAN AIR LINKS REVEALED

A glimpse into vast air development stretched across the width of Canada's northland came today with an easing of censorship restrictions that have shrouded one of the most dramatic wartime developments in Canada, says the Canadian Press.

The full story has yet to be told, but it is no longer an official secret that important new air routes over the northland from the extreme north-west tip of Canadian territory across to Baffin Land.

Restrictions also came off the thrilling story of thousands of United States made fighter planes being ferried over the northwest; staging routes to Russia—proof that air transport by planes of even comparatively limited range now is possible between Canada and the Soviet.

The possible importance of the northern air development in peacetime received recognition from Ottawa in the announcement that an official party, including representatives of the R.C.A.F., Transport and Mines Departments, soon will survey the five major bases to assess their value in peacetime flying.

The air bases were carved out by hundreds of American troops including specialists such as engineers and signallers at The Pas, Churchill, Southampton Island in northern Hudson Bay, Frobisher Bay on the east coast of Baffin Island, and Port Chimo on the south shore of Hudson Strait.

FOR POST-WAR USE

It is understood that some of the American fields, particularly that at Churchill, are extensive, that the Canadian Government is in agreement with United States authorities that extensive use should be made of these stations after the war if at all possible.

The story of the construction of the airports in the far north, aerial stepping stones across the north Atlantic which, known as the northeast staging route, link western Canada with Europe, was expected to be disclosed shortly.

It was learned at Edmonton last night that about half of approximately 10,000 U. S. and Lend-Lease aircraft sent to Russia from United States since late 1941 have been ferried to the Soviet via Edmonton, Alaska and Siberia following northwest staging route pioneered by Canadian airmen and developed by Canadian engineers.

Landing fields, radio facilities and servicing depots along the route to permit passage of the fastest fighters and heaviest bombers.

Americans assigned to improve military work poured into northern Manitoba during the construction of the airports forming the northern staging route, but security has prevented disclosure of their operations for specific purchase of the airports and the continued existence of some of the airfields, particularly those in the eastern Arctic from points on Canada's east coast, and Greenland and Iceland to Baffin Island, Southampton Island in Hudson Bay, Churchill and Churchill.

Bracken to Run in Manitoba

John Bracken, Progressive Conservative national leader, intends to run in a Manitoba constituency in the forthcoming Federal general election, Senator John Haig, acting leader of the party in the Senate, said.

There has been considerable speculation as to where Mr. Bracken would seek nomination and it has been suggested it might be in his native county of Leeds, Ont.

Senator Haig, a close friend of the national leader, however, said he was definite. "John Bracken will run in the west, in the province in which he has spent the most of his life."

He added Mr. Bracken would campaign for a fair deal for farmers who had never been able "to get their share of the national income."

He made the remark when the Upper Chamber was considering a measure providing support to farm prices during transition from war to peace. He said the measure was in the right direction, but failed to give the farmers a square deal.

"Do you want us to take away his (Bracken's) chances," called a member when Senator Haig said Mr. Bracken would challenge the country on giving the farmers a square deal.

Senator Haig replied he wanted the Liberals to get in ahead.

"You see I am more concerned about my country than about my party, he concluded.

SHARED ACCOMMODATION LEASES PROTECTED BY NEW ORDER

Good news for quiet, law-abiding tenants is the recent order issued by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, which states that tenants who are not now under notice to vacate will not be made to do so before May 1, 1945. This gives tenants of houses, apartments, flats rooms, and parts of houses the same protective privileges that are now enjoyed by occupants of houses, flats and apartments. Boarders are not covered by this order, nor does it apply to certain congested areas such as Halifax, Montreal and Kingston, which some time ago were brought under special administrative control involving registration and rate fixing.

TAMWORTH

Tamworth, August 7.—The August meeting of the Woman's Association was held at the home of Mrs. Clifford Milligan. There were 32 members and visitors present. After opening with a hymn and prayer, Mrs. S. Gilmour took charge of the devotional. The 1st Psalm was read in unison. The subject, "Deborah", was made most interesting by the leader, who said Deborah is no new character. Each mother who gives leadership to her family, and help and companionship to her husband, is a Deborah. Rev. W. H. Baugh led in prayer. A very suitable reading, "Count Your Ducks", was read by Mrs. Baugh. "Count Your Many Blessings" was led by Mrs. Earl Bradshaw, Mrs. W. W. Redden, and Mrs. E. J. Huffman, and the assembly joined in the chorus. Minutes were read and approved. The roll call was answered by each member naming someone who had been a successful leader in the community at some time. Many of our past citizens were brought vividly to the memory of the members. Letters were read from Mrs. Ed. Schoolcraft, of Kingston, and Mrs. Mary Donovan, of Napanee. Moved by Mrs. W. G. Richmond, seconded by Mrs. W. W. Redden, that three quilts be quilted in the W. A. building some day this week. These will be in charge of the three group leaders. The same collectors for the fowl supper fund were asked to do the work again this fall. SOLDIER THANKS Tamworth Red Cross FOR CIGARETTES

The following letter was received by Mrs. Marshall, secretary of Tamworth Red Cross Society, from Gnr. J. Coyle, who is with the Canadian Army in France.

Gnr. Coyle is a Scotchman who lived in the Tamworth community for some years and is well known to the people of the district.

C 1666, Gnr. J. Coyle,
11th Battery, R.C.A.
12th Field Regiment,
Canadian Army Overseas
B.W.E.F.
July 26, 1944

Dear Mrs. Marshall—

Very many thanks for the cigarettes. They arrived just a couple of days ago. I think if I am remembering right this is my first letter to you since we first landed in France. I still have much to be thankful for and I hope that come what may I'll still see the best side of things.

You can be well proud of your Canadian troops. I think that only those who have fought with them, eaten and slept with them, can fully appreciate how good they are. True enough, with the exception of our first landing, there has been nothing spectacular in our advance. We are still fully aware of the task ahead and if our progress is, at present, a little slow, a little quotation will help clarify things. "The mills of God grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small." That's us! Our progress is slow now, but when the last word is said we'll say it.

I've been a very lucky young man Mrs. Marshall and like the rest of our boys I too, want to come home hale and hearty, but if such is not the case then I would like to think I had not faltered in doing my task and if need be, could die like a man. Death is an ever present thing in wartime and it's a wise man, with that in mind, who prepares himself for the morrow. So with the prayers of you good folk at home I need have no fear.

War, at best, is futile and, yet all is not lost. It is teaching all of us the true value of many things we once took for granted. I do hope we will all take our lessons very much to heart. My letter, so far, has been a little to the gloomy side, but what I've spoken of are things that have to be faced.

Our boys are all in the best of spirits and are being well taken care of. Our food is good, very good and quite often we are able to supplement our ration by digging potatoes, carrots, beets, rhubarb. Added to that we have a small issue about a round and a half of real white bread, plus one chocolate bar per day an odome candy. So you see we have no worry as regards food. Our spare moments are apt to be a little boring for lack of entertainment. True enough we have the occasional picture show but that does not happen too often. To be fair, though, I think the Canadian War Services, Salvation Army, K. of C. Legion and the Y.M.C.A. are doing a very good job. After all, as they say, Rome was not built in a day, so, until conditions are a little more stabilized, we'll all try to appreciate what we get. Another little luxury we all appreciate very much is our quart of beer every week and I must say it is very good beer, much better than anything we ever got in England. Incidentally, it costs us one shilling and sixpence a bottle (about 35 cents in Canadian money.)

Well, that's all added up, speaking personally. I have much to be thankful for don't you think so? Will you please convey to all the ladies my very best wishes and ask them all to remember us all in their prayers, and with that to encourage us all, need we have fear for the morrow. Chin-up and to you all, I'll say, "Those also serve who only stand and wait."

Very sincerely,
John Coyle.

BIG BUSH FIRE IN WILTON DISTRICT CAUSES HEAVY DAMAGE

Cedar Grove Destroyed and Barn and Crop

The bush fire which broke out near Wilton last Thursday was still burning on Monday, but on Tuesday it appeared to have burned itself out.

It broke out again on Monday morning after farmers in the district thought they had it under control. Early Sunday morning the fire destroyed a barn and two hay stacks on the farm belonging to C. Compton.

The fire started on the farm of Stewart Snider and was believed to have been caused by a young boy attempting to smoke out a family of skunks, which had been raiding his father's chicken yard. The grass caught fire and the wind quickly spread it into a cedar bush and dry pasture land.

When the fire got out of control a call was put into Kingston for help and 100 soldiers from Fort Frontenac were despatched to the scene to give assistance. The soldiers returned to barracks on Sunday when the fire was believed to be under control.

The Kingston Township Volunteer Fire Department was called on for assistance and permission was given for a detachment to go to the scene of the fire.

Firemen were handicapped by the lack of water as there was no well nearby. Local trucks drew water from a creek several miles away. The Wilton Cheese Factory lent trucks and supplied milk cans for carrying water.

No stock was lost when Mr. Compton's barn and hay stacks were destroyed. The haystacks represented his entire hay crop for the season. The barn was insured but the crop was not.

Although the fire was apparently out on Sunday, it was feared it might break out again as undoubtedly it was smouldering under the surface of the ground. A watch is being kept to prevent it getting another start and doing more serious damage.

Canadians Paid High Tribute

Canada has achieved a new landmark in her military history, the London Daily Telegraph said today in an editorial commenting on the announcement that the 1st Canadian army is fighting in Normandy.

"On whatever front the Canadians appeared both in the last war and in this they always won recognition as belonging to the cream of Imperial troops," the editorial added.

The Telegraph referred to the Dominion's war contribution of land, sea and air supplies and said "not only have Canada and her people wholeheartedly into the war of destroying Hitlerism and saving freedom for the world."

Auto Supply Dwindling Fast

Canada's supply of passenger automobiles, — both new and used — is dwindling to a point where it has become essential to have the best possible use made of cars that remain on the road. J. H. Berry, Motions Department, Motor Vehicle Controller, said last week.

In broad terms the picture is this: When the last civilian passenger car came off the assembly lines of Canadian automotive plants in the month of March, 1942, there were still a number of cars in the hands of manufacturers and dealers. Of these, Ottawa put into Government controlled pool to assure supplies for highly essential users such as doctors and police forces.

The pool now is down to half its original size, and with demands increasing as cars become older it is estimated it will be exhausted in another 10 months. The new cars that were in dealers' hands and were left for general sale have long since gone.

To keep cars running the Motor Vehicle Controller maintains a close watch on the supply of parts. On the basis of total mileage being driven there now are more parts available than there were before the war; and there are also fewer cars on the road every month, with no reduction on the supply of parts.

Manufacturers estimate that it will take them approximately six months to get back into civilian production.

HOUSING BILL COSTS CITED

Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Finance Minister, said last week that if full advantage were taken of the Government's housing legislation it would mean an expenditure of more than $700,000,000 on new housing, modernization and slum clearance.

The bill itself provides $275,000,000 for housing loans of various kinds but the Minister pointed out this would be only a fraction of the actual amount that would be spent on housing. Private investment would provide a large contribution.

"Naturally," he said, "it will be some considerable time before that amount of work can be completed. Presumably when it is completed, whatever government is in office will take whatever steps it may consider necessary and warranted in the public interest to provide additional funds to deal with the housing problems of Canada."

He said that in reaching his $700,000,000 estimate he had taken into consideration such factors as government provision of $20,000,000 as a 50 per cent. contribution toward slum clearance.

Dr. W. C. Clark, Deputy Minister of Finance, said that the Farm Improvement Loans Act would provide an additional $100,000,000 for rural housing.

TRANSPORT OVERTURNS NEAR C. N. R. BRIDGE

About 10:30 a.m., on Monday, a heavily loaded Smith transport overturned in the west ditch of the Newburgh Road, near the C. N. R. overhead bridge at the east entrance of the town. The transport was travelling west and it is thought the brakes failed to hold as the transport started down the hill and the driver was unable to make the turn through the bridge.

The driver, Lucien Brisebois Verdun Quebec, and a passenger in the cab, W. F. Murphy, Toronto, were both pinned under the transport, but were released in a short time. Both were taken to Kingston General Hospital where they were found to be suffering from minor injuries.

Considerable damage was done to the transport and to the contents.

Limited Amount of Ammunition Issued

The Prices Board has announced details regarding the distribution of a limited amount of ammunition for rifles and shot shells to sportsmen, the first allowance of such ammunition for sporting purposes since rationing began.

No centre-fire cartridges will be released to sportsmen because of the great demand for this type of ammunition from essential users, particularly residents of northern outposts. Labor and production facilities still limit the amount of ammunition available and needs of essential users such as farmers, trappers and prospectors must continue to have first claim on supplies. Under the new distribution plan every person possessing rim-fire rifle may apply for a permit to purchase not more than 100 rim-fire cartridges and every owner of a registered shotgun may apply for the purchase of 50 shot shells. If the individual possesses both types of gun he may make application for purchase permits for both types of ammunition but no matter how many rim-fire rifles and shotguns he owns, he is entitled to only 100 cartridges and 50 shot shells. The purchases with shotguns of two different gauges may take 25 shells for one gauge and 25 for the other. Sportsmen may make application to their Local Ration Board from August 15 to September 30. The applicant must present both gun registration certificates and ration book or card. No hunters' purchase permits for small arms ammunition will be issued after September 30 but permits will be valid for the purchase of ammunition from September 1 to December 31 inclusive. Each permit will be good for the purchase of only one type of ammunition rim-fire or shot shell and will be issued accordingly. Special users such as for ammunition including licensed trappers, farmers and prospectors who desire ammunition for sporting purposes will be treated in the same manner as other applicants and may acquire extra ammunition under the above terms. The allotment will not affect their usual allowance for essential uses.

GOV'T PROPOSES GENEROUS GRATUITIES FOR WAR SERVICES

On Graduated Scale Based on Service

Members of Canada's armed forces —including drafted men obligated to serve without territorial limitations or in the Aleutians — will receive a war service gratuity, according to legislation outlined in a motion on the Commons order paper last week.

The mustering out pay will be distributed on the following basis:

1. For every thirty days' service in the Western Hemisphere, excluding the Aleutian Islands, $7.50.

2. For every 30 days of service overseas or in the Aleutian Islands $15.00.

3. For each six months of service overseas or in the Aleutian Islands an additional seven days' pay and allowances.

Subject to certain conditions a re-establishment credit — to be available for specified rehabilitative purposes — equal to the total amount of the gratuities payable on the 30 days basis.

TO ALL CANADIANS

Similar gratuities will go to Canadian residents who serve in any of the Empire forces and who reside in Canada at the time of discharge. A proviso is added, however, that the amount of any benefit of similar nature received from any other Empire country will be deducted from the Canadian gratuities.

In other words, Canadians in the R.A.F. would have the amount of the British Government deducted from the Canadian gratuity.

The gratuity, which is tax free, will not be payable to members of the forces discharged for misconduct. Gratuity payments will be made under certain conditions, to dependents of armed forces members who have died before or after discharge and without receiving their gratuity.

The motion sponsored by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, says the gratuities are designed "to recognize the service of members of His Majesty's forces who have served on active service during the present war and to assist them in their re-establishment having regard to the service rendered only from the date of his general service.

Explaining that portion of the legislation applying to drafted men who volunteered to serve without territorial limitation," Col. Ralston said:—

"It is only after a man is obligated either by volunteering or under the National Resources Mobilization Act to serve without territorial limitation that he is entitled to the gratuity."

Premier King agreed that some adjustment might be made in committee to that section of the legislation which provides benefits for six months service.

C. H. Castleden '(C.C.F.-Yorkton) suggested that in order to take in the men who served in the Aleutians the clause might be made to read "for each six months of service or portion thereof."

Batawa is reported to have a pretty fair organization and a lively contest is expected to ensue.

Drew Policies Endorsed at Caucus

A caucus of Progressive Conservative members of the Ontario legislature and defeated candidates in the last provincial election last week endorsed the policies of Premier G. Drew, it was announced.

Matters pertaining to riding organization also were discussed at the caucus, it was understood.

The premier, it was learned, outlined his future plans and received full support from delegates for progress attained so far in implementing the party's 22-point programme outlined before the last provincial election.

A member said the premier also took up with the members "the situation which has arisen as a result of the refusal of the Dominion Government to convene a Dominion-Provincial conference before passing social legislation. He referred specifically to the family allowance bill, it was stated.

AN IMPORTANT INVITATION

President Roosevelt has invited Wendell Willkie to meet with him and discuss foreign policy. It is understood that the present political situation is not to be discussed between them. In spite of that proviso, the meeting will be an important one. Mr. Willkie, as the Republican candidate in the presidential race of 1940, polled a lot of votes. He secured the nomination in spite of the party machine. The party leaders were afraid of him. He was not sufficiently isolationist to suit them. The passive resistance of these party stalwarts did not prevent Mr. Willkie from making a rather remarkable showing at the polls. Shortly after his defeat Mr. Roosevelt called him into consultation and gave him important assignments in the foreign field. This added fuel to the flames. The Republican leaders would not stand for that. There was disharmony in the Party until Governor Dewey was nominated at the recent election. As a matter of fact, there is not complete harmony yet. There are those who fear that the Nominee is in the hands of the old-line leaders and will have to dance to the tune they call.

Under those circumstances, many independent voters in the United States — men and women who are not party bound — will be moved to consider the broadmindedness of the President in inviting Willkie to conversations of foreign policy, and will admire Mr. Willkie for accepting the invitation, thereby showing himself ready to work with the President in the present unprecedented world situation.

It is generally conceded that the independent voter determines the results of an election. The party man will vote party; his loyalty can be counted on. It is the large group not so bound, whose vote can be switched from one side to the other, which settles the issue. If the action of the President in taking Willkie into consultation, gains the approval of this group, it may have far-reaching political results.

We may be sure that the old-line Republican leaders who do not like Mr. Willkie anyway, will be further antagonized by this latest move. Indeed, they may be able to persuade Mr. Dewey that Willkie is more of a liability than an asset, and should be dropped from the party. Should this happen, it would alienate still larger groups of people and further weaken the opposition to the President. The situation grows interesting and will bear watching.

A QUEBEC REBUFF

The defeat of the Godbout Government in Quebec has some obvious lessons for a Dominion administration. The Godbout Government was undoubtedly the best and most progressive one which Quebec has had over a long time. Naturally a progressive administration makes many enemies and creates strong opposition. There was vigorous opposition to the legislation which gave women the right to vote. There was opposition, as well, to the measure which inaugurated compulsory education. These two measures alienated a certain section of public support for the Godbout Government. While both compulsory education and votes for women were opposed by the same section of the community, still another powerful group was antagonistic to Godbout because of the measure which expropriated the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Company, making it into a provincially owned Hydro Electric System.

It is strange, however, that these measures, progressive enough to be considered revolutionary in a conservative province like Quebec, were given scant consideration during the recent campaign. It is true that Premier Godbout insisted that the people should judge his administration solely on its record in Provincial matters, yet as the campaign developed, this creditable record was almost totally ignored by Opposition speakers. This forced a change of emphasis. The Godbout Government found itself on the defensive, defending not its own acts but the acts of the Dominion Government. The whole issue, so far as we could discover, was a Dominion issue; Provincial matters were shoved quite into the background.

It is a tragic commentary on our Canadian life that, at a time when we are at war, when our boys are overseas and are fighting for all the things we hold dear, that a Quebec election should have been won on promises to keep Quebec boys from going overseas. Narrow nationalism — separation — won in Quebec.

The Fathers of Confederation envisioned a united Canada, in which two races should work hand in hand for the good of the whole. This naturally meant that both major cultural groups would have to assume proportionate responsibilities. As it has worked out up till the present, however, Quebec demands the privileges and refuses to accept responsibilities. Both in the First Great War and in the present one, Quebec has shown no inclination to assume its full share of the load.

The present Government has followed an appeasement policy with Quebec. Everything Quebec wants from the Dominion Government, Quebec receives. In order to keep peace in the family, the Government continues to make concession after concession to Quebec. Now it has happened, as it always happens, the dog bites the hand that feeds it. The King Government has been given a serious shock.

The one thing that Dominion leaders should learn from the recent election is that appeasement never pays. At best, it is only a stop gap. If Mr. Bracken is a wise statesman, he will not fail to see this, and formulate his plans accordingly. Canada is one country — it is not two. If Mr. Backen would come out with a very definite, clear-cut policy of "no special treatment for any part of the country" he would at once win the confidence of large sections of the population which have become discouraged of ever achieving Canadian unity on a basis of special treatment for sections which, because of their ability to deliver a solid vote, demand preferential consideration.

NOT BAD AT THAT !

An Associated Press dispatch from Philadelphia, on August 9th, is illuminating. It says:—

"The May Department Stores Company paid 16 officers, directors and employees more than $50,000 each during the past fiscal year, the company's annual report to the SEC disclosed today. Morton J. May, president, was paid $100,150 and Fred Z. Salomon, vice-president and treasurer, $100,100. Tom May, Los Angeles, vice president, and Samuel Rosenberg, of Cleveland, a director, received $100,025 each. Nathan L. Dauby, Cleveland, and Walter J. Brunmark, Los Angeles, vice-presidents, received $100,000 each."

These are rather nice salaries, as salaries go these days. A director, we note, received over $100,000. As we understand it, the duties of a director consist of attending meetings once in a while, not a very exacting occupation. But the directors, no doubt, have to vote on the salaries they receive, which may account for the rather generous remuneration of Mr. Rosenberg.

We have had held up before us, for a long time now, the exorbitant wages that workmen are receiving. They have been blamed for strikes and for interference with the war effort. Nobody would, for a minute, think of defending the actions of those who are slowing up production and failing to back-up the boys at the front by seeing that they receive all the munitions necessary to victory. And yet the publication of figures such as those quoted above cannot fail to contribute to the unrest in the ranks of Labor.

There is one grain of satisfaction in the contemplation of such salaries, and that is the income tax collector will get quite a slice of it.

PREPARING FOR JAPAN

President Roosevelt's trip to Pearl Harbour and the Aleutians, forecasts important impending events in the Eastern theatre of war. The increased tempo of hostilities in Europe has captured the attention of the public since D-Day, and has diverted our interest in the Far East. When the war against Germany has been won, the Japanese will still have to be dealt with. There has been no let up in the pressure which has been exerted against Japan by the United States. It has been a long, hard road, to-date. In eight months after Pearl Harbour Japan had conquered 1,500,000 square miles of land, containing a population of 125,000,000, and Japan looked forward to further victories in Alaska, India, and Australia. But the Battle of the Coral Sea and off Midway, in August, 1942, checked the Japanese drive. Since then the Japanese have been pushed gradually, relentlessly back, until now Guam has been captured and other islands in the Marianas, only 1500 miles from Tokyo. A change of government in Japan and a regulation speeding up defence of the main Japanese islands, make it quite clear that they are no longer sure of themselves. They know now that they are up against a foe who is as tough as they themselves, and that the United Nations in the Pacific are brilliantly led and enthusiastically backed up by the greatest productive power on earth.

The visit of the President to Pearl Harbour and his conference with General McArthur and Admiral Nimitz, may forecast an immediate effort to recapture the Philippines. We may be sure when the attack is made, nothing will be left to chance. The lessons learned in the hard way will be used to advantage. With superiority of manpower, control of the air, and a much larger fleet than Japan, the issue will not be long in doubt. With the Philippines back in the hands of the Americans, the way will be open for a definite, well planned attack on Japan proper. The way may be long and hard, but the result is sure and certain.

TRANSFORMATION OF THE SOVIET

BY IVO DUCHACEK

First wonder, then embarrassment, and finally passionate division of views accompanies each new action or change in the Soviet Union. It is only after considerable time has passed that the world sees the connection and logic of the dramatic oscillations through which Soviet Russia has passed since 1917. Many of the Russian changes have not been understood at all, and this has been a disadvantage not to Russia but to the democracies. Take, for instance, the triumph of Stalin's conception "Socialism in one country" over Trotsky's "permanent world revolution." How many people up to a short time ago, when they thought of Russia, saw her in the terms of 1917 and forgot the defeat of Trotsky and his conception.

In 1927 it was a new generation of young Soviet Russians who walked about in the Red Square. This generation did not regard Russia in the Trotsky spirit as the laboratory of international revolution, but as its own country, of which it could be proud because it had completely and successfully carried out a socialist revolution. But the rest of the world obstinately continued to believe that the person walking about in the Red Square was still Trotsky, in spite of the fact that he was in exile and had written the bitterest criticism of Stalin, accusing him of "betraying the Revolution."

In the same way very little was understood of what the Moscow trials were really about, until the Fifth Column in other countries showed up the danger of disintegration in the rear. Because insufficient attention was paid to the resolution of the Komintern in 1935 that the Executive Committee should make it a rule not to intervene in matters pertaining to the organization of the Communist parties, the news of their dissolution was received in 1943 with amazement. With equal surprise the world has had to realize that the magnificent stability of the Soviet regime (which had been said to stand on feet of clay), the brilliant exploits of the Red Army (which people had been saying would be defeated in six weeks, and the productive capacity of the Soviet heavy industry (which they had been saying was only Potemkin's pasteboard village)

Similarly, the doctrine of Lenin and Stalin on nationalities was not appreciated as it deserved. The doctrine replaced the reactionary Tsarist programme of Russification by one of encouragement and support of the language, culture and autonomy of the various Slav and non-Slav peoples of the Soviet regime, in spite of all its material difficulties in building up the country, was able to concentrate on tasks like the creation of characters alphabets, and literary languages for peoples who until the Soviet Revolution had only been able to talk and sing in their native tongue.

Wonder, embarrassment, and finally passionate division of views also accompany the changes in the Soviet Constitution which has extended the rights of the republics of the Union in the spheres of defence and external relations.

Even before the war the tendency was for the Soviet Union gradually to develop terms at which they which would comprise within itself— based on Russian traditions and on the achievements of the Bolshevik Revolution—elements both of the American Federation and the British Commonwealth. This development was certainly held up by the outbreak of war, but—paradoxical as it sounds—speeded up by the course of the war. For by the war the cohesion of the various nations of the Soviet Union has been subjected to a loading test of the most exacting nature because the first two years of the German-Soviet war made such painful demands on the nerves and the loyalty of all citizens of the sorely tried land.

Besides the successful advance of the German armies, which in other parts of despairing Europe confused the minds of so many people and drove them to betray their own people, the whole machinery of German propaganda came hurrying along in the wake of the advancing troops. Military triumphs, corruption and megaphones were expected to accomplish in White Russia, the Ukraine and the Baltic Republics things which had been prepared in Berlin since the last war with the accuracy and thoroughness of a laboratory. Officers who in 1918 had brought home to half-starved Germany seductive pictures of the Ukraine as a land ridden with corn gleaming with mineral wealth, went on steadily working (while Democrats, Social Democrats, Catholics and Nazis succeeded each other in the Chancellery of the Reich) at plans for an independent Ukraine as one of the chief sources of wealth for the Herrenvolk.

What was the answer of the Ukrainian people to the German military victories, their attempts at corruption and their propaganda? Only the sunflowers of the Ukraine swayed to the rhythm of the German cannon and megaphones; the people stoutly repulsed all temptations, threats and offers. They remained faithful to the Soviet Union.

Thus is it not natural that a paragraph should be added to the Soviet constitution which gives practical expression to the gratitude of the whole Soviet Union for the loyalty of the various republics and the sacrifices which their sons have made within the framework of the still unified Red Army? The experience of this war clearly shows that the wish of the different peoples for greater freedom and independence is everywhere more ardent than ever before. It is in harmony with this tendency, prevalent throughout the world when the Soviet constitution in acknowledgment of its existence has granted the wishes of its sixteen republics.

One can see from the newspaper commentaries how much suspicion still exists towards the Soviet Union. It is clear that the change in the Soviet constitution will, among other things, simplify the solution of the problem of the three Baltic republics. But the suspicious critics hasten to assert that the solution of this problem was the chief reason for the change of the Soviet constitution. Other people see in the relaxing of the centralism of Moscow an invasion of sixteen Soviet ambassadors into every capital in Europe, America and Asia, and of sixteen Soviet consuls into every oasis on the African continent. Others see the whole world being invested in the Peace Conference by the sixteen votes of the Soviet republics, and the demands of Great Britain and U. S. A. rejected and outvoted by Uzbekistan and Azeobedjan. These suspicions are so laughable that we need not trouble with them further.

Of course we do not yet know all the practical and technical results which the Soviet constitutional change will bring in international relations. But while the critics are talking about the large number of representatives from the Soviet Union in some of the capitals, they all forget that there will be a British and American Ambassador and military attache at Kiev, Gomel and the capital of Moldavia if there are a Ukrainian, White Russian and Moldavian ambassador and military attache in London and Washington. If, on the Soviet side, there were suspicion and not confidence in the cooperation of the Big Three, it is doubtful whether the U.S.S.R. would permit diplomatic corps to be set up in so many places on the vast Soviet territory. This proof of the confidence of the Soviet should be welcomed by all those who really believe in and wish for the lasting co-operation of the Big Three!

Only those who have not observed how constant and unswerving is Soviet foreign policy can see in these constitutional changes, dictated chiefly by the needs of internal policy and administrative reconstruction, a change in the line followed up to now; this is the line of Stalin, who has declared unequivocally that it is not the aim of the Soviet policy to annex or bolshevize countries outside the framework of the traditional Russian Empire. In my opinion this line is not in the least changed by the fact that the sixteen member States of the Soviet Union have received a greater measure of independence and certain marks of sovereignty (but by no means all, for instance, not the right to declare war.)

It would be a distortion of the real state of affairs for anyone to try to confuse the legitimate wish of the Soviet Union that a regime expressly hostile to her should not be set up in the neighboring States on her borders with an imperialist desire to include in the Soviet league nations those countries whose spiritual and social background, political and industrial condition and psychological make-up has always been outside direct Russian influence.

It will certainly be to the just interest of the Soviet Ukraine that the neiboring non - Soviet countries should live on terms of friendly confidence with her and not on terms of treacherous distrust. That the intensity of interest in the friendship of this or that non-Soviet country will vary in the different Soviet republics is easily understood. After all, this is the case all over the world. For instance the future Dominion of the Dutch East Indies will be more interested in the friendship of Australia and the Soviet Union in view of the Japanese danger, than Holland herself, since her safety will be mainly safeguarded by friendship with England, Belgium and France.

Finally, of course it will mainly depend on the degree of co-operation between the Great Powers, on their mutual confidence and harmony of ideas, whether the regional measures of security and defence are to strengthen or undermine the general collaboration of progressive forces. It is, for instance, indisputable that the Czechoslovak-Soviet Treaty will strengthen and reinforce the Anglo-Soviet Treaty so long as this foundation of European security remains in all its strength. For it transforms a weak and disorganized Eastern Europe from which probably many always drew strength to attack the West) into a stronger and more valuable partner for the West. It seems possible that the Soviet constitutional change will contribute to the growth and confidence and stability in Eastern Europe and thus help even more fundamentally to make Eastern Europe a really indispensable partner for Britain and America in the organization of future world security.

No Music For The Nazis

A newspaper under Nazi control recently smuggled out of occupied Holland, reveals that the majority of Holland's most talented musicians have been boycotting the Nazi-dominated concert halls, and instead have devoted their time and talents to the underground.

"This type of artist, however," the Nazified newspaper complained, "is always found willing to play at so-called private parties. These underground concerts are the reason why very few or no public concerts are given in some places. As a consequence, the paper continued, the rest of the public is forced to put up with second-rate performances provided by a few artists who do offer regular, legal recitals."

The paper sadly admitted that there is little the authorities can do to prevent these "underground" concerts. The places where and the time when they are given are such closely-guarded secrets, that it has never yet been possible to catch the "stubborn musicians" at trespassing the law.

Scientists Challenge A Theory

BY SIDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain's post - war economic strength can be re-created through vigorous application of science, the nation's leading scientists contend, and to that end, they have sought pledges of government support for their work after the war.

The scientists challenge the theory, most recently expressed by Field Marshal Smuts and Reconstruction Minister Woolton, that the war will impoverish Britain.

They carried the challenge recently to the government, a deputation of 24 M.P.'s, peers, professors and technical experts, all concerned with science, meeting Deputy Prime Minister Attlee and four ministers in a closed meeting. They set out what Press Association lobby correspondent, E. P. Stacpoole, described as "new prosperity proposals for Britain."

Fourteen speeches espousing the cause of science as a means of revitalizing Britain were delivered to the ministers in 50 minutes. These are some of the points believed to have been made in the appeal for increased government assistance:

1. The Government must avert the 'tragedy' of first - class British scientists being enticed abroad by high salaries and greater scope.

2. Provision must be made to ensure facilities for expansion from small - scale research to large - scale, in which Britain lags.

3. Special state grants should be made to co-operative research associations for the development of processes which might appear at first too "expensively speculative" for individual firms.

4. Research must be stimulated through tax concessions and the patent laws overhauled, the rights of patentees being strengthened.

5. The salaries of university scientists must be raised — "honor and glory" are not enough.

British scientists point out that American and Russian expenditure on scientific research is $315,000,000 ten times greater than in this country and assert that the Government must make substantial new grants for scientific and industrial research.

It is expected that the Government's answer will be made known in the most practical way—announcement of increased grants. Commons also is expected to spend a day in debate on ways in which science can help establish Britain's industrial prosperity after the war

Where Individual Liberty Cannot Live

BY JOHN McDOUGALL
In his "The Foundations of National Well-Being"

For those who love freedom there is one question, and one question only — how can those who hold power potentially so terrible be brought under social control? It has been done in the past. It is true that the record of such success is very short. Out of some five thousand years of recorded history only the last few hundred show a complete control over those who wield political power. But what has been done once can be done again. We know why and how their power was limited and how it was possible to maintain that situation.

Freedom is the result of two things, (a) the power of the majority to change its political masters and (b) the individual's right to freedom of thought and of expression which makes it possible for minority groups to develop their ideas, to popularize them, to seek public support for their fulfilment. These things do not exist in a vacuum. They are part of a social situation. What kind of a situation can support them as living and vital entities?

The inevitable answer is that it must be one in which the work of the world will go on through such a change of government. The belly cannot trust. Men do not live upon star-dust and even the principles of high policy are under discussion. They need bread and beef; they live in houses and wear clothes; their children are born and need care; they use a thousand things each of which is the result of time and thought and labor. This process cannot be stopped while we change our governors. It has been possible to keep them under control because the organization of economic life has been left to the private enterprisers. In a centralized economy where everything turns upon the decisions reached by the central executive that is impossible. With slightest breath of indecision at the top, the whole mechanism would grind to a stop.

Individual liberty cannot live under such an environment. Liberty demands the existence of private rights recognized and protected by the state and which can be asserted against the state if need be. But if a great national plan is to operate it must have an over-riding power to clear out any obstruction which gets in its way. Private liberty and national planning are incompatibles.

Worse still heads of the state be removable at the will of the people. Planning to be effective must be a continuous process. It must have complete continuity of tenure and of operations. If an active minority threatened that continuity, the planners might deeply regret the necessity, but they would be compelled to suppress the minority or else expose the community to chaos. They may be high-minded men who regret the necessity for violence; but the more real their concern for the realization of plans gaining great ends whose fulfilment depends upon continuity in their execution, the more certain are they to smother their scruples about the rights of minorities.

The crucial case will present itself to the planning executive as a conflict in which the public interest is affected no matter which way the decision goes. Care for the rights of minorities has to be balanced against a hoped for expansion in the net output of the community, and therefore in the level of consumption, if their projects are completed. They would be men of an inhuman detachment if the scales did not come down in favor of the plan which they had developed and against the rights of minorities who in the beginning at least, will appear as mere troublemakers. And in any case, those who will come to the top will be the power - hungry extroverts to whom the loss of liberty will be a shadowy thing whose consequences will seem remote and uncertain; the loss of their plans something real, immediate and drastic.

The heart and centre of resistance to centralization in the state is the belief that it is a plan to free the executive from those restraints which past ages have put upon it after painful experience of its unlimited power. It is always possible to have an all-powerful state. We now fight against the archetype example of the type. We abhor all its works. We claim to have perceived the unutterable moral depths to which such a government can sink. But if we have truly learned our lesson, why should so many of our citizens hope to find peace abroad and social millenium at home by adopting the same form?

It is no accident that capitalism and the freedom of parliamentary democracy have risen and flourished together. They are the twin faces of one central fact. It demands the stupidity of regarding politics and economics as separate studies to prevent the general realization that this is so. Only under capitalism can the work of the world go on without continuous control from above. It is true that it is not always perfectly done. It is of the nature of average that there are dispersions from them, some cases falling below and some above. But it is the greatness of capitalism that the average is so high, the material progress has been greater in the last 250 years than in the preceding 2500. Out of the diversities which capitalism has fostered have come the opportunities for trying new things for experiments in short for progress.

Competition is the regulator of economic action which keeps the economic mechanism in balance. It works slowly and pervasively. The reactions to it are not hair-trigger as some seem to expect; but they are all the more sure because they take months and years to exert their full pressure against those who step out of line. There is ample ground for using the state power to see to it that no group is able permanently to barricade itself against this pressure which is the only certain guarantee that each group makes an adequate contribution to the social welfare. But it is madness to fly from a demonstration that competition does not always work instantaneously to the belief that it is therefore necessary to rush into the complete surrender of all liberty. Civil society is not like a church which will respect by the rigidity with which it excludes those who cannot meet its standards: it includes all who live within the state boundaries. Because it is inclusive rather than exclusive in its nature, it must aim not at ideal justice but at the prevention of gross injustice. Its glory ought to be its capacity for tolerating diversity without sacrifice of essential social values.

MEAT RATIONING UNLIKELY THIS YEAR

According to a statement by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board there is little chance of rationing being resumed in Canada this year. Only unforseen changes in supply and demand will bring about rationing, although the conditions which prevailed in May, 1943, which brought about meat rationing, showed that it was necessary to make sure a meat supply as possible available for shipment; overseas and finally to ensure the equal distribution of supplies remaining in Canada. Such things are both impossible and unnecessary now without rationing.

WALLACE'S GOOD SPICES MAKE GOOD PICKLES

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 20TH, 1944

"THE PROPHET IN THE LIFE OF ISRAEL"
Lesson Text: I Samuel 3; 19-21; 7; 3-17

Last week the lesson had to do with the functions of a priest — today it has to do with those of the prophet. The difference between the two has been put in these words: "A priest speaks to God on behalf of man, a prophet speaks to man on behalf of God." This is a fairly good definition of the place and work of the two types of religious leaders. Both are necessary. The priest leads in prayer for the people, performs acts of religious leadership, conducts the sacrament and leads in worship. A good priest, consecrated, conscientious and devout, has a definite place in the life of organized religion.

The prophet, on the other hand speaks to man on behalf of God. Israel had many prophets, who left an imperishable mark on the life of the world. The religious meaning of the word prophet is used almost wholly of one who foretells the future. That was not its use in the Israelites thought of their prophets. They were rugged outspoken men who denounced the evils of their day and proclaimed the demands of God on men and women.

There was a long list of such men —not all of the same intensity or power of voice. But each in his day was proclaimed the truth as he saw it. Samuel was one of the earliest of these. In today's lesson, Samuel is a young man just coming into a position of religious leadership. His great qualities were recognized from one end of the country to the other, from Dan to Beersheba. In a way not described to us, God appeared to Samuel and made known His purposes and His will. These Samuel, in turn, relayed to the people. The main demand was that they should turn from worshipping the gods of the people round about, the Baals and the Ashtaroth, the latter being the female Baals, the worship of whom was always accompanied by licentiousness. Samuel demanded that this be done away with for God required no divided allegiance.

The people listened to Samuel. They came together at Mizpah confessed their sins, rededicated themselves to God in an act of solemn worship, which included fasting and sacrifice. The Philistines, traditional enemies of the Israelites, hearing that the people were gathered in a religious service, attacked them. But they were completely unsuccessful. However, and had to retreat somewhat hurriedly. Their ruse failed. It led to some extent at least to the rededication of the Israelites which had as a result of their recommitment and dedication. Thus the principle of Samuel was acknowledged and established.

In recent years, there has been quite evident in modern religion a growing emphasis on the prophetic functions of the clergy. The recent emphasis on worship is due to this. It has its place, of course, but the prophet was never more necessary than to-day. If the Church is to be a place all the stress on ritual and on form, it will fall in its task as an institution which speaks to men and for God. In some way other groups and other individuals quite outside the institution of organized religion, have taken up the prophetic office. Social justice and denouncing crime fired and private wrongs. The danger of diverging such a prophetic ministry from the Church is that it cuts the tap roots which supply the life giving strength to such a ministry. It is easy enough to denounce evil and to plead for social justice even from wrong motives. Men have been unblown to do so for selfish and mercenary reasons. Only religion, the religion of Jesus Christ, can supply the power which will make the prophets in the truest and best sense. The modern world needs men and women of that sort, who clear-sightedly with no thought of self, are willing to battle for justice, goodness, truth and decency.

More than 4,000,000 GOODYEAR all-synthetic rubber tires are now making history on the road!

YES, in spite of many wartime difficulties, Goodyear has already built more than 4,000,000 all-synthetic rubber tires of all types—nearly half of them in the popular 6.00-16 passenger car size.

This is a record achievement, made possible by the Goodyear Research Laboratory's twenty years' work in developing synthetic rubber. It proves that synthetic rubber tire production is out of the woods and rolling into high.

More than that, it provides a real measure of the worth of tires manufactured from man-made rubber, as shown by such typical records as these:

A large metropolitan taxi company using 6.00-16 Goodyear synthetic rubber tires reports an average service of 30,000 miles per tire—before recapping.

On sixteen taxi fleets operating in as many cities, the average before recapping is 22,360 miles.

And scores of letters from war workers; police officials, doctors and other unrestricted drivers tell of equally high mileage with trouble-free performance. Similar satisfactory service is being enjoyed by users of Goodyear synthetic rubber tubes.

All this demonstrates that it is not the material but what is done with it that counts most in building tires. It is one more proof of the tire-building skill that makes more people ride on Goodyear tires than on any other kind.

Surely, if you judge by performance, your choice in synthetic rubber tires must be Goodyears—now, as for the past twenty-nine consecutive years, the world's first-choice tire.

EXCLUSIVE FEATURES THAT MAKE GOODYEARS WEAR LONGER
1. Twenty years' experience with synthetic rubber
2. A tough, sturdy carcass of proven quality, low stretch Supercords used
3. Tested non-skid safety tread, Improved Goodyear tread design
4. Maximum wear from straight Goodyear design that keeps tread under compression
5. Greater experience and skill evidenced by Goodyear's record in building more than 350,000,000 passenger tires—many more than any other manufacturer

INVASION LOSS IN SIX WEEKS TOTALS 115,665

Allied forces have suffered a total of 115,665 casualties in killed, wounded or missing in France since the start of the invasion June 6 through July 30. Headquarters announced on Saturday.

Casualties of the British-Canadian force totalled 46,139, while those of the Americans were 69,526. While the British-Canadian force at the start of the invasion was about equal to the United States group, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons last week the American now had the larger force.

The Prime Minister noted that the British and Canadian losses were proportionately the same as American, and the casualty announcement would indicate that Americans compose 60 per cent of the forces in France, British forces 34.4, and Canadians 5.6.

A comparison of the figures for June 6 - July 20, approximately six weeks, with those for the first two weeks of the invasion shows a decline in the casualty rate. Indicative of fierce fighting that marked landing operations, total Allied losses for the first fortnight were 40,549, a rate which—if maintained—would have carried the casualty total past the 120,000-mark in six weeks.

Landing losses and those which followed were much lighter than had been expected, however, Maj.-Gen. A. W. Kenner, chief of the Allied Medical Corps, remarking Saturday that casualties in the campaign were 30 per cent below expectations.

Gen Kenner said there had been an extremely low rate of mortality among the wounded, and that of all the casualties suffered in the campaign, about 3 per cent had been fatal.

In announcing the casualties, Headquarters gave the United States total as 70,009, but these figures include 130 men killed, 41 wounded and 312 missing in a pre-invasion exercise last April, when German motorboats attacked a convoy.

Allies Sink 500 German Subs Since Start of War

More than 500 German submarines have been sunk by the Allies since the start of the war, it was reported last week in a joint Anglo-American statement.

Issued under authority of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, the statement added that Nazi U-Boats were "ineffective during July, a month which has been so important for the success of continental operations."

The report said the number of German submarines destroyed in July was "substantially greater than the number of merchant ships sunk."

The joint statement follows:

"The number of German U-Boats sunk during the war now exceeds 600. It is therefore understandable that the U-Boats still operating are extremely cautious. Their efforts have been ineffective during July, a month which has been so important for the success of continental operations.

"The number of U-Boats destroyed has been substantially greater than the number of merchant ships sunk. Seventeen U-Boats have been sunk while attempting to interfere with our cross-channel traffic since the first landing of the army of liberation.

"The U-Boat fleet is still of impressive size. Nevertheless the U-Boats remain the hunted rather than the hunters. They have been attacked from the Arctic to the Indian Ocean, aircraft playing a great part with the surface forces. This pressive size. Nevertheless the U-all chances of revival of the U-Boat campaign are killed, whatever may be the new devices and methods developed by the enemy.

"The Nazi claims of sinkings continue to be grossly exaggerated. For instance, their claim for June, the latest month for which complete figures are available, was an exaggeration of 1,000 per cent.

CIVILIAN TIRES STILL SCARCE

Plant facilities rather than rubber supplies now are the limiting factor in the manufacture of tires it was learned last week.

LENNOX LUMBER CO.

Paint Wallboard Shingles Lumber

LENNOX LUMBER CO.
'PHONE 53 NAPANEE

With the Government-owned Polymer Corporation synthetic rubber plant at Sarnia, Ont., operating at near capacity, supplies are being produced which have resulted in a marked easing of the rubber situation.

Restrictions on the sales of tires for civilian use were originally introduced as a result of the rubber shortage. Now that that situation has improved manufacturing plants are operating at capacity, but they are engaged largely in the production of tires for military vehicles and other war purposes with only a narrow margin devoted to civilian tire output.

With the industrial expansion stage of the war passed it is considered unlikely that there will be plant expansion to allow manufacture of more civilian tires and as a result civilian users are not likely to get any major relief until the production of tires for war purposes slackens.

The Salvation Army officer doesn't always wait to help the convicted prisoner. If he can, he'd rather get him before he lands in jail with the ugly stigma against his name. In court he pleads for him, offering to help and stand by him until he finds his way again. Frequently many are placed in the Army's care instead of going to jail.

V-5 Most Popular Weapon

Two Bavarian soldiers saved their lives by "using V-5, a new secret weapon," a BBC broadcast recorded.

The two soldiers told correspondents that "they had sought protection in a ditch during the Allied 1,000-bomber raid south of Caen on Monday night," B.B.C. explained.

"Only one thing can save us now —V-5," one of the Bavarians said to the other.

"What is V-5?"

"V-5 is a large white flag on a very large and very long pole," his ingenious friend answered.

Improvement Reported In Condition of Rev. G. M. Chidley

Latest word on Tuesday from the Kingston General Hospital concerning Rev. G. M. Chidley was that his condition was slightly improved, compared with last Saturday night and Sunday.

Mr. Chidley was taken ill with a heart attack a week ago last Tuesday morning, and, until Saturday evening, when he suffered a severe set back, his condition had steadily improved during the week.

Throughout Saturday night and Sunday he was critically ill, but this week there has been a marked improvement and his family and friends are encouraged to hope that he will ultimately make a good recovery.

He is being given the best medical and nursing care, and his wife and daughter, Nursing Sister Isabel Chidley, are staying at the hospital with him. The other members of his family are at the hospital almost every day.

The members of Mr. Chidley's congregation in Trinity United Church, and his many friends in the town and country, are feeling very anxious about him and are hoping that he may soon be restored to his usual good health.

OBITUARIES

MRS. CARRIE WILSON McILLWAINE
(Contributed)

Following a long illness of several months duration born with Christian fortitude, Mrs. Carrie Wilson McIlwaine, beloved wife of the late Robert Andrew McIlwaine, of Adolphustown, passed away on Friday, August 4th at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Bush, Sharpes' Corners.

The deceased was born in Napanee, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bruce Wilson. After her marriage she resided in Richmond for a number of years, then moving to Adolphustown. She had been residing with her daughter Mrs. George Bush, a few years previous to her death. She was a member of the United Church of a cheerful generous disposition and has left an example of quiet unassuming heroism which we shall not soon forget. She has laid aside the work-worn garment for the robe of rest, leaving us treasured memories. She leaves to mourn her loss, one daughter, Mrs. George Bush, Sharpes' Corners, two sons, James W. McIlwaine, Adolphustown, and George A. McIlwaine, Toronto, also a sister, Mrs. Catherine A. Knapp, of Napanee.

Rev. G. M. Chidley, of Trinity United Church, Napanee, in the absence of her pastor Rev. W. A. Merrick, conducted the service at late residence and at the graveside. During the service Mr. and Mrs. O. Brooks sang "When I Get Home." Interment took place in the family plot at Riverview Cemetery, Napanee.

Weary at last of the long day's toil,
She has laid life's burdens down to rest in the land of sorrows free.
The land of the soul's renown.
She has learned the secret eternal,
That death's but an open door
That swings to let heaven's glory through
As we drift to that better shore.

MRS. CHARLES YOUNG

Early on Saturday morning, August 5th, Margaret Ann Armstrong, widow of the late Charles Young, and one of the oldest residents of the district, passed peacefully away at her home at Marlbank. She was of Irish descent, the daughter of the late Francis Armstrong and Alice Dyas and was in her ninety-first year, having been born in Sheffield Township on June 15th 1854. Although in gradually failing health for the past year, she remained fairly active until the end. She was well-known for her kindly disposition and in her younger days was called upon many times when a helping hand was needed.

She was one of the last of the pioneers of this district, coming here as a bride over seventy-three years ago.

Her funeral was held in St. Mathew's Anglican Church, of which she was the last of the original congregation, which by unremitting effort built and maintained the church which is its fitting memorial to their memory. She leaves one son Henry of Napanee and five daughters, Mrs. Lapford (Alice) Kingston; Nina, of Marlbank, Stella of Toronto, Mrs. N. G. Allen (Jessie) and Mrs. M. Matcheon (Jeanette) of Marlbank. Rev. E. Pexley, Kingston, a friend of the family, conducted the funeral service and burial was in Riverview Cemetery, Napanee. The pallbearers were Messrs. John Kimmett Than. Kimmett, Edmund York George Cox, Francis Somerville, and Richard Allen.

MEAT RATIONING HELD UNLIKELY

EXPORT REQUIREMENTS BEING MET SAYS BOARD

Ottawa. — The Prices Board said in a statement that unless "some radical and unexpected change" in either the supply or demand situation occurs, there was no likelihood of meat rationing being resumed in Canada "during the remainder of this calendar year."

The statement said most of the conditions which brought about the suspension of meat rationing March 1st still existed.

"Meat rationing was introduced in May, 1942, for two reasons—to make available as large a meat supply as possible for shipment overseas and to ensure equitable distribution of the remaining supplies in Canada," said K. W. Taylor, foods administrator for the Prices Board.

"Both these objectives now are being achieved without rationing. We are sending overseas all the meat that our rail and shipping facilities can handle, and an enforced reduction of meat consumption in Canada is probably necessary at all the acute storage and other difficulties which confronted us last winter.

"Moreover, the Meat Board, in collaboration with the Prices Board and the packing industry, is able to get all its export requirements without seriously complicating the problems of equitable distribution between regions and localities in Canada.

QUITE SIMPLE

In the midst of a scientist's labors, a visitor — a distinguished foreign physician — was announced. The latter watched the absorbing investigations with an interested air, but the scientist's attention was concentrated upon a vessel which was enveloped in smoke and steam.

"Guess what I have here," he said.

The visitor proceeded to enumerate all the wild and wooly things known to the scientific world.

"Microcosci?"
"No."
"Schococci?"
"No."
"Spirochetae?"
"No."
"What then?"
"Sausages!" said the scientist, and proceeded to investigate them with vigor.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Delectable in summer, and all year round are foods prepared in the refrigerator. One of their chief claims to culinary fame is that they can be prepared early in the day and be in readiness for the evening meal. They're easily adaptable to party occasions, especially the buffet supper.

JELLIED LAMB STEW

2 pounds lean neck of lamb, 3 table-spoons gelatin, ½ cup water, 1 medium-sized onion, 3 medium-sized carrots, 1 cup chopped spinach, 1 cup cooked peas, salt, pepper.

Cover lean lamb with hot water and let simmer until the meat is tender. Put carrots and onions through food chopper and cook in as little water as possible. Soak gelatin in cold water and dissolve in three cups hot meat stock and vegetable broth. Grind meat. Combine meat, cooked seasoned spinach, mashed carrots, and onions. Season and add partially cooled, dissolved gelatin. Pour into a mold which has been dipped in cold water. Chill in electric refrigerator and when firm unmold onto a platter. Garnish.

MOLDED FISH SALAD

3 cups cooked fish, flaked; 1 green pepper, finely chopped; ¼ teaspoon pepper; ½ teaspoon salt; ½ cup of celery, diced; 1 teaspoon grated onion; 1¼ cups mayonnaise.

Combine ingredients and pack firmly in greased mold. Chill in electric refrigerator. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with tomato wedges.

BERRY PARFAIT

PUDDING: Beat 2 egg yolks, 1 whole egg, and ¼ cup sugar until lemon-colored. Gradually stir in 2 cups scalded milk. Cook in double boiler, stirring constantly, until mixture coats spoon. Cool quickly. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla; chill.

BERRY LAYER: Combine 1 pint crushed berries and ½ cup sugar. Chill in electric refrigerator.

MERINGUE: Gradually add 3 tablespoons sugar to 2 beaten egg whites; beat until meringue forms peaks. Alternate pudding and berries. Top each parfait with a meringue swirl and berry.

WARTIME ICE CREAM

(Suggested by H. G.)

2 egg whites, 1 3 cup granulated sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup 18 per cent cream.

Beat the egg whites stiff but not dry and gradually beat in the sugar; beat after each addition until the mixture stands in peaks. Fold in vanilla and cream. Turn into pint freezing tray of your automatic refrigerator and with the control set at fast-freezing, freeze for half an hour; take from refrigerator and stir mixture until smooth. Return to refrigerator and freeze half an hour longer; take from refrigerator and mix until smooth. Continue this procedure until the mixture is firm and there is no separation. Return control to a point that will just keep the ice cream frozen.

TAKE A TIP

1. Pitting jars of vegetables too full may cause them to spoil.

2. Use a sterilized knife to slide down inside the packed jars of fruit or vegetables before sealing.

3. It is wise to use new zinc screw bands.

4. Process filled jars in water-bath; counting the time from when water begins to boil.

5. Do not remove jars by lifting the tops. Dip out some of the hot water and then remove them.

6. Opening jars to refill is not necessary if there is an air space but no leakage or defection of such.

THE QUESTION BOX

Miss E. J. asks: Why is a jam or jelly more successful done in small quantities?

Answer: For several reasons: Evaporation is more quickly accomplished; does not burn as readily, and there is less foam.

Mrs. J. C. asks: How do you make two cups of rhubarb juice to add to berries for making jam?

Answer: Cut one quart of rhubarb into one inch pieces, add one cup of water. Cook ten minutes and then press through a sieve.

Mrs. M. M. asks: Recipe for Plumb Gumbo.

Answer: 2 quarts plums, 3 cups sugar, 1 orange.

Wash and cut plums and remove pits. Slice orange very thinly. Cook together slowly for 15 minutes. Add sugar. Cook rapidly 5 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars, cool and seal. Yield: about 2½ pints.

Anne Allan invites you to write to her, care of The Napanee Beaver. Send in your suggestions on homemaking problems and watch this column for replies.

Homemade Jams, Jellies and Pickles

Jams, jellies and pickles are essential foods perhaps, but how much they can add to meal interest!

Everyone who counts on a homemade supply will be interested in a folder called "Wartime Jams, Jellies and Pickles", which may be obtained free of charge from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. It contains information that will be equally helpful to the beginner and to the experienced homemaker, and a collection of tested recipes that are specially good.

This week's recipes are chosen from this new folder.

WALLACE'S GOOD SPICES MAKE GOOD PICKLES!

Fresh Fruit Pies

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief, Consumer Section,
Dominion Department of Agriculture

Everybody likes pie and a really good pie is a culinary achievement second to none. Made with fresh fruit pies are at their best, and it is worth remembering that sugarless canned fruit makes pies that taste almost like fresh fruit pies.

Today's recipes from the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture are for two fruit pies. A "company" peach chiffon pie, an open face plum pie and a deep peach pie. Wheat germ pastry can count as that "extra" serving of whole grain cereal" required daily by Canada's Food Rules.

PEACH CHIFFON PIE

1 baked 9-inch pie shell.
8 medium peaches
2 envelopes plain gelatine (2 tablespoons)
3 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup light cream, well chilled
4 egg whites

Wash, peel and stone six peaches. Crush, (makes about 1½ cups, crushed). Add gelatine and lemon juice. Cook 5 minutes, then dissolve over boiling water. Add 2 tablespoons of the sugar, and the salt. Stir well and chill until thickened but not firmly set. Add cream slowly to the peach mixture, stirring well. Beat egg whites until almost stiff; add remainder of sugar gradually, beating continually. Fold egg whites into peach mixture, turn into shell, and chill. Top with the two remaining peaches, sliced. Six servings.

Note: Egg yolks may be hard-boiled and used in salad or sandwiches. To keep egg yolks, cover with a little cold water, cover closely and keep cold.

PLUM PIE

Pie paste
2-3 cup sugar
Dash of salt (optional)
3 tablespoons flour
Few grains salt
3 cups sliced plums (about 1½ lbs.)
Line a 9-inch pie tin with pastry. Mix sugar, cloves, flour and salt. Sprinkle a small portion of mixture over under crust of pie shell. Combine sliced plums with remainder of mixture and fill shell. Arrange a lattice work of pie paste over top of pie. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees F, for 30 minutes. Six servings.

Note: As an alternate to cloves sprinkle ¼ teaspoon almond flavoring over plums.

DEEP PEACH PIE

6 large peaches (3 cups sliced)
½ cup raisins
½ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Peel and slice peaches. Arrange in baking dish in alternate layers with raisins, brown sugar and butter. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Cover with flaky pastry. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees F, until light brown, about 35 minutes. Six servings.

WHEAT GERM PASTRY

3 cups sifted pastry flour
½ cup wheat germ
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup shortening
½-½ cup ice water

Mix and sift flour and salt; add wheat germ. Cut in shortening with knives or pastry blender. Add only sufficient water to make a stiff dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and roll to fit pie plate. This amount should make one double crusted pie and one 9-inch shell. Bake shells in a hot oven, 400 degrees F, until light brown, about 10 minutes.

Note: To add wheat germ to any favorite pastry recipe; replace ½-½ cup of flour with an equal quantity of wheat germ. Add 1½ tablespoons extra water for each ¼ cup of wheat germ used.

NAZIS UNVEIL ROCKET PLANE

London.—The Germans have taken the wraps off another new weapon—a rocket-propelled fighter—and all Allied fliers who have encountered the planes agreed they are capable of terrific speed.

Little is known so far of the effectiveness of the craft. Only seven have been met and they did not stand to fight, but the speed at which they ran away underscores the importance they might assume if the Germans manage to produce them on a mass scale.

Berlin has been hinting at rocket-propelled planes for months. The U. S. Air Force announced that Allied heavy bombers and their convoy of fighters ran into a group of the new planes over Germany on Friday.

Capt. Alvin P. Tacon, of Mobile, Ala., said his Mustang formation encountered five of the planes. He said he was unable to get his sights on either of two he tried to catch. A Mustang can do better than 400 miles an hour.

The new plane was "secret" only in the date when it would first appear. Most of its details have been known to Allied headquarters for some time and what was not known could be surmised from Allied experiments with similar craft.

It was the first of two new weapons Germany was expected to throw into the air war. The other is a jet-propelled fighter. Little is known of it although all nations are known to be working.

A girl may leave the shelter of her home in a small town or in the country, and, bewildered by the excitement and confusion of city life, she succumbs to the temptations around her. It is then that she looks for a friendly hand to help her and finds it extended to her by The Salvation Army. Anyone of three receiving homes and 11 maternity homes across the Dominion will make her welcome.

Keep the Apples on the Trees till harvest time with PARMONE CONCENTRATE HORMONE SPRAY

● Parmone prevents pre-harvest drop—keeps the fruit on the trees—allows it to develop, ripen, colour. It lengthens the picking season—important in these days of labour shortage. One 4 oz. bottle of PARMONE Concentrate makes 100 gallons of spray. The effect is noticeable within a day or two of application. One application is usually sufficient. Order PARMONE from your local C-I-L Dealer. Spray on first signs of pre-harvest dropping.

NEWBURGH W. A. ENTERTAINS CAMDEN EAST W. A.

The members of the Woman's Association of the Newburgh United Church entertained the Camden East W. A. on the afternoon of Friday, August 4. Despite the hot weather the Sunday School room was delightfully cool, and large baskets of flowers added a note of color.

Mrs. Herrington, President of the Newburgh organization, opened the meeting, with Mrs. J. McLeod as Secretary.

Following the business session, the Camden East ladies, with Mrs. Barr as President, took charge of the program.

Mrs. J. Fairbairn contributed a violin solo, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. V. Edgar. A duet was sung by Mrs. Geo. Scott and Mrs. Fairbairn. Miss Laura Alkenbrack gave a humorous reading.

The guest speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. Fred Henderson, of Napanee. She gave a very inspiring address on "Our Duty as Christian People to Our Church and to Our Community".

Appreciation of the splendid program and fine address was voiced by Mrs. John Wartman.

Miss Alkenbrack conducted a quiz, the winners of which were Mrs. Henderson and Miss Lillith Gandier.

Afternoon tea was served at small tables by a committee of the Newburgh ladies.

The singing of the National Anthem brought a pleasant afternoon to a close.

MOUNT PLEASANT PIONEER W.I.

On Thursday evening, August 3, the regular monthly meeting of the Mount Pleasant Pioneer Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Garnet Dupre, with a good attendance. The meeting was in charge of the President, Mrs. A. Sexsmith, assisted by the Secretary, Mrs. C. Nugent.

After the usual opening, several items of business were dealt with and correspondence read. A splendid sum was again received from the sale of articles donated to the travelling basket.

Mrs. L. Gaylord kindly offered her home for a quilting bee, to be held on August 16.

An interesting program, in charge of Mrs. T. Dens, followed the business part of the meeting. All joined in community singing from the W. I. song sheets, with Mrs. F. Henderson as accompanist.

A quiz, dealing with questions on historical subjects, was conducted by Mrs. Gaylord, the winner being Mrs. Dupre. Mrs. W. Hudson was prize winner for a guessing contest.

A trio, consisting of Mrs. P. Henderson, Mrs. B. Henderson and Miss O. Harvey, rendered several vocal numbers, which were enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Ross Oliver extended an invitation to the branch to meet at her home for the September meeting.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which lunch was served.

"Own-Your-Own Farm" Offer to Returned Men

160 ACRES OFFERED FREE IN NORTH LAND UNDER DREW GOVERNMENT PLAN — NEAR SCHOOLS AND HIGHWAYS

Thousands of ex-service men and women, returning from overseas, are expected to take advantage of the rehabilitation opportunities offered by the Drew Government's "own-your-own-farm" plans which have just been completed.

Hon. W. G. Thompson, Provincial Minister of Lands and Forests, has announced that under the regulations Members of Canada's Armed Forces may obtain 160 acres of land free in all northern sections of the province, excepting Cochrane and Timiskaming. In these areas the Crown may acquire 80 acres with the opportunity of more later.

The program will not only provide homes and farms for many of our returning men and women, but will stimulate the growth of Northern Ontario municipalities.

War veterans wishing to settle in the north country will communicate with the Lands and Forest Department and select the district for new home. He will then be sent to the District Forester, who has orders to give every assistance in the selection of land, completion of application forms, and even taking the affidavits.

To acquire the deed for the property the new home owner is required to have two acres cultivated and cleared annually and reside on the land six months of each year.

Land selected must be within one mile of a travelled road and three miles of a school.

Some Tenants Are Not Protected Now

Rentals officers of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board point out that, notwithstanding its order giving tenants of 'shared accommodation" except boarders protection from summary eviction unless they are on their bad behaviour, tenants of such accommodation who were given notice to vacate prior to July 29 must observe such notice. Protection under the new order is not, of course, given to tenants who fail to pay their rentals or who violate agreements with landlords. Provincial laws apply in such cases and if the tenants are held to be obnoxious they can also be put out through application to a court of rentals appeal which will review the circumstances before reaching a decision.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS TO OPEN SEPT. 5 PREMIER DREW STATES

Later Opening Optional If Decided Necessary

All elementary and secondary schools of Ontario will reopen September 5th, except when school boards under authorization provided last April by the Ontario Department of Education, close any secondary school or grade for a period not exceeding four weeks to permit students to aid in harvesting, processing, preserving and canning food, Ontario Premier and Minister of Education George Drew said in a statement issued on Monday night.

"In view of the fact that we continue to receive requests from some localities that all secondary schools in the Province remain closed during September to provide additional help on farms, I think it advisable that I should leave no doubt about the situation in regard to the opening of our secondary schools," he said.

"On April 4th last, a notice was sent to every secondary school board in the Province urging that pupils be impressed with the need for help on the farms. We made arrangements to permit pupils in secondary schools to leave before termination of the school year so they could do this work.

"At the same time, it was very clearly stated that the responsibility for keeping any of the schools closed during September rested with local school boards. They were given authority to close secondary schools under their control for any period up to four weeks after September 5th, which they thought advisable under local conditions.

"So that there may be no confusion, it should be definitely understood that the schools will reopen on September 5th, except where the local boards have taken action. There are a number of areas in Ontario where students are required. There are more where they are not required because of different agricultural conditions. The nation's food supply is a matter of utmost importance and the arrangements which have been made afford the opportunity to provide local help where it is needed. The education of our children is also of utmost importance, and there would be good reason for resentment if schools were again closed in areas where pupils are not needed."

The notice sent out April 4th, to all secondary school boards and principals also stated that pupils enrolled in schools and grades which will not be closed during September and who were employed in essential work connected with the food supply during their summer holidays could, if their services were required remain at their food supply help work during September. Principals and teachers of such pupils are expected to make special provisions for them on their return to school, to enable them to overtake school work they have missed.

A SECOND FLANDERS' FIELD

Once more we have our Flanders' Field,—
Again the poppies grow.
And like the last great fight, we see
The crosses row on row;
For brave men lie 'neath foreign soil
In lasting peace — free from toil.

Who knows their thoughts as they passed on
To that Great Land above?
With dimming eyes I'm sure they saw
Their homes — the ones they loved;
They gave up life, the price supreme,
To rid the world of a madman's dream.

How gallantaly they fought and died;
Their last wish was that we
Would carry on; they knew some day
They'd share our victory;
So we'll keep faith and thus they'll know
They helped make peace on earth below.

So sleep, brave warriors, you must know
The years can never dim
Your memory, valor, sacrifice,
As now you rest with Him.
We'll make a world where free folk reign,
And then you'll know — 'TWAS NOT IN VAIN.

BATAWA TEAM OUSTS HUNTER'S FROM PLAY-OFFS

The local Hunter's Cleaners Softball squad were in Batawa Village on Saturday last where the first game of the O.A.S.A. Intermediate C playdowns took place. The local team was soundly trimmed to the tune of 20 to 2.

The score really did not indicate the brand of ball played as the total of 16 runs crossed the plate in the fatal sixth frame. Most of these runs were unearned as a flock of errors both on the infield and in the garden were responsible for at least 12 of them.

The Cleaners used two pitchers, Rombouth and Morton. Rombouth was hit heavily for six frames and Morton stemmed the tide only allowing one run in the last stage of the game.

For Batawa "Buck" Stacey really did a wonderful job. He had the Napanee team standing on their heads all through. He was given a rest by Al Cuff during the last two innings and the Hunter boys found little difficulty in pasting his offerings but failed to get more than one run across.

Batawa 12, Napanee 9

The second game which was played here on Monday night was a decidedly better game. With the exception of one bad inning, the local squad played pretty fair ball and the game was a nip and tuck affair throughout.

"Buck" Stacey the hurler who handcuffed the Cleaners at Batawa was forced to retire in the seventh. He was replaced by Cuff, who held the Napanee boys for the balance of the game.

Rombouth went the route for Hunters, pitching steady ball throughout. The entire table donated by The Gibbard Furniture Shops, Napanee for the attendance prize was won by William Walker, Napanee.

THE END IN SIGHT

General Sir Bernard Montgomery, more familiarly known as "Monty" who commands the ground forces of the Allied troops in Northern France, addressed the Troops in the Field on Monday. He said that the Germans had suffered a decisive defeat. He praised all branches of the service for the work done. Concluding his brief address the General said: "The victory in Northwest France, south of the Seine, marks the beginning of the end of the German military domination of France. . . . The Lord Mighty, in battle has given us the victory. The news is very good from all war fronts all over the world. The end of the war is in sight; let us finish off the business in record time."

This is an encouraging statement from a great military leader. He speaks with confidence, and with great assurance. He is in a better position, probably, to appraise the extent of the present German defeat, than some others. He cannot speak with any greater definition; nor does he give even an approximate date for the end of the war. But he tells his soldiers and the rest of the world that the end of German domination in France, is in sight.

The turn of events since the United Nations cut through the Normandy lines has surprised even the experts. The speed with which the armies have moved, the almost perfect coordination between the air and the ground forces, has been a marvel of organization, and has baffled the enemy completely. The German General Staff has been outwitted. Large numbers of their forces have surrendered, other large groups entrapped on all sides are being cut to pieces. In confusion, the remnants are retreating towards the borders of Germany.

The Germans now know they cannot win the war. Whether the end comes soon or not, will depend on whether the Nazis are prepared to abandon their traditional policy of refusing to fight on their own territory. The Germans have always fought their wars on other people's land. Should they abandon this policy and continue to fight every inch of the way to Berlin, the end may not be as near as we would wish. If on the other hand, they admit defeat when the armies of the United Nations reach the borders of Germany, the end cannot be long delayed — that is if the forces of the United Nations can maintain the speed they have achieved during the past month.

GETTING DOWN TO BUSINESS

Over in the United States, on a large estate known as Dumbarton Oaks, at Georgetown, near Washington, representatives of Great Britain, Russia and The United States are meeting to make plans for keeping the peace after the war is over. The meetings were formally opened on Monday, when Secretary of State Cordell Hull, of The United States, welcomed the delegations. Replies were given by Sir Alexander Cadogan, of Great Britain, and Ambassador Andrei Gromyko, of the U.S.S.R. They were all hopeful of the achievement of a harmonious, workable plan. After the opening formalities, the delegation went behind closed doors, where they will hold their deliberations for three weeks.

Ever since the outbreak of the war, groups, committees and commissions of all sorts, have been working on plans for the post-war world. Hundreds of documents have been prepared and published. The Committee meeting in Washington will, no doubt, have access to these, and if they wish to know public opinion on the subject, should not ignore them.

It is a hopeful sign that these negotiations are taking place now, so that the peoples concerned will have an opportunity to study the findings before they actually take on the form of a treaty. Open discussion and revision in the light of debate, will ensure the support of the treaty obligations, when finally signed. One of the great weaknesses in the procedure following the First World War was that the Treaty which set up The League of Nations was debated after it had been submitted for signature. The Senate of the United States refused to ratify its terms. Perhaps the lesson has been learned. It is fervently hoped that it has. Should the United Nations agree among themselves on a post-war programme and should that plan be supported by public opinion after full and open debate, the situation will be much more hopeful for a lasting peace, than the procedure followed at the conclusion of the First World War, proved to be.

The world will anxiously await the findings of this group, on whom such a heavy responsibility has been placed.

V

CAMILLIEN HOUDE — MARTYR

The enthusiastic reception which former Mayor Houde received when he was released from the internment camp, is a strange commentary on the mental attitude of people in general and of the people in the Province of Quebec, in particular. How to deal with public figures who openly disobey the law and urge others to do so, always raises a difficult problem. To ignore the actions of such men, would seem a sign of weakness on the part of the governing bodies, and would leave them free to continue their illegal propaganda. On the other hand, arresting them and locking them up arouses sympathy, particularly among friends, and tends to develop the martyr complex.

Mr. Camillien Houde openly defied the Government and urged that the law requiring national registration should be ignored. To do that, under ordinary circumstances, would have been bad enough, but to do so in face of the serious threat to our whole national life, justified the action of the Government in placing Mr. Houde in confinement.

Now that he has been released, dispatches tell of ten thousand people milling around the station in Montreal, to welcome him back to civilian life again. The demonstration indicates that these ten thousand, at least, believe he was a martyr to a cause, that he was wrongly confined. They were anxious to show Mr. Houde their loyalty to him, and to endorse his release.

That is a risk that always has to be faced when strong measures have to be taken. It was the risk the British Government took when Ghandi was imprisoned. There seems no way out, and yet a government must act in the interests of the whole people. The disturbing feature of the situation, so far as Mr. Houde's experience is concerned, is that the public demonstration is just another bit of evidence concerning the Quebec mentality. Nowhere in Canada, save in Quebec, could such a thing have happened. There is a great deal of discussion among people of The United Nations, as to the policy that must be followed in order to change the whole mental attitude of the Nazis. How the mental attitude of the people of Quebec is to be changed is our greatest Canadian problem.

To the solution of this problem, Canadians must bend all their efforts in the years that lie immediately ahead, if the ideal of a United Canada, which brought the Dominion into being, is to be achieved.

THE VOLUNTARY SYSTEM

The numerical results of the voluntary system of enlistments, as followed in Canada, have been more satisfactory than might have been expected under the circumstances. The Wartime Information has recently released figures setting forth the intake into the Canadian Forces, from the beginning of the war until March 31st, 1944. The figures show that a total of 913,092 men in the eligible age group—18 to 45 years — have entered the Forces. This is 36.9 per cent. of the estimated total of 2,474,000 men in this group. At June 1st, 1944 81.4 per cent of this total intake was still in the army, or 756,900 men. That 900,000 men out of a total population of about eleven million should voluntarily have enlisted, is a creditable record, and one of which we may well be proud.

The picture, however, is not so bright when viewed from another angle. The figures, by provinces, indicate that the enlistments have not been as general in some provinces as in others. Nova Scotia has the highest per centage of enlisted eligibles, 45.6 per cent enlisting. Quebec had the lowest, with 22.1 per cent enlistment. The others were as follows: P. E. I., 38.4; New Brunswick, 43.6; Ontario, 43.3; Manitoba, 43.5; Saskatchewan, 33.9; Alberta, 40.1; and British Columbia, 44.4.

The Provinces, apart from Quebec, show a fairly even level of enlistments. The wide divergence between Quebec, with a low of 22.1 per cent. enlistments to the next lowest which is Saskatchewan, with 33.9 per cent., calls attention to the weakness of a voluntary system under modern conditions of warfare. The modern method is total war. War is conducted not between armed forces, but between nations. They must be geared up for war as they are organized for peace. National mobilization of all manpower is the only equitable method of distributing the burden which war lays upon a people. Twice within a life time, when the whole national life has been at stake, Quebec has failed to carry her share of the load, while sharing all the benefits of a place of preferment in the British Commonwealth. The Dominion Government had a clear mandate from all Canada, but Quebec, to impose an equitable system of compulsory service, but lacked the will to enforce it.

THE 1940 PARIS BLITZ IN REVERSE

The writer of the following dispatch was British United Press manager for France for many years. When Germany declared war upon the Allies, he was arrested in Vichy and interned in Germany. He covered the German conquest of France in 1940 from its inception to its tragic close and is a recognized authority on France and the French. He is now on a lecture tour.

By Ralph Heinzen
British United Press Staff Correspondent

There's a remarkable parallel between the smashing American blitz of 1940 that tumbled France in 45 days. Indeed it is the same thing in reverse.

Both are overwhelming tank operations in which break-through permits a swift, deep penetration that plays havoc with the costliest and best laid defence.

There's a parallel too between the swift capture by the Allies of key points behind Hitler's Atlantic Wall which his Todt organization built in three years at a cost of $30,000,000 out of the French taxpayers' pockets and the turning of the $500,000,000 Maginot Line by the Germans in 1940.

Forty-five days after the Germans broke into the tank country of North France in 1940, France surrendered. The Allies broke into tank country on July 25.

The terrain from Normandy, Brittany or the Loire Valley to Paris is perfect tank country. It's hilly but smooth, with rolling green fields interspersed with forests and excellent national roads. It isn't greatly different from the Ardennes and the Somme Valley country where Reichenau's tanks smashed the French army to bits and made the 45-day conquest of 1940 possible.

The new battle for Paris really is being fought in Western Normandy where four German Panzer divisions counter-attacked last week. If we win that battle finally there should be no further difficulties in reaching Paris within a matter of weeks. There's really no defendable line between the present Allied positions and Paris.

Paris can be defended if the Germans decide to risk the destruction of the city. In 1871 Paris resisted the besieging Prussian armies for many bitter and hungry months.

I remember the French government's last day in Paris, June 10 1940. The previous evening Propaganda Minister Jean Prouvost, the owner of France's biggest daily newspaper, the Paris Soir, told the American correspondents: "Paris will be defended from house to house, from street to street, from roof to roof." It sounded nice but we all knew Premier Paul Reynaud had assembled cars that very evening to take the whole government and the ministers and their wives and sweethearts to Tours.

Prouvost's intentions were really bravado. Certainly they didn't make military sense because Generalissimo Maxime Weygand, as supreme Allied commander, had told the government that Paris could not be defended even if every house was used to shelter snipers. Weygand told Reynaud that any army with a hundred bombers and a thousand tanks could capture Paris in twenty-four hours despite any defence but would destroy the city in doing so. That same formula stands today—100 bombers and 1000 tanks and Paris is lost in flames if it is defended.

Paris is militarily important, however, and beyond the morale building aspect of its recapture. All railroads have their terminals in Paris.

The city could be easily flanked from the West by a swift move up the Loire Valley. It should be easier to flank Paris from the west than from the east as the Germans did in 1940.

One of the most dramatic yet hopeless, costly, and futile phases of the war was the 1940 flight from Paris. I closed the United Press bureau and followed the government on June 10. About 2,000,000 fled from after the government fled. I drove 100 miles through roads packed solid with humanity. All Paris fled the approaching Nazis either afoot or in automobiles and on bicycles. The flight blocked the French army's retreat and permitted the Germans to capture more than a million French prisoners.

Runstedt's tactics for swiftly overrunning France and preventing the French from organizing emergency defences, succeeded because it chopped France into 16 parallel corridors. The same tactics would be just as easy from positions held by the Allies in Normandy and Brittany by (1) a drive behind the Atlantic wall behind Deauville to the Seine near Rouen, then along the east bnak of the Seine in a sweep around Paris; (2) A direct frontal sweep toward Paris down the Lisieux road with a parallel advance along the secondary road via Argentan, both leading to Versailles; (3) A drive directly up the Loire via Angers, Tours, and Orleans which would be able to turn Paris via Fontainebleau;; (4) A drive straight southward from Nantes behind Vendee though easy terrain to Bordeaux and Hendaye, thus wiping out the whole length of the Atlantic Wall.

MEET MINIMUM RESISTANCE

BY DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The outstanding feature of the amphibious invasion of Southern France by British, American and French troops is that the first landings were made quickly and against a minimum of resistance.

That's vastly significant. It means, of course, that the Germans no longer have the strength to withstand such an attack. They're cracking up. The garrote is tightening about Herr Hitler's neck—and may he find it uncomfortable.

The Hitlerites knew that the invasion was coming. They've been talking about it for months as who hasn't — and recently gave clear indication that they realized it was at hand when they ordered civilians to evacuate the great port of Marseilles near the mouth of the Rhone.

With all this warning the Germans would have been armed to the teeth to defend this strategic coast if they had the wherewithal. But they lacked the men and equipment to stand off the Allies. Seven waves of infantry were put ashore on a broad front in less than two hours,— an amazing feat.

This doesn't necessarily mean that Southern France is stripped of enemy forces or that there won't be hard fighting. It does mean that the 60 to 65 divisions of troops — say 750,000 — upon which Hitler has depended for defence of Western Europe, were far too few to meet the concerted Allied onslaught. About half of this force undoubtedly was flung into the fighting on the Normandy front and scores of thousands are either dead or prisoners.

Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean theatre, has told the French people that the object of the invasion is to drive out the Germans and join with the Allied armies advancing from Normandy." This indicates that the invading force will drive northward through the great Rhone valley. Hitler's chances of holding the line of the Seine and the Marne rivers, with Paris as the central anchor, are poor. Indeed, they've been fading fast under the Allied successes on the Normandy front. He will have to expedite his withdrawal to his inner fortress on German soil.

Disaster continued to clutch tenaciously at the Hitlerites in Normandy today. The mouth of the cul-de-sac which is said to surround 100,000 or more Nazi troops has been narrowed to less than a dozen miles. And even if they run the gauntlet on that narrow passage of death they will come under a deluge of bombs from the Allied air fleets which are attacking every roadway or assemblage of troops.

Along with all this sensational development on the fighting fronts at last has come General de Gaulle's call to the people of France to rise against their oppressors. To me that is one of the great moments of the war. It symbolizes dramatically the rebirth of a great nation which Hitler thought he had crushed.

This uprising of the tortured civilians of France against the Germans can be a very terrible thing. It will be death striking from least expected directions. Just as the civilians of Warsaw are battling the invaders. Just as the slaves which Hitler imported into Germany to do his work now are beginning to strike under cloak of night.

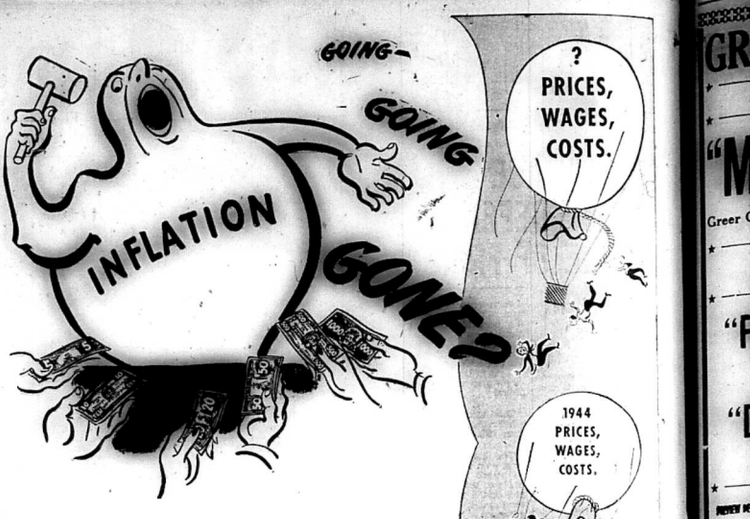
No Permits Needed For Hog Slaughtering

Ottawa, (C.P.) — The food administration of the Prices Board announced last week that after Aug. 21 farmers may slaughter hogs for sale without obtaining a slaughtering permit and may sell pork without having it stamped.

Board officials said the simplification of procedure was made possible because of the suspension of meat rationing and a "great" increase in the number of hog producers.



EVER walk into an auction and find yourself getting excited and wanting to bid . . . a victim of "auction fever"? Wartime conditions can breed "auction fever" if we let them. Everything is in short supply. Many more people are able to bid.

But . . . if prices are bid up . . . all our dollars will lose some of their value. Even necessities could get out of reach.

- What use is more money, if living costs go up still higher.
- What good are higher returns to business, if they are offset by higher costs.
- What does the farmer gain if higher farm prices lead to depression and low prices later.

We cannot continue a full war effort and prepare to meet the problems of the post-war period unless we maintain a stable and reasonable price level now.

DON'T BID AGAINST YOURSELF — DIG IN AND HOLD!

FOURTH FRONT MAY NOT BE COSTLY

BY GORDON BROWN
Associated Press Staff Writer

There are reasons to hope that Southern France can be wrested from the Germans without too costly a campaign.

German troops in the area, where partisan resistance has flamed strong and fierce, already were threatened with virtual isolation by the Allied drives from Normandy and Brittany to the heart of France and it was considered unlikely Hitler would have left any strong forces to be cut off so far from the Reich.

Bearing out this supposition were reports from the French - Spanish frontier soon after the Allies broke out of Normandy that the Nazis were pulling out of Southwestern France.

Even before the Normandy invasion it was generally believed that Southern France was not so heavily garrisoned as the northern sections which are much closer to Berlin. After the Normandy landings Hitler pulled several divisions from the south in a futile effort to halt the Allied drives.

As an indication of German weakness in the south-western area, for instance, several hundred Maquis raided Bayonne, which once had one of the strongest garrisons in the region, and dynamited a bridge.

Last part of France to come under Nazi occupation southern provinces have been partisan hotbeds, and they were counted on to aid, from the interior, the landings in the south.

Principal cities on the French Mediterranean coast are Nice, Cannes, Toulon, Marseilles, Avignon, Nimes, Montpellier, Cette, Beiers, Narbonne and Perpignan.

Until November, 1942, the southern coast of France was the softest part of the "underbelly" of Europe, but when the Allies landed in Africa Hitler moved in and presumably fortified the coast, although certainly not to the extent of Northern France, where fortifications proved much less formidable than pictured by German propaganda.

It is more than 700 airline miles from the Mediterranean coast of France to Berlin and if the Allies are forced to fight all along the way, the route would be difficult.

Almost the only natural avenue for an invasion from the south is the narrow, easily divided Rhone valley between the rugged Cevennes mountains on the west and the lofty Alps on the east. The route leads about 250 miles to the north before turning eastward toward Berlin. Such a route would have to contend with the one-time French Maginot Line which may have been converted by now into a German defence wall.

Another river valley leads to the Bay of Biscay. This is the valley of the Garonne which rises in a valley about fifty miles from the Mediterranean and empties into the Atlantic near Bordeaux.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 27TH, 1944

"ISRAEL'S FIRST KING"

Lesson Text: I Samuel 9: 15-21; 10: 25-27; 11: 12-15.

Israel experimented with several types of leaders, military leaders like Moses and Joshua; judges and prophets. They are now to embark on an experiment with still another type—Kings. Why the Israelites thought they must have a king is difficult to determine. It may have been just a natural development. They were now a settled people. They had lands. They had population. Military leaders were not now so essential. Judges and prophets had their own sphere of action. The growing complexity of an organized state would naturally add to the duties of prophets and judges. They would have enough to do without assuming political control. Or it may have been that these Hebrews were following the example of those around about them. Other nations had kings, so Israel must have a king, too. Whatever the reason the fact remains that Israel was now ready to discard its older types of leadership for that of a king.

Saul was chosen by Samuel. He was chosen from the smallest tribe, and seems to have been selected more for his physical appearance, rather than for any intellectual or spiritual endorsements. However, he started off well. Perhaps it was because of Samuel that he made so few initial mistakes. Naturally he met opposition right on the start. There were those who wondered just what qualifications he had for kingship. There were those who were jealous and coveted the position for themselves. As others, baser fellows, said "How can this man save us? — and they despised him and brought him no presents." Saul showed no bad or vindictive feeling towards them. He treated them generously. However, it was not long before Saul was superceded by David.

The position of kings at the present stage of our world's history, is none too popular. The one exception seems to be that of our own King. He is more deeply loved by the people than he has ever been, and his position is more secure than it might have been expected to be, amidst a storm and crisis which has wiped out so many of the kingly group. The unpopularity of kings is due in no small extent to the way in which in recent years those who have held the position in certain countries have abused their functions and paying scant heed to the needs of the common people.

What we are witnessing today is the rise of the common man — the little guy — as he has been called, and all over the world the little guy is fighting for a place in the sun, fighting for his rights, his right to health, security and only pursuit of happiness. In some instances he may be deceived; he is probably being definitely misled. Nevertheless, the upsurge of new life over all across the world is based on the hope of the common for a better deal.

There is no reason why the institutions of the common man should not be met under a kingship as well as under any other form of government. Given the right sort of king a ruler who can sit above the political storm and hold the confidence of all people democracy will work. Indeed democracy works in Great Britain as well as it does in the United States. The King has authority, actually he does not abuse it. Indeed in our present form of political set-up, if he should abuse it, the people would have something to say. To an outsider, the fact that we have a king might seem to be a negation of democracy. But those who live under The Union Jack know well enough that in the final analysis it is the people who rule—whether they be Conservatives, Liberals or Socialists. As a matter of fact a democratic form of government can operate under a kingship as well as under any other form given of course, the right spirit on the part of the king and the people.

The Israelites probably made a good move when they appointed a king. That choice was good for a time when Samuel, one of the best leaders Israel ever had, was presiding over the new appointee. Through his early days

The history of the kingship in Israel is none too happy. But that was because of the selfishness and arrogance of some of those who succeeded to the office. With a faith in God and in the fundamental rights of all people, the kingship can be a success and has been a success both in Israel and other nations.

HOLDEN, OF DESERONTO, ADDS BUYING TO THE SALE
The Jewish writers claim Adam was the first man. That he was alone in the Garden of Eden about 6,000 years ago and that the World was created at the time.
The Chinese have a history dating 3,000 years before Adam. Many forests are from ten to twenty thousand years old. The City of Thebes dates a million years ago. The Pubio Indian relic in Mexico dates long before that. Other evidence shows the World has been here and populated for hundreds of millions of years, and then some.
Had we been there we would have sympathized with Adam in his lonesomeness, because, we too, are alone in the prices we are giving on our merchandise. FRENCH ARMY RETURNS HOME, CHEERING

BY ROBERT C. MILLER
The French Army returned to France riding in American tanks—its soldiers laughing, shouting and crying without shame.
The French came ashore on the same foggy, windswept invasion beaches where the British and Americans landed a few months ago. They came back to the France many of them had not seen in more than four years — the France they left either as prisoners of the Germans or as refugees.
They are led by one of their greatest fighting men, wiry, nervous Brig. General Jacques LeClerc who took his pitifully small force of armor across the hot sands of the German-held Sahara desert from Lake Chad in 1943 to join General Sir Bernard Montgomery's Eighth Army forces.
There have been few homecomings in history like this one. These men in their red overseas caps — proud carry-over from the days when the French cavalry wore flying red capes into battle—came home to help France.
Some were so anxious to go ashore that they jumped overboard and swam to the beach, struggling onto the beaches with handsful of wet sand trickling through their fingers.
Others knelt quietly on the shore, offering silent prayers.
The tanks and halftracks which lumbered onto French soil had small Tricolors and the Cross of Lorraine painted on their sides. Each was labelled with such familiar French names as Ile de France, Valois, Tardenois, Santerre and Calvados. One unit had each of its Sherman tanks named after a Paris park.
Many men in this division are living under assumed names since they still have relatives in Occupied France and are fearful of German retribution. Others are escaped prisoners captured by the Nazis in the battle for France who came home by way of Spain, North Africa and England.
There were no Frenchmen to greet LeClerc when he led his troops ashore on the American beachhead, but citizens of liberated towns on the way to the front were there when the long column rolled down the highways.
Word of the French army's arrival spread like wildfire, and at each town, each village and crossroad the weary Frenchmen watching the unbelieving tear-filled eyes the sight many of them thought would never occur — the return of a French army to fight for its native land.
The troops, resplendent in their American GI outfits tried at first gaily at the United Britain song of British, but streams of tears trickled down their dusty, begrimed faces — and they laughed, laughed, waved away, wept with the civilians. All order disappeared in the joy of returning home.

OUTLOOK IN RUSSIA

BY HENRY CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer
(Who has just returned to the United States from Russia)

The people of Soviet Russia, who have lived through 27 years of revolution, civil and foreign wars, famine, five-year plans and bloody purges, face at least another decade of toil before they will be able to relax and enjoy themselves.
An important and intriguing question for the post-war world is: What does the Soviet Government purpose to do domestically?
I understand, on strong authority, that the answer is: The Soviet Government envisages two more five-year plans designed to build up heavy industry and capital goods, rather than light industry and consumers' goods.
When the first of the revised five-year plans will begin depends on when the war will end. Despite the rapid progress of the Red Army's summer campaign, there is little over-optimism in Moscow about an early end to the war. The Russians thought it would end in 1940 and it didn't. Since then they have been chary about predictions.
One Soviet authority, however, in as good a position as anyone to peer into an admittedly cloudy crystal ball, has estimated that, barring the unexpected, such as the next bomb actually hitting Adolf Hitler, it will take until next summer to destroy Germany militarily.
When that has been accomplished, the Red Army men who have fought on the fronts already for three years, the Partisans who have worked in the German lines, and the people who have lived under or away from Nazi occupation, will return to the hard work of long-range planning.
The post-war five-year plans, as now contemplated, will be designed to repair, and once more to build up, the productive power of the country. Despite the largely successful evacuation of factories to the East in 1941, and the development of industries in and beyond the Urals, which have helped to make the Red Army more than a match for the Wehrmacht, the Soviet economic system has suffered heavily from the war.
To take a single, but major example, Soviet steel production, which had risen to about 22,000,000 tons a year before the war, now has fallen to about 12,000,000, due principally to German occupation and devastation in the Donetz Basin.
Under the two proposed five-year plans, this production would be stepped up to 60,000,000 tons.
While the Russians will be making steel, the building machines make machines, they will still be going without any large amount of luxury products, or even of comforts which are considered customary in western countries.

ALLIED HARMONY SECURE

The relations between the Western Allies and Russia are the subject of an interesting despatch by Henry Cassidy, Associated Press correspondent, who has just returned from Moscow.
Some slightly sour notes have been heard lately in the symphony of Soviet-Allied relations, but the best Moscow observers believe that beneath them, the harmony is sound and secure.
Temporary disappointment over the scope of the Allied invasion of France, occasional irritation by Allied press criticism of the Soviet Union and lack of co-ordination in treatment of such problems as the future of Poland all have been displayed recently in Moscow.
Most qualified Moscow observers consider them as inevitable difficulties in a new, great and difficult collaboration.
They see other signs such as general cordiality in Moscow and correctness of the Russians abroad, to bolster their own convictions that the Soviet Union can co-operate with the rest of the United Nations throughout the war, and will continue to co-operate afterwards.
To take the sour notes first:
1. The second front.—After the Allies landed in France, the immediate Soviet public reaction was to wait and see, and to be told, what it meant. After the first week of the campaign in the west, they were told by Marshal Stalin in a statement praising the operation highly.
Some public disappointment set in during July when the Allies were confined to the narrow Cherbourg peninsula. Individual Russians began to compare the slowness of the Allied advance with the speed of their own advance toward Germany.
I understand, however, that Marshal Stalin was informed from the start of the magnitude of the Allied attack and of the number of troops landed successively, and was more than pleased. Now that the Allies have broken loose, Soviet public enthusiasm for the second front can be expected to mount again.
2. The Press.— Perhaps the most discordant note is sounded by Soviet displeasure with what individual Allied newspapers say from time to time.
Both foreign residents and Allied visitors in Moscow have been repeatedly impressed by Soviet officials and citizens for what they consider unwarranted criticism of Russia at a time when complete united effort is needed to win the war.
3. Poland. — The current negotiations for a united Polish regime began with consultation, but no apparent agreement, between the Soviet Union and other united nations.
A number of notes are known to have been exchanged, but when the first delegation of underground Poles came to Moscow, headed by Edward Osuska-Morawski, it was received at the Kremlin, but not officially at the United States or British Embassies. The Polish National Committee of Liberation was established with Soviet recognition but without that of the United States or Britain.
On the side of harmony, Allied representatives in Moscow have been encouraged particularly by the personal attitude of the Soviet leaders toward Allied relations.
Foreign Commissar Vlacheslav Molotov, when receiving congratulations on Red Army successes, has repeatedly associated the Allies with these gains and emphasized the word "together" in talking of an end to the war.
Marshal Stalin, in expressing appreciation for Allied support of the Red Army and operations in the west, has been careful on several occasions to include Britain and the United States equally in accounting for the progress.
The Russians seem to see no insurmountable obstacles in the way of future co-operation. Before I left Moscow, I was a guest at a luncheon given by the press department of the foreign commissariat. My Russian hosts proposed toasts to another meeting in Berlin.

UNDERGROUND OPERATIONS IN SOUTH FRANCE

BY ERIC HAWKINS
Combined action of the Allied landing forces on the Mediterranean coast and the French resistance army of southern France, was planned in detail weeks ago, according to a French woman who left Marseilles for London recently, after playing a leading part in the underground movement on the Riviera.
She is forty-six year old Emelienne Moreau, who wears the French Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre and the British Military Medal for heroism in the last war. At the age of 17 she helped British soldiers in the battle of Loos, tended the wounded under fire and shot two Germans who were approaching her secret first aid station.
After four years of active resistance in this war, she is now on her way to Algiers as the third woman member of the Consultative Assembly.
The entire resistance movement of Southern France was keyed up for action, timed with the first landings of Allied troops," Mme. Moreau said.
The patriot forces, who will be commanded on the spot by General —name cut by censor—himself under the command of General Joseph Pierre Koenig, have been eagerly awaiting the signal to go. When I left Marseilles recently, everything was in readiness for sabotage operations, co-ordinated with the landings.
"For many months they have been receiving precise orders from the supreme command for sabotage operations linked with Allied bombings. In this way the whole region, on both sides of the Rhone Valley, and to borders of Switzerland and Italy, have been systematically prepared for the landings."
Mme. Moreau was in close touch with the Maquis forces of the Savoy mountains, who form an important part of the southern patriotic movement and who are now also well organized and commanded, although still inadequately armed.
"Their spirit, however, is magnificent and now that they have the chance they have been waiting a long time for, they will fight like tigers to help the Allied forces to rid their country of the Boches," she said.
Mme. Moreau, who between the wars was a militant socialist and secretary of the Women's Socialist Federation of the Pas de Calais, lived in the coal mining district of Lens until late in 1942, when the Germans discovered her identity and activities. She was then hunted through France until she reached Marseilles, and lived there in disguise.
She said that French patriots will demand extreme punishment for the men of Vichy and for the men who have served in Joseph Darnand's militia, causing the arrest, torture and death of thousands of Frenchmen.
Authoritative French quarters in London confirmed Mme. Moreau's optimistic view of the efficiency of General Koenig's southern forces.
"They will be able to give more direct aid to the Allies in southeastern France than in Normandy, where the Germans were very much better equipped to oppose them," those sources said.
"From their strongholds in the Maritime Alps and Savoy mountains their action will be invaluable to the Allied troops in harassing the Germans in the Rhone Valley and possibly in closing the narrows between Valence and Lyons.
"This would deprive the German troops of their shortest cut to their line of communication, through Central France with General Von Kluge in the north. Their only other way is the long, roundabout route leading west of the Massif central and then to the Loire. This would involve disastrous delay and a dispersal of forces which would facilitate attacks from patriot formations in the Massif central region."
General Koenig's men in southeastern France are still in control of large areas in what is now the rear of the German front, facing the Riviera invading troops. They hold the mountainous Vercors region around Grenoble and Valence, as well as a great part of the Ardeche department immediately west of the Rhone valley. This gives them command of several passages of the Rhone, which the Germans will need either for retreat or for reinforcements and supplies. It also enables them to maintain in a state of disruption the railroad and other communications essential to the Germans in the southeast.

Railway Workers Win Six Cents Per Hour Boost

Ottawa.—The National War Labor Board last week announced a decision awarding from 190,000 to 175,000 Canadian railway workers an increase of six cents an hour.
The board's decision was given in an application by railway unions for conciliation of Canadian and United States rates paid railway men in running trains operating to increases of approximately from 25 to 32 cents an hour—and a straight increase of 32 cents an hour to other railway workers.
The board turned down flatly the union's contention that railway workers in Canada should be paid the same rates as in the United States, but said an investigation showed employes in other industries in Canada had received increases in excess of those paid railway workers.
The board's award is the main case affecting the 18 unions is retroactive to September 15, 1943.
Similar increases were given in two other decisions announced simultaneously. In an application by the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Workers (A.F.L.) the award is retroactive to March 1, 1943, and in an application by the Brotherhood of Railway Employes (C.C.L.) to May 25, 1943.

MARRIAGES

STEVENS — NORRIS — At Westminster - Central United Church, Toronto, on Saturday, August 19, 1944, by Rev. Dr. A. J. Wilson, Helen Grace Norris, Reg.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Norris, Napanee, to Francis Melville Stevens, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stevens, Uxbridge.

ALLIES AGREE ON PLANS FOR OCCUPATION

Washington, (B.U.P.) — President Roosevelt told a Washington news conference that a general understanding had been reached between Great Britain and the United States and Russia on the occupation of Germany.
The President, in response to questions, also said he expected to confer soon with Prime Minister Winston Churchill, but he would not go into details.
Roosevelt made this statement when reporters asked him to elaborate on an interview during his recent trip in which he said that the Allies would not allow Germany or Japan to quit the war until their homelands had been invaded and completely occupied by our forces.
He was asked whether any definite understanding on German occupation existed among this country and Russia and the British.
The President said they had talked about it; it was going along all right and there was a general understanding but this understanding does not yet involve specific details.
Asked whether sections to be occupied by each nation were part of the details, he said, yes. He affirmed that the European Advisory Commission had worked on this matter.
Asked whether a similar understanding existed with China about occupation of Japan, the President said there was nothing on paper. But he recalled his talks with Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek and said he thought there would be no problems involved in reaching such an understanding.

WHAT OF PETAIN AND LAVAL?

BY RALPH HEINZEN
(The author of the following dispatch was for many years a United Press correspondent in Paris until he was arrested and interned by the Germans in Vichy. He is a recognized authority on the French and France.)
The powerful pincers the Allies are applying to France promises to eliminate quickly the Vichy government and this raises the question of what is to become of its two leading personalities — Marshal Henri Philippe Petain and Pierre Laval, chief of staff.
Laval is known to have prepared for the future. Last March, when the American diplomatic mission in Vichy passed through Lisbon on its way home from fifteen months internment in Germany, its members learned that he had staked a hideaway for himself in Portugal where he hopes to be safe from the wrath of French patriots.
Even then, he had read the handwriting on the wall. A law partner of his son-in-law, Count Rene de Chambrun had gone to Portugal and leased an estate in Laval's name for three years. It is north of Lisbon near Cintra, on the sea and surrounded by high walls. Laval has close ties with Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain which may facilitate his passage across Spain into Portugal.
As for Petain:
Of one thing I am almost certain —he will not flee France under a Nazi flag. Of Laval's refusal to flee, I am not so sure. He may, at the last moment, prefer to cross into Germany rather than take a chance of the Portugal hide-away proving invisible. After the French government moved to Bordeaux in June, 1940, Petain told me that he was determined never to leave continental France for North Africa. The government then was debating whether to flee to North Africa and continue the war.
"My place is right here in France with the French people," he said then. "I am equally determined not to return to Paris until the Germans have evacuated the capital. It is my opinion that the French government must not take refuge under any foreign flag."
His feeling then would seem to apply now. And he may depend on his years and the veneration in which the French people once held him as the hero of Verdun to preserve him from the consequences of his mistrule.

RECEPTION HELD FOR MR. AND MRS. MOSS

On Thursday, August 10th, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Moss entertained about forty guests at a garden party in honour of their son Oren and his bride the former Rosaline Hannah, whose marriage took place recently. The guests were received by Mrs. C. Moss who wore a brown figured sheer dress and by the bride's mother, Mrs. E. Hannah, dressed in beige crepe. The bride looked charming in her wedding dress of rose crepe trimmed with gold embroidery. Besides many guests from Tamworth and vicinity friends were present from Kingston, Ottawa and Toronto. The guests were entertained with music and singing. Mrs. Pearl Sayers and Mrs. S. T. Wagar were at the piano and Mrs. C. Lochhead in community singing. Mrs. Lochhead also rendered two appropriate solos in her usual very acceptable manner. A very dainty lunch was served on the lawn after which the guests were invited to view the many useful and beautiful gifts the young couple had received during the evening.

On behalf of himself and wife, Mr. Oren Moss expressed his thanks to all present for their gifts and kind wishes thus bringing to a close a very pleasant evening.

REV. G. M. CHIDLEY SOMEWHAT BETTER

Rev. G. M. Chidley's friends in Trinity Church and in the town and district will be pleased to know that on Tuesday his condition was considered much more favorable than on Sunday.

During the latter part of last week he had showed steady improvement, but on Sunday he suffered a set back, which caused considerable alarm. However, on Monday and Tuesday, there was a decided turn for the better, which it is hoped will be maintained.

Mrs. Chidley and Nursing Sister Isabel Chidley, R.C.A.F., are remaining at Kingston General Hospital, with Mr. Chidley, and the other members of the family are almost daily visitors at the hospital.

At the present only members of the family are allowed to visit Mr. Chidley.

WEDDING BELLS

NICKEL - YOUNG

A lovely midsummer wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Young, South Napanee, August 14th, when their youngest daughter, Lois Jean, became the bride of Corpl. Howard Gordon Nickel, R.C.A.F., Deseronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nickel, Empress, Alberta.

The youthful bride, given in marriage by her father, was in a wedding gown of white chiffon over taffeta with lace inserts at waist and yoke. Her finger tip veil fell from a halo of white rosebuds. She carried a bouquet of American beauty roses and maiden hair fern. The bride's attendants were her sister, Mrs. Bernier Morgan, as matron-of-honor gowned in powder blue chiffon, made similarly to the bride's dress, and wearing a tiara of white rosebuds. Miss Ilee Laird, bridesmaid, was in pale pink taffeta and tiara of rosebuds. Both carried old-fashioned nosegays of roses. Little Wanda Young, niece of the bride, and Nancy Cooke, were flower girls, gowned alike in full-skirted white taffeta dresses, made with sweetheart necklines and clusters of white roses in their hair. They carried arm bouquets of gladioli and snapdragons.

L.A.C. Harry Bastram assisted the groom.

The ceremony, was performed by Rev. Burton, assisted by Rev. Kelly, beneath a canopy of white streamers centred by wedding bells and banked by huge baskets of summer flowers. Mrs. Kelly played the wedding music.

Following the reception, Corpl and Mrs. Nickel left amid showers of confetti for Ottawa, the bride travelling in powder blue silk jersey with white accessories. On their return they will reside in Napanee.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. Lavergne, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Nickel, Mr. and Mrs. C. Gilroy, Mrs. Bowers of Belleville Mrs. A. Lewis and Mrs. H. Punchard, Adolphustown, Mr. and Mrs. C. Thompson, Deseronto.

Samuel Miller, an old resident of Amherst Island, passed away on Wednesday last, after a long illness. He was in his 75th year.

The late Mr. Miller was for many years Reeve of the Township and in 1921 was Warden of the County. He took a keen interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the Island and it was through his untiring efforts that the Ferry came into being. He was known as the Father of the Ferry.

His funeral was held on Saturday, August 19th, and was largely attended. The floral tributes were many, testifying to the high esteem in which he was held.

He leaves to murn his wife, formerly Hannah Tugwell, one son, Douglas Arlene and Mrs. Murphy, of Toronto, and Mrs. Maurice Hogeboom, also five sons, Kenneth, Douglas Wilfred and Donald, all of the Island, and John, of Kansas. Two sisters, Mrs. R. J. Marshall and Mrs. Robert Wilson, and one brother, in Toronto, also survive.

The funeral service was held in St. Paul's Church, and was conducted by Rev. R. K. Earls. The pall-bearers were Messrs. David Caughey, Frank Fleming, Wm. Anderson Tom Glenn, Robert Glenn and Harold McCaugherty.

FAREWELL PRESENTATION TO MR. AND MRS. LINDSAY, BY NEWBURGH FRIENDS

On Sunday evening, after the church service, friends representing the various organizations of The United Church and community at Newburgh assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay. The first part of the evening was spent in singing led by Mrs. Herrington, Miss Bessie King and Mr. Vernon Simkins. Worthy of mention was a duet sung by Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Towns. The real purpose of the gathering, however, was to express to Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay who are about to leave the community, appreciation for their interest in the activities of the church during their stay in Newburgh. An address by Mr. Vernon Simkins, on behalf of the Young People's Class and Mr. Lindsay, who has been the teacher for the past year, was presented with a book, "The Apostle," by Miss Bessie Baker. Rev. Mr. Herrington then gave an address of appreciation representing the other church organizations. He spoke of the many friends Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay had made, their splendid contribution to the work of the church, and the regret so many have expressed that they are leaving the community. He also expressed the goodwill and best wishes for success and happiness in their new work and home in Bocaygeon. They were then presented with a blue satin comforter and a floral design sofa cushion. Those presenting the gifts were Mrs. Casada, for the W.A., Miss Margaret Cameron for the W.C.T.U., and Mrs. Stuart Moore for the W.M.S.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay expressed their thanks to the gathering.

Prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Herrington and a hymn "Blest be the Tie That Binds" was sung. Light refreshments were served, and after a pleasant social hour good-byes were exchanged and everyone went home feeling regretful that such fine citizens as the Lindsays were about to leave the community.

Set Open Season For Partridge

An open season for partridge in that portion of Ontario north and east of and including the Counties of Bruce, Grey, Dufferin, Simcoe and Ontario, and south of the French and Mattawa Rivers and Lake Nipissing and east of the west boundary of the districts of Algoma and Cochrane, from October 7th to 14th, inclusive and from November 6th to 11th, inclusive, was announced on Monday by Minister of Game and Fisheries G. H. Dunbar. A bag limit of five per day and not exceeding 25 birds for the entire season, was set.

Mr. Dunbar said departmental reports indicate that over a large portion of the Province there is a material increase in grouse population compared with last year. The mild winter and exceptionally favorable hatching season this spring contributed greatly to improved conditions. Unfortunately, throughout Northwestern Ontario the report on grouse is not sufficiently encouraging to warrant an open season.

WALLACE'S GOOD SPICES MAKE GOOD PICKLES!

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! We are really doing a thorough inspection job during canning operations. Safeguarding the food that is being stored in jars means rigid inspection of each step in home preserving. Vegetables require special attention.

If you did not can any of the vegetables at the beginning of the season you may want to store some of the second crop in sealers. Although acid vegetables such as, pickled beets, red peppers and tomatoes and readily increased in boiling water bath, the non-acid vegetables should be done in a pressure cooker. However, if you have small jars with a perfect seal, success may be assured by the water bath method if every precaution is used.

Important canning rules for the safety of vegetables are:—

1 To permit a perfect seal the jar rim and top must be smooth, even and no nicks no imperfections.
2 Equipment— jars, measuring cup, knife spoons, funnel, two large bowls, saucepan processor or deep kettle, tea towels, brush and box of salt — should be assembled before the 'canning bee.'
3 Wash jars in rich suds and get them clean using a good brush. Rinse the jars thoroughly.
4 Sterilize by placing a clean towel in the bottom of a pan and putting the jars on their sides with matched glass tops beside each one, cover with hot water and boil fifteen minutes. Leave in hot water until needed.
5 Thorough inspection of vegetables necessary. Discard any old, blighted, bruised or ones with decay.
6 Washed vegetables get a three minutes precooking. This shrinks them and sets colour. Have the water boiling. Time the 'boil.'
7 Now hot vegetables go into hot jars. Allow one inch at the top of each jar when you can peas and corn. Use the cooking water to fill the jars. Add one teaspoon salt to each pint jar. Wipe off the top of jar — one pesky bit will keep the jar from sealing.
8 Dip the rubber ring into hot water having soaked them in a cup of warm water with a teaspoon of baking soda in it for five minutes or so) and place on jar. On with the lid. Screw band down tightly; then loosen (turn back one quarter inch).
9 Carefully lower jars into hot water bath in a kettle with a wire rack in the bottom; add more hot water to cover two inches over the jars. Jars should be one inch apart. Cover the processor.
10 Count cooking time when the water actually begins to boil. Process corn three hours in water bath. Process sweet peppers for 45 minutes. Process tomatoes 20 minutes.
11 When time is up lift rack with jars from water. If no rack, dip some water and use a thick cloth to lift them out. Screw band tight. Cool jars away from draft then turn upside down to test for leakage.

THE QUESTION BOX

In answer to many queries about preserving vegetables by salting, we give the following directions, stressing thorough cleanliness of vegetables, drying after washing with absorbent towels the use of dairy salt and a cool storage place.

Salting Method For Green Beans, Peppers and Cauliflower

Vegetables such as green beans, peppers, and cauliflower that do not contain enough juice to form their own brine can be preserved by being covered with brine.

Wash, dry and weight the vegetables. Cut green beans into inch lengths; separate cauliflower into flowerets; leave cucumbers and peppers whole. Pack the prepared vegetables loosely into stone jar, leaving space for brine to cover them. Estimate the amount of brine you'll need to fill.

To make the brine, use three and one-quarter cups of salt to six quarts of water ('common' or 'coarse' salt or dairy salt is better here than fine table salt). Pour brine over vegetables, and cover jar with plate or pie plate right side up. Weight down with tin can filled with water, and one pound salt for every ten pounds of vegetables used. (This is to bring the brine up to its original strength). At the end of the week, add one-quarter pound salt, and repeat the process every week until five weeks have been marked off on the calendar. Now your vegetables should be cured.

One thing to remember when adding salt is to place it on top of the jars so that it will dissolve slowly without sinking to the bottom. Salt should not touch the vegetables. Skim off the scum as it forms.

Clip the following method to desalt since you will not be using these vegetables for several months.

To freshen vegetables cured in brine, place them in a big kettle, cover with cold water, and heat slowly to lukewarm, stirring frequently. Pour off water, and repeat process several times until vegetables are only slightly salty. Or soak several hours in several waters, until they

ADVICE IN CARE OF PEACHES GIVEN TO HOUSEWIVES

Some timely advice to the housewives of Ontario regarding the selection and care of peaches for canning is given by E. F. Palmer, Director of the Ontario Horticultural Experimental Farm at Vineland where studies of this subject have been made over a period of years.

Peaches picked for shipment to distant markets, says Mr. Palmer, are usually too firm for immediate consumption. Where the consumer buys supplies from the retailer, many of the peaches may still be too firm, that is, they may not yet have reached their full lusciousness. In each case where peaches are bought, it may prove helpful if the consumer would observe the following:

1. Remove all peaches from the container.
2. Place them on a shelf or table in dry, airy place at ordinary room temperature.
3. Examine daily, using those fruits which have reached their maximum flavour and juiciness, for dessert or for canning.
4. Mould or brown rot develops more rapidly where humidity is high and where there is a lack of air circulation.
5. It is better not to place peaches in a refrigerator for longer keeping unless they have first softened.

Varieties of peaches suitable for canning-and for dessert purposes will be harvested in volume during the period from August 15th to September 15th.

The Growers Merchandising Committee appointed by the Niagara Peninsula Growers' Association, supports these recommendations to aid consumers and at the same time urges a wider use of nature's most luscious fruit.

Mother and father were discussing the present-day situation, the war rationing, etc. Little Tommy sat listening and looking very thoughtful. At last he exclaimed: Muvver, do you think they will ration the soap?

MONTGOMERY'S STRATEGY

Events in France have demonstrated that the critics of General Montgomery's so-called caution had jumped to too hasty a conclusion.

The capture of Caen and the five-mile advance southward which followed was intended to be the start of a break into the open country down the Falaise road. This would have turned the German right flank and would also have opened up great possibilities further afield.

This attempt failed partly on account of the weather, but General Montgomery like the Russian commanders in this war, has constantly shifted the direction of his pressure from point to point, probing for weak spots; he has done so in the knowledge that his opponent was unwilling to maintain an even strength all along the front and unable, even if willing, to switch concentrations to threatened sectors beyond a very limited extent.

The attack was accordingly shifted to the American sector. Here after several days of hard fighting in the St. Lo area, General Bradley struck suddenly and with great effect near-er to the coast. Lessay and Periers were captured and the American armour and mobile infantry poured through into the open country in the German rear, quickly overunning Coutances and Avranches, and reaching the base of the Brittany peninsula.

Without pausing the thrust was pressed on across the base of the peninsula through Rennes to the sea, and westwards into the peninsula, and eastwards in the direction of Le Mans and Paris.

The speed of the advance took the Germans by surprise; British Canadian attacks from Caumont and from Caen added still further to the uncertainty, and it was not until August 6th that he was able to group his troops and attempt counter-attack towards Avranches against the flank of the American corridor.

Two women [illegible] shelter while an enemy plane was droning overhead.

Said one of them: "Good grief, my husband is still in bed. I must go to wake him."

Don't worry," said the other, let sleep, if he can."

Sleep, said the first woman, "I don't know anything about it. I put drops on him before he went to bed for months.

5,000 ONTARIO WOMEN
ARE URGENTLY NEEDED TO PICK AND CAN THEM

Thousands of tons of tomatoes, corn, pears and peaches will be ripe in two weeks in the fields and orchards of Ontario. These fruits and vegetables represent Canned Foods which are vitally necessary to our Invading Troops and to Canadian homes in the coming year.

5,000 Ontario housewives and other unemployed women and girls, from 16 to 60, will again have to assist in picking and in Ontario canning factories if these precious foods are to be saved. The response of these Ontario women last year was all that averted the loss of much of the 1943 canning crops and a consequent shortage.

There is a greater shortage of help this year. More women and girls are employed in munitions now than ever before. Many of them usually worked in canning factories in other years. They must be replaced.

You will have to do your part in the next 12 weeks. Offer your services now. Give every hour you can spare.

Apply to the Superintendent of the nearest canning factory. If you don't live near a factory, see the Agricultural Advisor at your nearest Selective Service office for full information. Or write, phone or call in person at Farm Service Force, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

No Working Permit is required for this necessary job.

Current hourly wages will be paid. The work is not hard. Do Your Part. Act NOW—Today, before you forget.

Students and other youth of Ontario have volunteered and been organized to harvest abundant crops of Tomatoes, Corn, Peaches, etc., but MORE Picking Help is needed and CANNING FACTORIES NEED HELP.

Housewives and other unemployed women and girls of Ontario are strongly urged to offer their services for six to eight weeks to save these crops from waste. No experience is necessary. Current wages will be paid and good living quarters arranged for if necessary.

YOU ARE STRONGLY URGED to offer your services at once. NOW! Work will start about August 20th. There is no question that poultry, fed "Miracle" Laying Mash produce more eggs . . . both in and out of season. This has been proved countless times, and many poultrymen report egg increases up to 200%.

"Miracle" Laying Mash does the job better because it contains top quality ingredients, scientifically blended in just the right proportions. Why not put your flock on this mash now, and prove that poultry pays more the "Miracle" way.

DORLAND

Dorland, August 19. — The showers during Thursday afternoon and night couldn't the air and revived wilted vegetation, if they didn't reach to any great depth. The recent extreme heat and drought was becoming serious as the war supply on some farms was running low and pasture and late crops were rapidly drying up. The bulk of the threshing is completed and the crop is not as large as was hoped for in the early season. Tomato picking is under way but will only be about half a crop.

A meeting of the Woman's Association was held in the school room of the United Church on Wednesday evening. Plans were discussed for a supper, to be given later in the season.

Fetching services will be withdrawn on August 27th and September 3rd, when Rev. K. J. Crawford will be away on holidays.

Miss Jean Lester has returned, after spending a week visiting in Ottawa.

The steel ferry at Glenora was on the dry docks in Kingston this week receiving repairs.

V

EBENEZER

Ebenezer, August 18. — The W. A. held its monthly meeting on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Ed. Hewitt, with a fine attendance. All were pleased to see Mrs. (Rev.) Craig and Marilyn, of Morrisburg, who were visiting friends at Forest Mills.

The recent variety shower held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Web. McTaggart, in honor of their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Burgess, of Port Colborne, was well attended, and a fine time was had by all.

Mr. Pringle, of Port Colborne, and Miss Madeline McTaggart, of Marlbank, spent a few days at the McTaggart home.

Mrs. R. B. Thompson and Mrs. W. Sharon, of Napanee, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Denison on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Wood and family are camping at Beaver Lake.

Our community was greatly shocked on Saturday evening when it became known that Mrs. Hiram Abbott had passed away sometime during the afternoon in her home where she resided alone. The deceased, who was in indifferent health, was highly esteemed by her friends and neighbors, and her passing leaves another broken link in the chain of older associations.

Lois McConnell, who has joined the staff of the Royal Bank, Odessa, spent the week end at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wilson, of Toronto, were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Denison and family.

Don Beckett, of Tamworth, spent the week end with Maurice McLeod.

LENNOX DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTE COUNTY RALLY

The Lennox District Women's Institute Rally was held on Friday August 18th, at the Agricultural Room, Napanee, under the leadership of Mrs. Clarence Hayes, from the Department of Agriculture. Mrs. Haggerty, the District President, presided and introduced the speaker, whose subject was 'Parliament Procedure."

Mrs. Hayes, in addition to being a fluent speaker has the rare gift of putting her audience completely at their ease. She invited comments and questions and because of her pleasing personality, these came freely and many knotty points were straightened out.

Mrs. Hayes began her address by saying that laxity of procedure is antagonistic to correct procedure. The two principles underlying Parliamentary procedure are common courtesy and common sense.

Five basic rules to go by are:

1. Only one subject may be dealt with at a time.
2. Every proposal presented for consideration is entitled to full and fair discussion.
3. The rights of all members are equal.
4. The will of the majority must be obeyed and the rights of the minority preserved.
5. All deliberations should be directed toward the best interests of the group as a whole

In explanation of the latter part of Rule 4, re the preservation of the rights of the minority, the speaker said the contrary vote should always be counted and placed on record.

After a meeting has been called to order all remarks must be addressed to the Chair. The chairman must maintain order and the members should give full co-operation. The roll call following the opening exercises should be either educational or inspirational. A sample of the latter kind is "What am I most thankful for?" Members should contribute gladly their share of mental food. A well answered roll call augurs well for a successful meeting. The minutes that come next need not be written in flowery language but should be a bare factual or skeleton account. In some instances it might be advisable to preserve data of certain speeches for future reference. On the other hand, press reports of meetings should be vital and interesting. The secretary should not move the adoption of the minutes. However, at the District Annual, it is in order for the Conveners and Financial Secretary to move adoption of reports.

In making a motion, a member first secures the floor, states the motion and may add a few words in explanation. If there is no seconder the motion is dropped. If it is seconded, the President states the motion again and discussion can now be started. The motion may be referred to committee, deferred for action or placed on the table. After a reasonable time for discussion, the President must say 'Are you ready?' If the affirmative is indicated, the motion is stated once again and the vote is taken. The President declares it carried or lost. Amendments can take place in discussion and can: (1) Add to, (2) Strike out, (3) Strike out and substitute. Secretaries should be very careful not to alter the wording of a motion, when recording it.

Committee can be formed by the Members or the President. The nominating committee is the only one which cannot be named by the president. Nominations can be undertaken by: (1) Nominative committee, (2) Informal ballot (3) From the floor. It should be noted that a nominative committee is not conclusive, only advisory. The chairman must always enquire if there are any further nominations from the floor. This is a demonstration of the working of democracy.

A good president delegates responsibility to committees and merely takes the helm.

Discussing duties of members, Mrs. Hayes called for suggestions from the floor and the following ten rules were drawn up:

1. To vote on all questions coming up for discussion.
2. To answer the roll call.
3. To take part in discussions.
4. To be willing to accept office.
5. To attend regularly and on time.
6. To be co-operative.
7. To remember our creed.
8. To understand and to support the principles of democratic citizenship.
9. To cultivate increased pride in our organization.
10. To be prepared to add something of value to each meeting.

If members would bring a smile to the meetings instead of pouring a tale of woe into the first receptive ear, the atmosphere of a meeting would be immeasurably warmer and more friendly. Each should come prepared to give as well as receive mental food.

The reluctance of members to assume responsibility of office is not confined to this organization but is met in all walks of life. Refusing responsibility of office is like refusing to support democracy. Every day of our lives we are called on to support democratic institutions. For instance, the church, the mother of all democracy; schools, etc. All school boards should include one or two women. The care of the child is essentially a woman's job. Show interest in schools and attend the school board meetings. Democracy depends on individuals and in order to function, must have leaders. Lack of education need not be an excuse for refusing leadership. The best educated person can make mistakes. Nor is it a question of not being as able as somebody else. Each one has something different to contribute to leadership. A gift of oratory is not necessary. Ideas are all that count, words will naturally follow. Sincerity and brevity are the soul of effective public speech.

Mrs. Hayes' closing remarks dealt with our opportunities for reconstruction after the war. The Women's Institute has tried to preserve all the good of the past and has a stronger challenge than ever before to live up to its motto "For Home and Country" and for a better, greater and happier to-morrow.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT NEWS WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

In order that reports of organizations may be printed the week following the dates on which the meetings are held, we find it necessary to request that all copy be in our office not later than Saturday morning. We ask for the co-operation of the reporters, so that we may continue to be of service. — Editor.

EBENEZER W. A.

The regular monthly meeting of Ebenezer W. A. was held on Wednesday, August 16th, at the home of Mrs. Ed. Hewitt, with a good attendance of members and visitors. As usual, a quilt was quilted for our war work. The devotional period opened by singing the National Anthem followed by a hymn and the Lord's Prayer, repeated in unison. Mrs. H. Brown read the scripture lesson. Roll call was answered by a verse of scripture. A reading was given by Mrs. James Whiteman and Mrs. Elwood Brown sang a solo. It was decided to wait until October to pack the boxes for the boys overseas. The members will donate articles for the boxes. A quilting was arranged to be held in the church basement on August 30th.

The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and the Mizpah benediction. A social half-hour followed during which the hostess served a delicious lunch.

Q. I bought a used car on August 10 and was able to sell it two days later. Now someone tells me I cannot buy another used car to replace it. Is that correct?

A. Yes. Under the used car order of the Prices Board no individual may buy more than one used passenger car in any calendar year, unless he owned five cars or more last year when he is allowed to buy one for every five so owned.

-:-

Q. As a sportsman, I am anxious to obtain some of the cartridges and shot shells which are to be made available this year. How do I go about it?

A. You should apply to your Local Ration Board before September 30 and also present both your gun registration certificate and your ration book or ration card.

Q. It seems to me ridiculous to retain rationing of tea and coffee when the existing allowances seem more than enough for so many households. Is there no way in which the nuisance of having to tender coupons for these goods can be eliminated?

A. The authorities have the rationing of tea and coffee under constant review and you may be certain that as soon as the elimination of such rationing is practicable, it will be withdrawn.

Q. Is there any prospect of any early resumption of meat rationing?

A. Representatives of the Prices Board have stated that there is little likelihood of it being resumed during the present year. However, the next issue of ration books will contain more meat coupons to guard against eventualities.

Q. I am anxious to obtain a hot air furnace for installation in the house I am building. How can one be procured?

A. You may make application to any office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, provided you hold a permit from the Controller of Construction.

NEWBURGH HIGH SCHOOL RE-OPENS SEPT. 18

The Newburgh Board of Education has decided not to open the Newburgh High School until Monday, September 18th because of the large number of students engaged in farm work.

The Board has engaged two new teachers, Mr. J. W. Griffith, as Principal and Miss E. Langman as assistant teacher. The other teachers, who have been on the staff previously, are Miss Charlotte McSherry and Mrs. Edna Joyce.

REV. DR. WILSON AT TRINITY CHURCH LAST SUNDAY

On Sunday, August 27th, Rev. Dr. A. J. Wilson, Editor of The United Church Observer, and former minister of St. Andrew's Church, Napanee, was the preacher at both services in Trinity United Church.

At the morning service, Mr. R. L. Miller, Sr., was the soloist.

Next Sunday, Rev. Dr. H. A. Kent, Principal of Queen's Theological College, Kingston, will be the speaker. In the evening Rev. W. S. Dingman, Napanee, will preach.

RATION BOOK NO. 5 WILL BE ISSUED ABOUT OCTOBER 14

Sugar Supplies Said to be Scarce

Ottawa, Aug. 28. (C.P.) — The Prices Board announced Saturday that Ration Book No. 5 will be distributed to the Canadian public the week of October 14-21, and said coupons will be included in the new book to cover "emergencies that may arise."

K. W. Taylor, co-ordinator of the Foods Administration, said the situation regarding rationed commodities was examined regularly every few months to determine their position in the light of any new development. A study now was being made of the preserves ration picture to see what action should be taken should the sugar supply situation become worse.

Mr. Taylor said he believed the sugar situation in 1945 was likely to be "tough." However, crop prospects could not be accurately forecast until about the end of the year. Europe was likely to require large allocations of sugar out of the 1945 crop.

The board's announcement said it was generally felt that it would be wiser to reduce the quota of sugar to industrial users than to cut the regular ration to consumers.

Officials said the butter situation was unlikely to become any better. In the first seven months of this year butter production fell by 10,200,000 pounds or 5.5 per cent, compared with the corresponding months of 1943. Creamery butter consumption has increased 20,000,000 pounds in the same seven-month period.

A stock-taking of the tea and coffee situation will be made some time this fall.

Next Victory Loan Objective Might Exceed $1,200,000,000

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Possibility the Government may raise the objective for the forthcoming Victory Loan above the figure of $1,200,000,000 at which it has stood for the last two loans, is seen here.

The Sixth Victory Loan in May yielded close to $1,400,000,000 and in his Budget speech Finance Minister Ilsley placed the Government's borrowing requirements for the present fiscal year at $3,200,000,000, which leaves $1,800,000,0000 still to be raised.

The sale of war savings certificates yielded about $47,000,000 last year and will probably bring in about the same amount this year. The sale of Victory bonds is the Government's other chosen method of raising funds.

It can also borrow by the sale of short-term securities to banks and other financial institutions which have available funds, but it prefers to borrow from the public through the sale of bonds.

Plans now are being made for the Seventh Victory Loan, which will probably be offered in October, and were discussed at a meeting of the National War Finance Committee this week.

In view of the fact that the last loan went $200,000,000 over the objective and that the previous objective is well below the amount the Government needs the quota for the new loan may be set a few hundred million higher.

Mohawk Reds Deseronto, and Gibbards in Play-offs

The softball games played in Napanee and Deseronto during the past week had considerable bearing on the teams which would remain in the local play-offs.

On Tuesday last, Hunter's Cleaners were in Deseronto, the guests of the Mohawk Reds, who handed out a 14 to 4 lacing to the visitors. The second game of this series was played back here on Thursday and was a much better game to watch. The score was 4 to 2 for the Airmen. Neither team played good ball, although the score had all the earmarks of a real contest.

The Hunter boys now join the ranks in the grandstand and the Flyers get a rest until the Gibbards and Deseronto series is completed.

The first game of the above series was to have been played last Wednesday but the weather was threatening all day and just at game time the rain came and the contest was postponed until Monday of this week.

The Gibbard-Deseronto game was played on Tuesday night and resulted in an 8 to 2 win for the Redi-Heats. The game was rained out on Monday.

The second game will be played in Napanee on Thursday evening at the Gibbard Park, at 6.15

A schoolmaster, giving a music lesson, inquired whether the pupils had any favorite anthem they would like to sing.

"God Save the King!" said one of the lads.

"Now tell me, what made you think of the National Anthem?"

"Because," replied the boy, "then it's time to go home."

LIEUTENANT ROBERT K. TEMPLETON Second Son of Mrs. W. A. Templeton KILLED IN ACTION

Word came on Friday night last to Mrs. W. A. Templeton, that her younger son, Robert Keith Templeton, a lieutenant with the Toronto Scottish Regiment, had been killed in action on Monday August 14, somewhere in France. His death occurred just three weeks after his older brother, Gunner William Templeton, died in France as a result of wounds.

Two telegrams were received from Ottawa at the same time, by Mrs. Templeton. The one stated that Lieut. Robert K. Templeton was missing and the second, dated soon after the first, said that he had been killed in action

Lieutenant Templeton went to France shortly after "D" Day and first saw action on July 23rd, two days after the death of his brother. In order to get into front line action, he had reverted from the rank of Captain to that of Lieutenant.

Lieutenant Templeton, who was in his 26th year, was born in Napanee. He was the son of the late William Templeton, and Mrs. Templeton who now resides in Toronto. He attended the Napanee schools and after graduating from the Collegiate, he and his mother moved, in 1936, to Toronto, where he attended Trinity College. Before his graduation in Arts in 1940, he was a member of the Officers' Training Corps and later went into active training. He went overseas early in December 1940. In November, 1943, he married Cynthia Spink, of Seaford, Sussex, England, who with his mother survives him.

"Bob," as he was known to his many friends, had a very happy disposition and was filled with a zest for life and adventure. Just previous to the outbreak of war he spent several months in South Africa and his experiences there filled him with the desire to travel and see the world. In a recent letter to his mother, he spoke of the war as a great adventure and, apparently, had no fear of what active service might bring to him.

With his death, another promising life has been cut short and his family, already grief-stricken by the loss of his elder brother, has been dealt a blow that is hard to bear. But "Bob" Templeton, undoubtedly met death with the same high courage with which he would have faced any crisis in life.

London, Ont., August 28. — Two hundred and eighty-six Commissioners, clerical and lay members in equal numbers, will meet at First St. Andrew's United church, London, Ontario, on Wednesday, September 6th for the opening of the Eleventh General Council of The United Church of Canada, it was announced by Rev. Dr. Gordon A. Sisco General Council Secretary. Sessions will continue for nine days.

The delegates have been chosen by eleven Conferences of the United Church from Newfoundland to British Columbia and from Missionary Councils Overseas. The Council has full power to legislate within the provisions laid down in the Basis of Union. Last General Council was held in Belleville, Ontario, two years ago.

The election of a new Moderator to succeed the Right Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, of Toronto, is one of the first orders of business. While Conferences and Presbyteries of the Church have the privilege of nominating their choice for the Moderatorship, nominations must be made from the floor of General Council. The Moderator serves two years.

An eighty-page report of a Commission appointed two years ago to study "The Church, Nation, and World Order" is one of the highlights of the forthcoming General Council. The Chairman of the Commission is G. W. Mason, K.C., of Toronto. The Secretary is Rev. Dr. Gordon A. Sisco.

Commissioners will be asked for their approval of the constitution of the newly-formed Canadian Council of Churches. Recommendations for a Forward Movement of the Church after the war is also to come before the Council. Other matters of importance are: a new system of assessing pastoral charges for support of the Pension Fund; rehabilitation of chaplains; presentation of reports of various Church Boards, Commissions and Committees.

Quick Work

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Embury, Napanee are convinced of the efficiency of the postal service between England and Canada, as a result of the speed in which a letter from their son reached them recently.

On Tuesday morning, August 18th they were handed a letter from their son, Flying Officer Don. Embury, which bore a postmark in England dated Saturday, July 29th.

Addington Fall Fair will be held on Wednesday, September 13th.

PICTON CLUB ENTERTAINS NAPANEE ROTARY

Sam Sinton, president of the Picton Rotary Club was in the chair at the regular meeting, on Tuesday, August 25th, when visiting Napanee Rotarians were the guests.

Several of the local members made the pleasant trip on Rotarian Wallace Roy's cabin cruiser, others travelling by car, and met at the Picton Yacht Club, where they were enthusiastically welcomed. Following registration and the reception, the members of both clubs proceeded to the Globe Hotel, where the dining room had been beautifully decorated for the occasion and a sumptuous meal was served.

The dinner was interspersed with community singing, led by Will Clow, with Carl Brownson at the piano. Howard Brooks, who has been in hospital in Toronto since February, was present and was able to appear for the first time without crutches.

Rotarian Ed. Williams announced plans for the Rotary Carnival in the Picton Armouries, August 31st and September 1st and 2nd. Phil Garden, of Garden Bros., Toronto who was present, stated that they were bringing a better show than last year for the Carnival and felt sure the event would be a great success.

The entertainment provided for the guests was enthusiastically received and was of a high order. Rotarian Carl Brownson, comedian and singer, presented several of the songs which were well remembered by a number of the gathering. "Oh! Oh! Oh! It's a Lovely War," "The Stoker" and "I'm a Daddy To-day" being among those much appreciated. His appearance brought back many pleasant memories.

Miss Dorothy Merrill, accordeon player, and Benny Silverton violinist, presented a varied and very entertaining program, including Tales of Vienna Woods", the "Blue Danube" and hits from the Broadway Show "Oklahama" which were outstanding. Benny Silverton's violin solo, "Sweet Mystery of Life" accompanied at the piano by Miss Dorothy Merrill, was especially well received.

Nick Nicholson very ably accompanied "Red" Newman at the piano and played for the sing-song of familiar songs led by Mr. Newman.

Rotarian Jas. de C. Hepburn expressed the appreciation of the club members to the artists for their entertainment and spoke of the good fellowship resulting from these inter-club meetings.

President "Bill" Huston, of the Napanee Club, also thanked the artists for their splendid programme and expressed the appreciation of the Napanee Rotarians for the splendid dinner and entertainment provided by the Picton Rotarians.

NEW COURSE RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Instruction to Start in Fall Term

The new course in religious education will start in the public schools September 5th under regulations which provide exemptions for any pupil, teacher or board of trustees, the Minister of Education, Premier George Drew, announced last week.

Two half-hour periods a week will be devoted to religious education and the instruction will be given by the teacher except in those cases where a resolution of the school board requests the services of a clergyman.

A teacher who has conscientious scruples may be exempted from teaching the prescribed course, upon notifying the school board in writing. The regulations also set out that the Minister of Education may grant to a board exemption from the teaching of religious education in any classroom or school, provided the board shall request in writing such exemption and shall submit reasons therefor.

NON-SECTARIAN TEACHING

"The subject is compulsory only for the children of those who desire such instruction to be given and for those who do not claim exemption," said the Premier. "For those children who will be receiving instruction from the teacher, the course is prescribed to insure that the teaching will not be sectarian in character, but that the fundamental truths of religion upon which there is substantial agreement among all branches of the Christian faith will be presented.

"All children in our public schools who participate in the course of religious education will thus be given an opportunity to become acquainted with the Bible while at the same time freedom of choice in religious matters will, in no way, be curtailed.

"It is expected that through the interest aroused by the new course many children who would not otherwise do so, may become interested in the church and the Sunday school where they will receive a fuller and more complete exposition of religious truth in the church of their choice."

MANUAL FOR TEACHERS

A teacher's manual dealing with general methods of instruction has been prepared by the Department of Education and will be placed in the hands of teachers at the opening of the school term. A booklet containing the words and music of approved hymns for school will also be provided. The new course will come into effect for grades one and two and it will be introduced into the other grades of the public school one grade at a time as the teachers' guide become available.

It is provided that the school day shall be opened with religious exercises consisting of the reading of the Scriptures and the repeating of the Lord's Prayer or other prayers approved for use in schools.

CAR THIEVES OPERATING IN TOWN TAKE ACCESSORIES

Make Clean Sweep of Phil Speed's Truck

Car thieves did a real clean-up job Monday night, on the livestock truck belonging to Phil Speed who resides on Donald Street in Napanee, near the west ward school.

Theft of the truck was reported to Constable A. E. Cook early Tuesday morning and after a search of the district the truck was found north of Vine's Corners on the outskirts of the town.

Every part of the truck that could be easily detached had been removed and the skeleton of the truck was abandoned on the roadside. Among the parts taken were five tires and tubes, four wheels, the battery, the voltage regulator, the generator and all the tools.

On Tuesday morning the Napanee Police were also notified of a similar occurrence Monday night at Gananoque, where a car was also stripped in a like manner. Police believe that a gang of car thieves must have been operating in the district.

On account of the increasing difficulty of securing tires and car parts and the ready market for such used parts, it would be a good plan for car owners to make sure that their cars are carefully locked-up every night, to prevent the possibility of their cars being stolen.

Odd Corn

Mr. H. W. Gallagher, Dorland, sent into The Beaver Office, this week, an oddly shaped ear of corn. About half way down the ear, which was broad and flat, the ear separated into two well-formed ears. On the end of the one section another split had started, which would likely have continued to develop if the ear had been left on the stalk.

URGENT APPEAL TO WOOD USERS

Increasing transportation difficulties make it essential for those who burn wood in their homes to purchase their next winter's supply of wood as soon as possible, according to the Munitions and Supply Department.

Labor shortages and reduced transport facilities will make it difficult to maintain wood deliveries in the latter part of the year. Therefore, Timber Controller Alan H. Williamson urges the public to lay in an adequate supply of wood fuel immediately.

A DOUBLE SORROW

Twice within the past month, the Templeton Family, proprietors of this weekly paper, have been bereaved as a result of the war. The wounds from which Gunner William Templeton died were received in action in Normandy on July 14th. On August 14th, just a month to a day, his brother, Robert Keith, was likewise killed in action in Normandy.

Robert — or "Bob" — as he was familiarly known, was born and brought up in this town, and lived here until he went to Toronto to continue his education at the University of Toronto. He was a young man of high attainments, strong and dependable. He possessed a great capacity for friendship and was a general favourite among all classes. The future seemed bright with promise.

He enlisted early in the war and has now given his life for his country and the ideals he cherished. The full price of war is paid, not only by those who lay down their lives on the battlefield — great as that is — but it is paid as well by their mothers, wives, and relatives.

Mrs. E. M. Templeton has given both her sons — all she had. The sympathy of the community goes out to her and all similarly bereaved, in these days which try the souls of men.

PARIS — FREE!

The news of the return of Paris to her own people thrilled the people in all the United Nations. The psychological effect on other nations is already noticeable. Those who wavered in their allegiance, or who, as small neutrals, sided with Germany, are now quite sure that Germany cannot win and are seeking the best way out of the dilemma into which their misguided leaders took them.

Paris, for four years under the iron heel of the Nazis, has been freed. The French people will rejoice that it was they, themselves, who rose in revolt and battled the enemy until he was all but beaten. The Forces of the United Nations arrived in time to make the victory of the Partisans complete.

The transfer of authority seems to have been accomplished with great rapidity. There was not complete unanimity even among the French themselves, however. There were many French collaborationists. Street fighting took place and an attempt was made on the life of General de Gaulle. Latest reports indicate there is still unrest in the city. But up to the present the United Nations are looking to the French, themselves, to restore order. If in the next few days there are not serious outbreaks, the crisis will have passed. Paris will resume a normal life.

It is one of the ironies of war that Paris, having been seized by the Germans and held by them for four years, is practically unscarred by bombs or guns, while London, whose people have been battling for Paris and Rome, is being battered day and night by the new inventions of destruction and death.

Naturally we rejoice that Paris was spared destruction, and that Rome was scarcely injured. But the Fascists of Italy and the Vichyites of France were the opponents of those who have been fighting for their people and for their country. It is to be hoped that the Italian people will recognize this, and that the French will not forget — when Paris and Rome are intact, London rocks under a hail of death and destruction.

FACTS ABOUT THE MIDDLE EAST

1. Stretching from the Mediterranean Sea almost to India is a vast region with a population of more than 50,000,000 covering an area of 2,414,800 square miles, more than two-thirds the area of the United States.

2. Eighty per cent of the Middle East region consists of four large independent states — Egypt, Iraq, and Saudi Arabia. Nine per cent consists of small independent territories closely connected with Britain for many years, and three per cent consists of British and former French mandated territories — Palestine, Syria and Lebanon — with a small British colony, Aden.

3. For countless centuries, the Middle East has had a profound spiritual influence on history. Modern civilization owes much to the ancient civilizations of Mesopotamia, Egypt, Syria and Palestine. One of the main keys to the migration of peoples is the "fertile crescent" of the Middle East. From this region came three religions of mankind—Judaism, Christianity, and Islam.

4. The Middle East is the centre of the Moslem faith which imposes a distinctive way of life on its followers. Through the Moslem tradition, the peoples of the Middle East are connected westward with the 14,000,000 Moslems of North Africa and eastward with the 105,000,000 Moslems of Afghanistan and India.

5. The Moslem faith was spread by the conquering Arabs who, from the eighth century onwards, carried their faith and their empire through the Middle East and North Africa into Spain, Italy, other parts of Europe and eastwards towards India. The Arabic language and traditions are important cultural and political links throughout the whole of the Middle East today.

6. Since Biblical times the Middle East has been the crossroads of the strategy and commerce of the world, as well as being an important centre for the diffusion of learning. In modern times, the region has assumed new importance for land, sea and air traffic, and for the development of natural resources.

7. The Middle East countries have vast desert areas with fertile strips intensively cultivated. In the countries there are sharp differences in outlook between settled townsmen and Bedouin nomads. Until the nineteenth century did a "modern" ruler — Mohammed Ali in Egypt— impose centralized control of the whole territory.

8. Externally, the countries of the Middle East have put aside political differences for a growing unity of purpose. Iran and Iraq concluded a four-power pact with Afghanistan and Turkey in 1937. Iraq Saudi Arabia and Yemen are signatories to a treaty of "Arab brotherhood." Federation of some of the Territories has been discussed. All territories have concluded alliances or treaties with Britain, some of very long standing.

9. Britain's modern interest in the Middle East goes back to the days of her early trade with India in the eighteenth century. With the development of Australia and New Zealand and of commercial interests in the Far East during the nineteenth century, it became vital to Britain to defend the Middle East as a lifeline of supply and communication.

10. The strategic importance to Britain of the Middle East lies in four main factors: The Suez Canal, which shortens sea routes by thousands of miles; the military, especially naval and air, bases in the area, the oil supplies, and the airports which Britain has built there before the war in developing air routes to India, South Africa, and Australia.

11. Commercially, the importance of the Middle East lies in its oil reserves, in the chemical products of the Dead Sea and in Egyptian cotton growing. In some cases these products have been developed or purchased by British companies, in other cases by non-British companies, or on a joint basis. In peace time the oil is exported to many countries of the world, on a free market.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK

Hon. George A. Drew, Premier of Ontario, is in Great Britain. He is there in the interests of Canada and Canadians. A Canadian dispatch from London quotes Premier Drew as saying that: "It was his own opinion that any Briton with a war service gratuity could come to Canada after the war." The report further quotes Ontario's Premier as saying that "he is working on the problem of getting British manufacturers to establish branch factories in Canada. He gave as an instance the opportunities in plastics and synthetic products in Canada, where wood is plentiful and the fact that, at the war's end, Canada would be plentifully supplied with machine tools and electric energy. Mr. Drew declared his belief that in times of great prosperity Canada could support a population of fifty million people."

In seeking to arouse public opinion in England as to the advantages of Canada both for capital and for population, Mr. Drew is doing, not only Ontario, but the whole of Canada a distinct service. The war has made Canada better known in Great Britain than ever before. The long residence of Canadian soldiers in Great Britain has undoubtedly led to many lasting friendships, and the contribution which Canada has made in manufactured products and in essential foodstuffs to the cause of The United Nations, must have aroused the interest of those who are engaged in manufacturing.

Now is the time to capitalize on that new interest in our country. We need population. We have a widely extended geographic area with limitless possibilities. Mr. Drew's estimate that we could support a population of fifty million is not an over-statement.

Mr. Drew will, in all likelihood, find less difficulty in persuading the people of Great Britain of Canada's need of population than he will Canadians themselves. For a number of years prior to the war, immigration to Canada even from the Mother Country, was not actively encouraged. Rather there was a tendency to discourage it. This opposition to immigration, from certain areas and groups, was strong enough to influence government action.

If Premier Drew can arouse public opinion in this country to the point where immigration, particularly from the British Isles, will not only be tolerated, but enthusiastically endorsed, he will be doing a great service to Canada.

ANOTHER PROVINCE SPEAKS

The election in New Brunswick has fulfilled forecasts. The Liberal Party has been returned to power and will probably hold thirty-five of the forty-eight seats, when the final count is made. At the time of dissolution, there were twenty-five Liberals in the House. The Progressive Conservatives had sixteen and there were seven vacancies. Premier McNair was himself re-elected by a narrow majority. The Progressive Conservatives will have probably thirteen members in the new House. A feature of the election was the failure of the C.C.F. to elect a single member. Entering the contest seriously for the first time in New Brunswick, the C. C. F. had a candidate in each of the 41 ridings. None were elected. About all that the C.C.F. can claim to have secured was an opportunity to educate the people with respect to the plans and purposes of the Party. Not until the popular vote is known will it be possible to estimate the effect of this campaign.

It is significant of the trend of the times that both the Liberal Party and the Progressive Conservative Party went to the country on an advanced programme of social legislation. It is becoming increasingly evident that those aspiring to office can no longer ignore the demands of the people for advanced social changes. If the older parties wish to prevent the swing to the more left-wing elements in the community, they will do well not to ignore public opinion on these matters of social justice. That both the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives in New Brunswick embodied progressive planks in their platforms, is indicative of the way the leaders of our political parties are being aroused to social action.

It is doubtful if the result will bring much comfort to the Ontario Liberals. The swing of recent Provincial elections has been definitely against Ottawa, when the record of Ottawa has been up for review. This was notably true in Quebec and in Saskatchewan. Dominion issues did not play so large a part in the New Brunswick election. The vote is largely an endorsement of the McNair Government's record and a faith in their ability to keep pre-election pledges.

SOME TRICKS OF OUR MODERN WARFARE

BY WAVERLY ROOT

As a layman, I always find the technical minutiae of the business of waging war of great interest. There has never been a perfect weapon or an unbeatable system of tactics devised before the one or the other has been tested under battle conditions. It is only in use that the "guns" in a new weapon are discovered, and eliminated, and only by trying it out that the weaknesses of a new tactical method may be discovered.

One such example of the trial and error method as employed by the Luftwaffe occurred during the invasion of Normandy, when radio-controlled glider bombs were used against Allied warships. The glider bomb was launched from a Heinkel, which then followed behind the bomb, in order to watch its line and direct it straight towards the ship which was its target. The defence proved to be easy. Antiaircraft fire was concentrated on the Heinkel, which in the necessity for taking evasive action to save itself, was unable to concentrate on directing the bomb accurately.

Shortly after the Allied ships thought they had solved this problem they met with a surprise. The Heinkels began coming in as usual launching their bombs and following closely behind them but a concentration of fire on the plane failed to disturb the course of the bomb. The Allied gunners were puzzled — at first. Then they discovered what the Germans were doing.

The Heinkel which launched the bomb was no longer controlling its flight, although is continued to fly along behind it to make the Allied bombers think so. High up in the air a Junkers-88, innocently buzzing along, actually took over direction of the bomb once the Heinkel had dropped it. It was a clever trick, but when they first used it, the Germans overlooked another detail. The Heinkel and the Junkers operated individually, with no co-ordination of their flight paths. Thus a ship which was attacked found, often enough, that the two planes were far enough part so that the starboard batteries could fire at one plane while the port batteries concentrated on the other. If they arranged to fly one above the other, the task of the ship batteries would have been more difficult, as the guns on only one side of the ship could have been brought to bear for both planes.

The concensus in Allied circles in any case seem to be that the radio-controlled bomb does not represent a serious menace.

Similarly, the first actions in which the Flying Fortresses participated brought to light several blind spots which had not been anticipated in advance. The enemy was quick to discover them in action, but the United States was then equally quick in correcting them. Now that these defects are a matter of past history, it is possible to report them.

The first appearance of the Flying Fortresses was highly successful. They out-fought the German fighters which went up against them until experience on the enemy found a means of attacking them. By rolling over on its back and flashing down in a Fortress, a fighter could shoot up its unprotected belly shielded as it came in by the fact that the guns of the Fortresses could not be brought to bear without hitting their own engines.

That problem was solved by adding the belly gun-blister to the Fortress, which provided an extremely unpleasant surprise for the first Messerschmitts which came roaring underneath the new planes without having noticed that the blind spot now had eyes — and stingers. But shortly afterwards the German fighters figured out a new way to get in.

When the bomb bay doors were opened, the line of fire of the belly gun was intercepted. Once more an enemy fighter flying on its back could flash under the Fortress, protected on the side by the bomber's engines and on the other by the open bomb bay doors, and get in a burst. An answer was figured out for that, too, and at present the advantage remains on the side of the Fortress.

New situations, constantly arising in this war, demand alert minds and men courageous enough to risk action on the basis of their conclusions, to counter them. There was, for instance, the case of the German parachute-mine-dropping plane which came in at 2,000 feet and dropped two enormous mines so close to the battleship Nelson that they lay almost athwart her anchor chain, as she lay off the coast of Normandy. It was a ticklish situation. The Nelson was going to be obliged to move in a few hours, and weighing the anchor and slipping around those mines with a major chain is a deep-water, not a shallow-water, trick which she had ventured to shell shore installations, would be a dangerous business.

The commander quickly reasoned that the mines must be of a type which were not immediately armed, for otherwise they would explode on contact with the water when they were dropped, instead of remaining in place to get any ship which ran into them. Probably they operated by some such device as an acid solution which would eat away a soluble compartment separating two liquids explosive in combination in order to "set" the mine so that it would operate thereafter on contact. If the Nelson were going to get safely away he reasoned, no time was better than the present. The ship, therefore, weighed anchor gingerly, pulling its great chain and hook up by the two mines, and moved to a position a mile distant. The diagnosis proved to be correct. The mines did not explode.

JAPAN'S REVERSES EXULTS CHINA

BY RICHARDS WATTS JR.

In The Montreal Daily Star and The New York Herald Tribune.

Chungking. — Although spirit destroying and soul-consuming heat is the natural characteristic of a Chungking summer there are also the rains. My experience in monsoon weather is limited to a couple of weeks on the Burma Road back in the pleasantly dry fall and August of 1939, but when it rains in the Chinese war-time capital, there is a grim, concentrated determination to it that equals anything I found that a monsoon had to offer.

Weather may change in Chungking, but whatever shifts it may make, you can be certain of one thing: It will be very uncomfortable.

It is, perhaps, the eccentric variations of a Chungking summer which make one shift about temperamentally in attitude towards events as seen from here. At times you are sure that you are lost in a forgotten world and as neglected war. At others you are convinced that the Far Eastern war is the centre of everything and that the invasion of Western Europe is merely the gigantic curtain-raiser to the main event. There are times when you grow quite cynical about things but, watching the great vitality of the people there is no occasion when you doubt that the Chinese are going to win out.

It is that impression of vitality which, next to the infectious humor for this unsurpassable race, most impresses the many visitors, military and otherwise, who are coming to China for the first time. It is particularly noticeable to those who have passed some time in India. I was there for a month and, after even that short a stay the contrast between Chinese gusto and Indian lethargy is as ever inescapably impressive.

Nevertheless, it is undeniable that one does go through shifting moods while contemplating war. At others you said that I was passing the war years in two neutral capitals, Dublin and Chungking, forgetting for just a moment that China had been at war since 1937 or, in truth, 1931.

It was that sense that we were for the time being out of things which was the reason why there was comparatively little excitement about the invasion of western Europe. The papers got out extras, there were public expressions of satisfaction and those in authority realized that the great offensive in Europe was, among other things, another stride along the road to Tokyo but war interest continued to centre in the ugly military situation in southeast China.

Convinced that the population of Chungking was eagerly awaiting news of the landings in Normandy, one of the American agencies put out a handsome poster announcing it and sent a photographer to take pictures of the cheering throng. The outfit watching the agency picture display showed a certain interest in the sight of a funny looking foreigner climbing up on a box and pointing a mechanical device at them, but that seemed about to mark the extent of their concern.

On the other hand, there was great interest in both the bombing of Japan and the victory in the Marianas and East Philippines, for those historic events brought global war into terms that really meant something to the people, the enemy they knew so long and bitterly, who had struck them so many cruel blows was at last being hit hard in return and this was going to be happy about, even though the previous American raid on Japan had brought massacre of thousands of Chinese, slaughtered by the Japanese for giving aid and comfort to United States flyers.

At first there was a trace of disappointment when it was learned that Tokyo had not been included among the targets, but this did not last long for it was quickly realized that blows dealt to great enemy industries were more important than any mere gestures against the Jap capital. There was pride, too, in the news of the work of nearly half a million Chinese farmers in building the airfields from which the mighty Superfortresses had taken off.

Likewise there seemed to be enough objectivity left in a country racked by seven years of war to cause people to feel that the landing on Saipan was more important than the spectacular aerial assault on Kyushu. Noticeable, though was a deep regret that, when things seemed to be going so well in Normandy and Russia and Italy, in North Burma and the Marianas they were still going so desperately in southeast China.

MISCALCULATIONS PUNCTURE FUEHRER'S DREAM

BY S. BURTON HEATH

Adolf Hitler's failure to achieve his dream of occidental world conquest, like coming so close, can be attributed to three fundamental miscalculations.

First, he underestimated the bulldog courage of the British. Second, he underestimated the military and economic might of Soviet Russia and the willingness and ability of its people to absorb punishment. Third, he underestimated the rapidity and intelligence with which the United States could arm herself and the anti-Nazi world from a standing start and this nation's willingness to make common cause with Great Britain.

Technically the United States did not enter the war until Japan attacked Pearl Harbor December 7, 1941. Actually her entire weight except for actual shooting was on the side of the Allies at least from September 3, 1940, when President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill agreed that, in return for leases on certain defensive bases, this country should turn 50 over-age destroyers over to the British for use against submarines.

On March 11, 1941, Roosevelt signed the Lend-Lease bill.

A week later $7 000,000,000 was appropriated to finance that contribution. An army of 4,000,000 men was authorized. The Selective Service Act was amended to permit sending soldiers overseas.

Meanwhile the United States had closed the consulates, had taken over Greenland and Iceland and had seized Axis ships and those of occupied countries to protect them."

In September a German submarine missed the destroyer Greer, in mid-October a torpedo damaged the destroyer Kearny and October 30 the destroyer Reuben James was sunk with loss of 76 lives. All these episodes made it manifest the president had ordered our destroyers to shoot at German submarines on sight.

In November the neutrality act was repealed so that we could arm American merchant ships and use them to carry armaments and munitions to the British. By that time we had long been in a race against time to make our army, our navy and our air force the most powerful in the world and we boasted of our desire and intention to become the arsenal and the supply depot of the anti-Axis world.

The conquest of Africa jointly through Montgomery's drive and the operations that began in Algiers and Morocco, gave us a base from which to take Sicily. From that island we were able to help to the Italian mainland and eventually force Mussolini's downfall and put Italy out of the war. Our pounding in Italy greatly assisted the successful landing in Normandy, which in turn helped our further progress in Italy.

The planes, the guns, the tanks, the munitions that Germany was unable to build because of the shattering of her factories by Anglo-American bombers contributed, to an extent that only the future can measure accurately, to the increasing inferiority of Hitler's armies to resist the Russians on the East and the Anglo-British forces on the South and West.

Also for the first time in history, Germany itself—its cities, its homes, its civilian population — began to suffer the horrors of death and destruction that Germany so often has forced upon the rest of Europe.

These things all contributed to a rising tide of dissatisfaction against Hitler, against his associates, against his party, against his war.

The Junkers who in the beginning had thought they were using Hitler in their struggle against Russia, in that cause, began as early as 1933 to wonder whether they were really the fox eating the chicken or the chicken being gobbled by the fox. They weren't sure, and by that time they had gone too far to back out. But at no time since 1933 has there been complete harmony between the Junkers and Hitler.

If the German defeat was to be halted while there still remained some semblance of military might in the fields upon which to begin building for another in the long series of German attempts at continental domination, then Hitler had to be ousted and negotiations for capitulation had to be handled by the generals.

The exact course of events from this time the generals' cabal took form, could have followed any of several courses. It may be long before we know in detail, with much accuracy, exactly which course it did follow. There was never any question, however, that the complete downfall of Adolf Hitler and all his Nazi gang was an important element in the internal readjustment that had to be made.

So the final outcome continued the thread that, more than any other runs throughout the story of the rise and fall of Adolf Hitler—the threads of double-crossing.

If Hitler hadn't double - crossed everybody with whom he dealt, including the Junkers, he never would have come so close to making himself the first world dictator.

On the other hand if Hitler had not double-crossed the Junkers and the Russians, he might today be sitting quite pretty as the most powerful military and political figure in history.

So that the men and women who have lost their way in life and find themselves behind prison bars may regain hope. The Salvation Army officer brings to them in the r meetings at the prisons the teachings of Christ, and offers a kindly ear to listen to, to help them solve their problems. Last year there were 6,767 visits made to prisons and to police courts.

FOUR DARK YEARS ARE ENDED

BY DWIGHT L. PITKIN

The Germans entered Paris on June 14, 1940, in the lightning collapse of France that stunned a world which thought the French Army and the Maginot Line invincible.

They goose-stepped up the broad Champs Elysees and under the Arc de Triomphe built by Napoleon. Hitler came and gloated atop the Eiffel Tower.

The German occupation forces sought to win the French to their side, needling them with propaganda that the democracy of the Third Republic was decadent and that France had a place in the German new totalitarian order. A small minority which always had been Fascist-minded collaborated, but the mass of people in Paris and the rest of France silently and hopefully awaited the day of liberation. A vast underground army was organized throughout France.

Paris had experienced four years of queueing up for food cycling or walking to work, curfew hours, firing squads, black markets and the strutting of Nazi officers who monopolized the best hotels, the best shows and all the comforts that pre-war Paris had enjoyed.

Paris had suffered from Allied air raids against German targets within the area of the capital—such as the Renault works and le Bourget airfield. German radio broadcasts perhaps had exaggerated civilian casualties, which were estimated in the thousands. But Paris had suffered more than in the First Great War when the Germans besieged the city from a distance of twenty miles and fired shells from long-range guns that left scars still visible on some of the mellow gray buildings.

Since the German occupation Paris, whose prewar population was 2,826,746, has been virtually a ghost city. Its young men prisoners of war in Germany, its children evacuated to the countryside. Of late also, with down the Metro (subway) system. There was no gasoline to operate the big green buses of the police.

During the occupation the Parisians' relations with the Germans were usually correct and polite, but there was a frigidity the Germans could not mistake. At street - side cafes the Parisians sat apart from the Germans.

The Germans carried on their primary anti-Semitic campaign, rounding up thousands of Jews who were sent away to concentration camps. A puppet press followed the line. When the Germans ordered Jews to wear black and white stars as identification, Gallic humor saw its answer. Now Jewish Parisians bloomed out with black and white breast kerchiefs.

Police raids became routine as Germans sought to stifle the developing underground army. Hostages were rounded up for forced labor in German war factories.

Reprisal executions were frequent. Fifty Parisians were shot for the killing of one Nazi. Interference with German measures did not prevent sabotage.

Paris made some semblance of keeping up theatrical, musical and cultural life. Sacha Guitry produced new plays. The swing-music craze kept up an appearance of gaiety. But a good pre-war meal cost francs (nominally 176 to the dollar).

Fashion designers managed to keep their concerns going by producing new styles which found an enthusiastic clientele among the wives of German officials.

One feature of Paris which the Germans never dared change was the flame burning over the tomb of the Arc de Triomphe of the unknown soldier of the First Great War. But the custodians of the flame were fined 6,000 francs when the gas quota allotted for the flame was exceeded.

REVOLT AGAINST NAZIS

Once again Holland has disregarded the consequences of open defiance in the occupied countries, by openly denouncing the efforts to force them to discard the ideals which for nine centuries have been the pride of the Netherlands physicians. The declared determination of the Netherlands Medical Association, in the form of a joint letter sent to local physicians to Dr. Wimmer, the German Commissioner-General for Justice in occupied Holland.

The doctors declared that neutral facts again force is evil and dishonest, and that the joint letter. The attempts of the Nazis have been unpromising doctors for refusing to disclose professional secrets for the information the unauthorized possession of patients from hospitals and mental institutions and which were used for the extermination of incurables and for treating members of the underground.

It is explained in the letter that the physicians believe it their duty to refuse collaboration in matters conflicting with their profession's honor. The physicians who maintain his position of confidence. The letter declared, "emits himself of the responsibility for the consequences and respect of his colleagues and the public."

The signatories of the letter demanded that the occupation forces respect this viewpoint and cease treating as criminals doctors who are merely faithful to the ethics of the profession.

At frequent intervals since early 1941 similar letters have been sent protesting attempts to Nazify the medical profession. Hundreds of physicians were imprisoned following the joint letter of one of these letters to Reich's Commissioner Seyss-Inquart in June, 1943.

A fly and a flea in a flue.
Were imprisoned, now what could they do?
Said the flea, "Let us flee."
"Let us fly," said the flea.
So they flew through a flaw in the flue.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 3RD, 1944

"SAUL REJECTED"

Lesson Text: I Samuel 15: 10-23

In studying this lesson it is essential to take into account the age in which it was written. The power of the clergy to make and unmake kings was undoubtedly necessary in a day when kingship was in its infancy. But it would not do now. Indeed, the history of the bishops who made and unmade kings is not a very happy or creditable one. The story of Rasputin, the famous priest in Russia, who had the Czarina under his thumb, is evidence of the effect which the abuse of power may have on a priest. Priests and clergy of all denominations have their own specific functions to perform. They had better leave the making of kings to the people.

To be sure it was different eight or nine centuries before Christ. Then the prophets were the only men in the community who had the complete confidence of the people, and they and the priests — for the reason they were the only ones in whom reposed the power to appoint and to dismiss kings. When Samuel appointed Saul he believed he had the makings of a good leader. He was disappointed. Samuel had sent Saul out to clean up on a particularly obnoxious tribe of people the Amalekites. He was told that God desired them to be completely destroyed. Saul defeated the Amalekites fair enough, but he cast envious eyes on the fine sheep and oxen he saw there. What a pity, he thought, to kill these. I will take them back with me. On the way back he met Samuel and got in the first word. Well! Samuel, he said in effect, I've done what I was told to do, that so answered Samuel — what means the bleating of all these lambs then. Oh, these! The people kept these for a sacrifice, said Saul. How quickly one lie led to another. Saul knew in his heart of hearts he had not done what he was commanded to do. And when he was cornered he passed the buck. But Samuel was not having any. At this point he gave expression to one of the greatest sayings in the Bible: "To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams."

What Samuel meant was simply this, that God delights more in obedience to His will than to the performance of ritual, no matter how meaningful and profound that ritual may be. This, early in Israel's history, the issue was joined which in one form or another has been present in all ages. In order to have communal worship, some sort of form or ritual is necessary. But the tendency for the ritual to become increasingly important until in many eras of the Church's history the ritual was the supreme concern. Sherwood Eddy tells in one of his books of a meeting of clerics in Moscow who were having a long debate as to the kind of incense to be used in which it was written. The power of a certain point in the service, the yellow gowns should be worn. At this very moment shots were being fired on the streets which marked the beginning of the revolution which finally ended when the U.S.S.R. came into being.

In our own country there has been a revolt against this over-emphasis of form in worship. The way to worship is thought to be the most important phase of church activity. The result has been that those groups who find no value in ritual are living off in new small groups of their own.

The function of the prophet was that of the priest, is always to emphasize the importance of a right spirit to maintain the proper balance. Indeed if we take our guidance and leadership from the Bible, there can be no doubt. To obey is better than sacrifice and to hearken than the fat of rams." That was the conviction of the prophet Samuel, but it was the basis of the message of all the prophets. God wants obedience. He wants His children to do His will. God is concerned with deportment of people. The God of Jesus Christ is a Father-God, who would not that any of His little ones would perish. He is more concerned with human personality, and housing conditions, than with the abolition of war, economic justice, racial brotherhood are than He is in the letter perfect performance of a church service. Communal worship is essential, but when men perform this ritual and neglect to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with God." His will is defeated.

PEACHES RICH IN VITAMINS A AND C

Having sliced peaches on the morning cereal these days? They're good that way and there are vitamins in worthwhile amounts beneath that downy skin.

Figures from the Nutrition Division at Ottawa show that while a medium peach (yellow) has only about one quarter as much vitamin C as an orange, it has approximately seven times as much vitamin A, enough to provide almost one-third of the day's needs.

Even a glutton might find it difficult to eat enough peaches to supply all the day's needs of vitamin C, but with tomatoes also in season and other vegetables adding their quota, Canadians can be a lot less dependant just now on citrus fruits to keep teeth, gums and blood vessels in good condition.

IS ITALY AN ALLY OR DEFEATED FOE?

BY RUSSELL HILL

In The Montreal Daily Star and The New York Herald Tribune.

All dealings between the Allies and the Italians have been immensely complicated since last September by the circumsmtance that it has never been clear, either to us or to them, whether Italy is to be regarded as an occupied or a liberated country. This dilemma was inevitable because the truth is that Italy is neither one thing nor the other, but something in between the two.

Had the Allies invaded the Balkan instead of the Italian peninsula the problem would have been simpler, at least in the case of Greece and Yugoslavia. These countries could have been treated as full-fledged Allies and given all the freedom possible as long as military operations were not jeopardized. In France, too, there is full agreement that the Allied troops come in the role of liberators.

When the time comes for the occupation of Germany the situation should also be clear. The Allies will be occupying enemy country and will have every moral right to act as any occupying army. But in Italy we are dealing with a nation that was our enemy, but now "enjoys" the status of a co-belligerent.

This dilemma is ever present as a moral problem in the everyday life of every one in Italy. How can soldiers who fought Italians for three years in the North African desert suddenly forget this experience and all that it meant? How can Yugoslavs and Greeks be asked to forget the atrocities the Italian Army committed against their people? And the British officer who fought at El Alamein will see on the streets of Rome may even meet socially an Italian officer who fought on the other side of the same battle except for the fact that Mussolini's African army never got back to Italy.

Nine out of every ten Romans talk of the German occupation as having lasted since September 8. This is an inadvertent admission that they consider themselves to have been free before that. but in the press they will claim that they always hated Fascism and did not want to fight the Allies.

In some casts this is true— and that is what makes the problem so complicated. Of course, everybody is anti-Fascist now. Who can judge how many were before? And can the Italian people escape all the blame for the crimes of FaScism by the simple device of saying that they acted unwillingly under a dictatorship of a small minority?

On the other hand, leaving aside the philosophical question of moral responsibility, there remains the unquestioned fact that, unlike the Germans, the Italians cannot be accused of being a warlike or war-loving people, and there is little reason to fear Italy's re-emergence after the war as an aggressive military power capable of threatening the peace of Europe.

Moreover, the present Italian Government, with very few exceptions, is made up of men who have taken no sonal responsibility for Fascism and who, making efforts to purge the Fascists, co-operate with the Allies in winning the war and make the best of the desperate economic plight of their country.

This government inherited the armistice agreed to by another government. In the first days after the Allied entry into Rome Marshal Pietro Badoglio came here charged with forming a new and broader government. He told the party leaders that the conditions imposed by the Allies were two. Any government which was formed must adhere to the armistice terms. Any question concerning the monarchy must not be raised until after the war. A third condition later insisted upon by Lieutenant General Sir Frank N. Mason-MacFarlane, was the inclusion of Admiral Raffaele de Courten in the Cabinet as Navy Minister.

Party leaders immediately wanted to know what the armistice terms were before agreeing to be bound by them. But Badoglio said that he was not authorized to tell them until they accepted responsibility as ministers, whereupon they would be sworn to secrecy. Eventually a government was formed by Premier Ivanoe Bonomi who did not learn the terms until he left Rome and went with the new Cabinet members to Salerno. The terms were read to the ministers before they took the oath of office. They were "surprised" at the "severity" of the secret clauses, as one minister later told me, but they nevertheless agreed to abide by them.

The government now is faced by a number of grave problems, some of them insuperable. The main ones are the lack of sufficient food for the population; unemployment — estimated by one Italian paper at 200,000 in Rome alone; inflation, and the reorganization of the army, in which one may include the question of what to do with the disarmed partisans.

The Italians have been given the freedom of the press and have frequently used it to voice criticisms of Allied policy. Even Cabinet ministers have written frankly about Italian complaints. The Allies should do more about the unsatisfactory food situation. The Allies should underwrite the Italian lira in order to curb inflation. The Allies should give Italians, including both regular army units and partisans, a chance to take a greater part in the fight against the Nazis.

Typical of these complaints was the statement made recently by Giuseppe Saragat, Socialist state minister, who said: "Italy has all the disadvantages of war without any of war's benefits. On the one hand we have Italy fighting with her regular forces and patriots at the side of the Allies, on the other we find the unfortunate fact that she is not invited to a conference of enormous international significance like the Bretton Woods meeting where nations having one-twentieth the population of Italy were asked to sit."

There have been other occasions when prominent Italians have expressed the belief that Italy has earned the right to be treated as an ally. Allied authorities answer this by saying frankly that they do not regard Italy as an ally, but as a former enemy country. To other complaints. The Allies' answer is that the Italians should not blame us for the situation which is the direct result of the mistakes and crimes committed by the Fascists; that we are doing the best we can to feed the Italians but that when it becomes a question of priorities war supplies come first, and that we cannot commit ourselves to maintain a larger Italian army at the front because there gain, supplies are the limiting factor.

Any fair-minded observer here cannot help sympathizing with Italy's terrible economic plight and with the Italian government which has accepted the responsibility without being in a position to take measures necessary to alleviate the existing conditions. At the same time he can not criticise the Allies for insisting that the winning of the war comes first and the reconstruction and relief of Italy second. He might even be tempted to point out to the Italians that Italy, which is being defended by a former enemy country, still is better off than any of our European allies, some of whom can thank Italy as well as Germany for their present sufferings.

BLACK WIDOW NIGHT FIGHTER A SUCCESS

BY LEO CULLINANE

The Army's brand new Black Widow night-fighter plane has proved so successful in its brief combat performance that the War Department has ordered a 30 per cent increase in its production.

Because the plane is loaded with equipment still on the confidential list the War Department has been almost totally silent on its newest nocturnal sky threat.

Made by Northrop Aircraft, Inc., at Hawthorne, Calif., the Black Widow is (P-61) is the world's largest and most powerful pursuit plane and the first to be built specifically as a night fighter. Previously nightfighter planes were modifications of aircraft originally designed for other types of operation.

With the Luftwaffe nursing its waning strength and risking its aerial attacks mainly at night under protection of darkness, there was an acute need by the Allies for a fast, highly manoeuvrable intercepter with plenty of firepower. In the Pacific, too, the Japanese have learned to hoard their aircraft using them mainly for night attacks. The Black Widow apparently is the U. S. Army Air Forces answer to these enemy thrusts. The Black Widow, although classified as a fighter bomber — more than 25 000 pounds — and packs a lethal punch with its 20-millimeter cannons and 50-calibre machine guns, capable of blasting out of the sky anything that can fly. Roughly resembling a P-38 Lightning, with its split fuselage and tail assembly, but far larger, the Black Widow's nose protrudes far beyond the propeller hubs making identification easy.

Its three crew members are protected by armour-plate deflector shields and bullet-resistant glass. The plane has self-sealing gas and oil tanks and lines. Its speed is still secret, but officials say "it can hold its own with our fastest medium altitude fighters." The plane is also a "good performer" in bad and foggy weather.

Inside the Black Widow's low-slung engine nacelles that taper off with streaming effect into thin tail-booms supporting the elevator and rudder surfaces, are 2,000-horsepower Pratt & Whitney engines. Developing high horse-power at take-off, the engines, turning four-bladed propellers, pull the plane into the air in a comparatively short take-off run, give it good climb and high manoeuvrability.

Because night landings on wartime fields are hazardous for fighters, new flaps and ailerons have been incorporated into the Black Widow. It has fullspan landing flaps which run almost the whole length of the outer wing panels, leaving no room for conventional ailerons. A unique system of "spoiler type" ailerons was developed. These actually are small "gates" which lift up out of the top surface of the wing and break the airflow thus "spoiling" the lift and dropping the wing causing the airplane to tilt in one direction or the other—basically the same effect produced by the conventional aileron.

Among the best — and most secret —features of the Black Widow are the electronic devices which enable it to "sniff out" the enemy in the darkness. All night-fighter planes are equipped with radar.

The plane's extensive detection equipment and extensive radio installation, a high degree of manoeuvrability and extremely heavy firepower to assure blasting the enemy out of the sky in the brief seconds available in night interception. It has exhaust flame dampers to eliminate tell-tale glow. The plane can land safely in total darkness or fog on a "postage-stamp" airfield.

The enemy is not believed to have a comparable plane and since the "gates" which lift only as an interceptor plane over its own lines, the likelihood of the enemy capturing one is remote.

The total number of Black Widows now in operation or on order by the War Department is restricted. However, the P-61 is now the Army's standard night fighter and probably will replace all other types Northrop aircraft officials say "we have enough work to keep the Northrop force at full speed for two years."

BRITAIN'S MOBILE RADIO SET - UP

The Golden Arrow is no longer the London-Paris boat-train. It is now the name of the line of grey-green vehicles carrying the British Army's biggest mobile radio stations which are designed to provide communication between armies in France and Anglo-American G.H.Q.'s in Britain and elsewhere. They can also handle newspaper correspondents' dispatches.

The Army radio stations, manned by men of the Royal Signals Corps, are entirely mobile and self-supporting. They even include their own cook. On the road "the train" consists of five vehicles—a 7-ton receiving vehicle, two 4-ton trucks containing the men's equipment stores, etc., and towing two generators (one a spare) mounted on trailers. The procession is headed by the officer's utility car.

The station can be erected in less than four hours, providing the equivalent of a small fixer commercial high-power radio station which normally would take many months to put up. It is capable of transmitting and receiving 30,000 words a day over considerable distances.

The crew consists of one officer and 22 operators of the Royal Signals Corps. They undergo a short course in which they learn to do each other's jobs receiving transmitting, typing and clerking and to drive the vehicles and defend the station if necessary.

When they reach the site they must erect five 40-foot masts. Owing to its bulk and complexity the station can only be used for main arteries of communication, as for instance between Army H.Q. and G.H.Q. or between mobile G.H.Q. overseas and a fixed station in Britain.

The station has only one N.C.O. work in the receiving vehicle, which also houses the automatic transmitting hand and automatic receiving equipment. The forward end is divided off and contains air-conditioned equipment supplying a current of cool, drying climate. It also keeps away flies, mosquitoes and sand.

The men sit on the long operating bench each with two keyboard perforators, a receiving undulator, a Wheatstone transmitter and a hand key and spare undulator. Radio receivers on resilient mountings are on a shelf above with a "recording bridge" which converts an interrupted audio-frequency note from the receiver into the direct current to operate the undulator. Ready slung on the walls are the sergeant's rifles ready for an emergency.

A message is given to the N.C.O. clerk, who hands it to the typewriter operator. He types the message on the keyboard perforator, which produces long paper tape stamped with holes corresponding to Morse characters. The tape is then run through the Wheatstone transmitter, which sends the radio transmitter automatically, at speeds to 150 words per minute. At the receiving terminal the signal is recorded by the undulator as a wavy line on the paper tape which is then drawn slowly across the front of the typewriter while the operator transcribes the message, typing it in its original form.

A man in transmitting 400 to 800 yards away has little to do beyond watching for any faults or changing the frequency when requested. Power is supplied by a Diesel generator, connected to the transmitting and receiving vehicles by a four-core heavy cable. The men work two eight-hour shifts.

The production of Golden Arrows is the result of team work by several British factories. Three firms share the building of the vehicles and two others share the fitting. The transmitters and other equipment come from factories scattered throughout England. They are assembled at a shop near London, where they are taken over by the crew. The first vehicles were shipped overseas straight off the production lines and had already played an important part in the Allied Mediterranean campaigns before the invasion.

AXIS PLANS FOR WORLD WAR III

The United Nations Information Organization said, recently, that Axis plans for the next war, "if they lose this one," were factors behind German and Japanese slave-labor policies in overrun countries of Europe and the Far East.

In a 10,000-word statement on "Slave Labor and Deportation," released in London and New York, the agency said the number of enslaved foreign workers in Germany which "cannot accurately be gauged . . . . must reach 7,000,000."

The report also said there were indications that 5 000,000 North Chinese laborers had been turned into forced labor in Manchuria or Japan by the end of 1942.

Besides bolstering current war production totalitarian slave-labor practices were designed to weaken "the national vitality of the countries to be ruled by victorious Axis or to be fought against in the next war, which the Axis powers plan if they lose this one" the report said.

The agency said the Germans, baulked in their efforts to recruit manpower in occupied territories through cajolery and propaganda, had resorted to conscription and mass deportations, "often with extreme penalties for resistance."

An estimated 200,000 French and between 80,000 and 100,000 Netherlands men were in hiding to escape the Nazi labor call-up, it said.

In describing the operation of the Nazi forced-labor system the report said:

"Many hundreds of thousands of Soviet prisoners of war and civilians — men, women and even children — have been forcibly deported to Germany, to work in German war industries and for individual German citizens to whom they have been virtually sold at slave markets."

"Hogging or decapitation of recalcitrants" have been used by the Japanese to spur forced labor in Java, it is stated.

Other evidences of the Japanese program cited in the report included a decree ordering 8,972 00 Filipinos to do one day's work a week without pay and the forced employment of Burmese oil field workers at less than one-sixth their daily wage rate before the occupation.

Listed among the German conscripted slave labor supply on the basis of estimates from 1942 to the present were: 500,000 to 600 000 Belgians; more than 900,000 Czechs; 60,000 to 65,000 Greeks, of whom 40,000 were deported to Bulgaria; 420,000 Netherlanders, of whom 40,000 were sent to Belgium and Northern France; 120,000 Norwegians, 1,700 000 Poles, 710,000 Soviet Ukraine citizens and at least 200 000 Yugoslavs.

—V—

The Germans have forbidden a performer in a Danish circus to appear any more, because he launched what he called "a new war dance." It consisted of one step forward and two backward.

A German officer confiscated a map from a Danish shoemaker, charging him with "minimal propaganda." The map was one of Denmark, on which the German officer thought the southern border was shown provocatively far down, so he had it sent to Copenhagen for investigation. There a small detail was noted discovered. The map was from the year 1644.

Sharp then wrapped up a large stone and without paying postage sent it to McTavish with the following note: "This great weight rolled off my mind when I read your good news."

OBITUARIES

THE LATE MRS. S. C. THOMAS

The death occurred suddenly on Friday, August 18th at Belleville General Hospital, of Hannah Amelia Ashley, widow of the late Samuel Charles Thomas. Although in ill-health for some years, her sudden passing came as a great shock to her family and friends. Of a sweet and retiring disposition she was beloved of all who knew her. Born at Sydenham, Ontario, of U. E. L. stock, she was the youngest daughter of the late Rachel Hagerman and Abram Ashley. Mrs. Thomas was married in 1893 to the late Samuel Thomas, living in Sydenham until 1907, when they moved to Tweed. In 1911 she and Mr. Thomas came to Deseronto to reside. They lived there until coming to live with their daughter, Mrs. Clinton Rendell.

She was predeceased by her husband in 1939, one daughter, Vivian, in 1912, and her only son, Roy in November, 1943. She is survived by an only daughter, Mrs. Clinton Rendell (Helen), Deseronto Road, and one sister, Mrs. Ella Harker, Sydenham. The funeral was held from her late residence on Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The service was in charge of the Rev. F. O. Robson. Interment was at Sydenham cemetery.

Flower-bearers were nephews of the deceased, Gordon Harker, James and Stuart Thomas, John and Reuben Clarke. The pall-bearers were near neighbours, Messrs. Escott Rose, Harold McCaul, Irvine Barker Percy VanVlack, George Magee and Claude Allenbrack.

JOHN WESLEY DEWITT

On Friday, July 28th, 1944 John Wesley Dewitt died suddenly at his home, Carman, Manitoba. He was born northwest of Forest Mills, near Leinster, on July 16th, 1870. He was one of a family of nine born to Mr and Mrs. Martin Dewitt both of whom died several years ago. Mrs. Dewitt's maiden name was Letitia Sexsmith.

John lived on the old homestead until he was 18 years of age and then the wanderlust struck him and he went out West visiting several places amongst others, Morden, Man. After a time he returned to his old home in Ontario, for a visit, but he finally went West again and settled on a farm near Carman, Man., among several old Ontario friends. In the year 1899 he married Livia Ellen Kennedy, who died 24 years ago. They raised one daughter, Mrs. T. Llowarch (Idris), who still resides on the old homestead. Mr. Dewitt engaged in farming and stock raising and made a fine success of his undertakings.

After the funeral, which was held on July 30th, his body was brought to Napanee, to lie in Riverside Cemetery by the side of his late wife, and father and mother, and one sister, Mrs Mary Ann Kerr. On the arrival of his body in Napanee August 2nd it was taken to the Wartman Undertaking Parlors, where another service was conducted by Rev. C. D. McLellan of Grace Church, and was very largely attended.

He leaves to mourn his loss one daughter, Idris Llowarch and her little daughter, Livy Ellen; three sisters, Mrs. James Turnbull, Mrs. A. D. Snider and Mrs. Michael McCullough. One sister, Mrs. Mary Ann Kerr, predeceased him a couple of years ago. Two other sisters all reside in Napanee. He also leaves two brothers, Burley D-witt of British Columbia and Ira D-witt, of Clearwater, British Columbia.

At Napanee the pall-bearers were old boyhood friends, Messrs. James Bowen, Ed. Hewitt and John Donovan. David Brown, John Wilson and Wellington Craig.

Maurice E. Ungar Died Suddenly, Minneapolis

Word was received in Napanee last week of the sudden death at Minneapolis, Minnesota of Maurice E. Ungar, aged 37, only son of Mr and Mrs. Elgin Ungar, former residents of Napanee.

Mr. and Mrs. Ungar and their son resided in Napanee for some years, but returned to Minneapolis their former home, several years ago.

No details of the death of their son were given except that it was sudden.

WEDDING BELLS

WRIGHT - BAKER

Attractively decorated with ferns and mid-summer flowers, was the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Baker, Moscow, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on the afternoon of August 23rd, when their only daughter, Kathryn Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Wellington Merrill, the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wright, of Yarker. Rev. G. T. McKenzie of Plainfield, officiated and the wedding march was played by Mrs. T. Armstrong, Moscow.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in floor-length white sheer appliqued with white satin and wore a shoulder - length veil and carried a semi cascade bouquet of pink roses.

The couple's only attendants were Miss Lena Baker, sister of the bride, who acted as flower girl, and Connie and Joan Ash, nieces of the groom, who were ring bearers.

The reception which followed, the bride's mother, Mrs. C. A. Baker, and the groom's mother, Mrs. J. M. Wright, were hostesses. Those assisting at the reception were Mrs. R. W. Freeman, Yarker, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Baker, Moscow, Miss Hilda Henderson, The Ridge; Mrs. Ralph Thompson, Enterprise; Miss Winnifred Eckhardt and Miss Doris Hamilton, of Camden East, Mrs. Roy Judge, Moscow, and Mr. Neil Forsyth, Yarker.

For the wedding trip to points west the bride travelled in a navy blue suit with white accessories. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Wright will reside in Yarker.

Is Mary still looking for her ideal man?

Goodness, no! She's too busy looking for a husband.

Happiness grows at our own firesides, and is not to be picked in stranger's gardens. —Douglas Jerrold.

Red Cross Workers Face Increased Rates

Toronto Aug. 25. — "Let us brace ourselves to do our duty and bear ourselves that if the British Commonwealth and Empire last for a thousand years, men will say 'this was their finest hour.'" It was during the dark and seemingly hopeless days of June, 1940 that Winston Churchill addressed these words to his people.

Women in Red Cross have carried on loyally through the war years. As a result of the work of Canadian women, the National Women's War Work Committee last year distributed over 13,000,000 articles, more than 11,000,000 of which went overseas, and more than 1/00,000 were intended for civilian relief overseas.

With news of Allied victories overseas and the great sweep towards victory, there has arisen in the minds of many women the idea "the war is nearly over — we need not do any more work for the Red Cross."

Quite on the contrary, there is a greater need than ever today for faithful Red Cross women to complete their task. Women's War Work quotas are high; Ontario Division of Red Cross is being asked for greatly increased quantities of hospital dressings. There will be a tremendous need for every kind of garment when the Red Cross begins its work of the rehabilitation of Europe.

I. O. D. E. NEWS

I.O.D.E. MOTHERS' CORNER

The Mothers' Corner at I. P. S. Airport has been moved to the Drill Hall, where there is great activity and you can see young airmen deeply engrossed in books or newspapers, quite unaware of the volley-ball game in progress, the badminton game, the wrestling, the singers and pianoforte music from another corner. Workers, this week, were Mrs. Bruyea, Sr., Mrs. Frank Marsh, Mrs. LeBrun, Mrs. Herbert Knuth, and Mrs. George Fisher.

WAR WORK MEETINGS

The room to be occupied by the I.O.D.E for future war work meetings, was opened on Thursday afternoon. The room, newly decorated is on the ground floor on the left-hand side at the front of the Armouries. Workers are earnestly urged to come to recover time lost during the cessation of work meetings and new workers and visitors are cordially invited. Tea will be served at four o'clock.

THE NAVY LEAGUE TAG - DAY SEPTEMBER 16TH

The Navy League of Canada is again holding its tag day in our municipality on Saturday, September 16, and we wish them every success in this patriotic effort on behalf of merchant seamen. We live in peace in this community while our brothers, fathers and sons fight the battle of both not only on the sea, but also on land and in the air and it is our duty to support every effort, in order to strengthen their morale so that the victory may be ours and not Hitler's.

The Navy League has made marvellous contributions to our fighting naval men and our merchant seamen and its sixteen hostels and recreation centres have added greatly towards the welfare and comfort of these men of the sea. It is interesting to note that during 1943 more than five million seamen crossed the thresholds of The Navy League hostels and were given good meals and comfortable sleeping accommodation were provided at cost, while hot and cold shower baths, medical and nursing services, recreation and pleasing entertainment, and many other services were given at no cost to seamen. When these men leave The Navy League hostels they do so with courage in their hearts and thankfulness because of the generosity of Canadian people for all that they have received.

The Department of Naval Affairs have proclaimed time and again that the efforts of the Navy League have done much to keep our seamen on the sea; in keeping their morale high and their courage undaunted in the great battle of the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Navy League, like the Naval Department, give the fullest praise and thanks to our men who have so nobly stood by their duty to their King and Country and it is plainly our duty to give this organization the support that is needed in order to carry on this great undertaking. Only recently the gross loss of merchant seamen by popular vote completely outlawed strikes by our merchant seamen.

The taggers for the Navy League in this community will feel that they have performed a noble and patriotic service if every citizen gives them the support which they need at this time. We must not allow this opportunity to pass for it forms the final link in the chain that stretches from this community to our brave men of the seas, carrying our concrete 'thank you' for the tremendous service they are rendering in protecting and serving us, for if it were not for these men, the battles of this war might well be fought on the streets, lanes, highways and fields of our own country.

Let us rise to this task and carry out the noble traditions of Lord Nelson who said so many years ago, "England expects that every man this day will do his duty."

It was getting very close to the time for the celebrated guest to make his speech. The chairman, looking about the table, came over to the speaker and whispered, "Shall we let them enjoy themselves a little longer, or do you think you'd better begin your speech now?"

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Plump, juicy and blushing red are home grown tomatoes and now's the time when they are at their best. Sliced, stuffed, or in a cocktail—serve them in every way you can. You won't have a chance like this for another year.

How to can tomatoes: Scald peel and core. Leave whole or cut in quarters.

COLD PACK: Pack raw. Pack solidly in sterilized jars. Add one teaspoon salt per quart. Adjust lids and process in boiling water bath for 45 minutes. Or, a salad tomato which stays whole, pack peeled ones into hot sterilized jars, fill with hot tomato juice (made by steeping some tomatoes and straining; add salt and process only 35 minutes.

OPEN KETTLE: Heat tomatoes to boiling point. Add one teaspoon salt per quart. Boil twenty minutes. Pack hot in sterilized jars. Seal at once. (There is more loss of Vitamin C with this method.)

Tomato Aspic

Four cups fresh cooked tomatoes, one-third cup chopped onions, one-quarter cup chopped celery leaves, one tbsp bay leaf, two whole cloves, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons of sugar, two tablespoons (2 envelopes unflavored gelatine) one-quarter cup of cold water, three tablespoons of lemon juice.

Combine tomatoes, onions, celery leaves bay leaf, cloves salt, and sugar. Simmer twenty minutes; strain. There should be three and one-third cups. Soften gelatine in cold water; dissolve in hot tomato mixture. Add lemon juice. Pour into greased mold; chill in electric refrigerator, unmold on crisp lettuce. Serve with old-fashioned potato salad.

Stuffed Tomato Salad

Six medium sized tomatoes, half-cup of peas (green, cooked), one-quarter cup chopped celery, one-quarter cup of diced cucumber, salad dressing.

Scald and peel tomatoes. Cut a slice from the top and hollow out with a spoon. Mix the tomato pulp and salad dressing with the peas, chopped celery and cucumber and fill the tomatoes with this mixture. Lay the slice of tomato on top and garnish with hard-cooked egg yolks forced through a coarse sieve.

Tomato Sauce

One and one-half cups tomatoes, one slice onion, one sprig parsley one stalk celery, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, half-teaspoon salt. Two tablespoons bacon fat two tablespoons flour

Cook the first six ingredients together ten minutes. Strain. Melt fat, add flour and when smooth add tomato juice. Cook five minutes.

Fried Green Tomatoes

Slice unripe tomatoes in half-inch slices, season. Do not peel. Dip in egg, then in bread crumbs, and sauté in bacon fat until nicely browned. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Serve at once.

Now is the time to make fruit purées and ones that are juicy but not soggy. The secret of a delectable fruit pie is in the baking. Bake in a preheated electric oven at 425 deg. F. for only ten minutes, then move the indicator down to 350 deg. F. for the remaining 20 to 35 minutes. If you have a regulator which does not reset, then turn the top oven element, off and the lower switch to medium as the oven temperature is reduced about 15 deg. F. in ten minutes. It is quite important to maintain a constant heat for the next half hour. When the troops are home for dinner and there is more than one pie to make place two or three in at a temperature of 450 deg. to 475 deg. F. but lower to 350 deg. F. in fifteen minutes. Serve as quickly as possible to prevent a "soaking" crust.

Applescotch Pie

Three-quarters cup brown sugar, three-quarters cup corn syrup, three-quarters cup water, seven cups sliced apples, two teaspoons vinegar one - quarter cup flour, one - eighth teaspoon salt, two tablespoons butter one teaspoon vanilla extract, one recipe bran pastry.

Combine the corn syrup, water and vinegar; bring to boiling point. Add the apples and simmer gently until tender but unbroken. Remove apples and cool. Combine the sugar flour and salt and add to the syrup. Mix well, and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add the butter and flavoring. Cool. Place apples in pie pan lined with bran pastry. Bake in a moderate electric oven (425 deg. F.), about thirty-five minutes.

Bran Pastry

One-quarter cup prepared breakfast bran, one and one-half cups cake or pastry flour, half-teaspoon salt half-cup shortening, four tablespoons cold water (more or less).

Roll the bran until fine; combine with sifted flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add water a little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together. Roll out on a lightly floured board to about one-eighth inch in thickness.

Deep Dish Plum Pie

Two tablespoons cornstarch, four cups plums, washed and pitted, one-quarter teaspoon salt one cup sugar, one tablespoon melted butter, plain pastry.

Combine cornstarch, plums, salt, sugar and melted butter Pour filling into deep baking dish. Roll pastry to one-eighth inch thickness. Fold and cut slits to permit escape of steam Place crust over filling trimming off surplus. Bake in electric oven of 450 deg. F. for ten minutes, then reduce heat to 350 degree F. and bake 30 to 35 minutes longer

Peach Pie

Plain pastry, two and one-half to three cups sliced peaches, one-half cup granulated sugar two tablespoons of cornstarch, one-eighth teaspoon cinnamon, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon lemon juice, one teaspoon butter, milk.

Line an eight-inch pie plate with pastry and fill with the peaches. Mix cornstarch, sugar cinnamon, salt and lemon juice and sprinkle over the peaches. Dot with the butter. Moisten the edges of the pastry with water. Roll upper crust one inch larger than the pie plate, fold in half, and make three half-inch slits in the centre. Place on top of filled crust and unfold. Turn edge of upper crust under lower crust and press edges with fork dipped in flour. Brush top with milk. Bake in electric oven at 425 deg. F. for twenty minutes, then reduce heat to 350 deg. F. for twenty minutes.

TAKE A TIP:

1. Reminders for summer - time foods are corn on the cob, sliced cucumber with sour cream, summer squash with cheese, green lima beans and peppercress.

2. Save some fresh chili sauce to use — add it to a welsh rarebit spaghetti and other cheese right dishes.

3. Beat every sauce with the whip or dover beater and you will always have rich, creamy ones.

4. A few nasturtium leaves add more than decoration when they are put in cheese sandwiches, or with sliced cucumbers.

4. Wringers for washing machines are valuable. May we remind you of the simple precautions that prevent service work and loss of this labour saver.

Wringers should be set at the proper pressure for the thickness of the clothes. Too heavy a load may lock the rolls and even strip the gears. As soon as the "wrinkle out" is finished release the rollers. Oil ruins rubber. Do not spill any on the rubber parts of the machine — if this happens clean off immediately with soap and water. Do not use any abrasive on stained rubber. Try to take as much as possible off with baking soda and water.

Home - Grown Tomatoes Add Color And Zest To Any Meal

There's keen rivalry among wartime gardeners just now; which of the neighbours had the first ripe tomato, whose are the biggest, who has the most on a single plant! And, of course, never were tomatoes so fine in flavor as those grown by every proud wartime gardener in the land.

There's a good reason for the fine flavor of home grown tomatoes; it's because the tomatoes are left to ripen fully on the vine and eaten shortly after picking. From breakfast to supper, tomatoes can appear in a variety of ways. A lot of people nowadays are starting the day with a dish of sliced tomatoes instead of an orange. Today's tomato recipes from the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture include a variation of the ever popular tomato juice cocktail in the form of Tomato Freeze.

Tomato Pepper Sandwiches

Chop and mix together in equal amounts peeled tomatoes and green peppers. Let stand one half hour, drain well, season with salt, and spread between slices of buttered bread. Save the liquor and use in vegetable juice cocktail or to thin salad dressing.

Tomato Freeze

Five tomatoes, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sugar, two teaspoons vinegar, half-teaspoon onion juice. Peel and chop tomatoes. Press through a fine sieve to remove all seeds. Add salt, sugar, vinegar and onion juice. Freeze to a soft mush Six servings.

Escalloped Tomatoes

Eight large tomatoes, one-quarter teaspoon salt, pepper, two teaspoons sugar, one small onion, finely chopped, two cups breadcrumbs, and two tablespoons fat. Peel tomatoes, cut in thick slices. Arrange half the tomatoes in greased casserole. Sprinkle with half the salt, pepper, sugar and chopped onion. Cover with one cup breadcrumbs on top Dot with fat. Bake 25 minutes in a moderately slow oven, 325 degrees Fahrenheit. Six servings.

Jellied Cheese Tomato Salad

Two tablespoons gelatine, half-cup cold water, seven or eight medium tomatoes (about 2 lbs.) salt to taste, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, two tablespoons lemon juice, one and one-half cups grated cheese, salad dressing or milk to moisten cheese. Fully soak gelatine in cold water. Chop tomatoes and rub through a sieve to make two and one-half cups of juice. Add salt and Worcestershire sauce. Heat to boiling point, add soaked gelatine and stir until gelatine is dissolved. Add lemon juice. Pour half the mixture into an oiled mould and chill until firm. Whip cheese with enough boiled dressing, mayonnaise or milk to make light and fluffy. Season to tates and spread over the set jelly to within one-quarter inch of the sides of the mould. Pour remaining half of the jelly mixture over the cheese and chill until firm. Unmould and serve on lettuce. Six to eight servings.

Stuffed Tomatoes

Six large, firm tomatoes, one cup diced bologna, one cup cooked corn (cut from the cob), half-teaspoon of salt, dash of pepper, three tablespoons bread or cracker crumbs, one tablespoon butter. Cut a slice from the top of each tomato and scoop out the pulp. Combine pulp with bologna, corn, and seasonings. Fill tomato cups with the mixture. Sprinkle with crumbs and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. until thoroughly heated, about fifteen minutes.

Employers Required To Check on Male Employees Under Mobilization Reg.

Ottawa, Aug 18 — An Order signed on August 15th by Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour, requires employers of male employees to check on the documents in the possession of any new employees being engaged, so that the employer may be satisfied that the man has not failed to comply with Mobilization Regulations.

While each employer is required to check on all new employees he engages in the future he is only required to report to the Mobilization Registrars on men thought to be in the designated age classes who fail to furnish evidence that they have complied with the military call-up, or that because of marriage or for other reason, they do not have to comply.

The employer must report on any doubtful case within seven days of the time he engages the man. Even though a man does not possess documents to show that he has complied with the regulations, the employer is not prohibited from hiring him, providing that any other Selective Service regulations have been complied with.

By an Order of the Minister of Labour signed several months ago, all employers had to submit a check on their male employees by May 1st this year. Under the present order employers are required to report by August 29th, to the nearest Mobilization Registrar, on any employees hired since May 1st, who do not possess the necessary documents.

Employers in business and industry are being notified by mail of their responsibilities under the order just signed, while the necessary report forms are available on application at any Employment and Selective Service Offices. These Local Offices will also assist employers by furnishing information regarding the procedure under the check-up.

COLLABORATION IN FRANCE

A natural outcome of the complementary work done by the R. A. F. Bomber Command by night and the United States Eighth Air Force by day against Germany is the air force's collaboration in France. The U. S. Eighth and Ninth Air Forces join with R. A. F. Bomber Command and the Second Tactical Air Force to work against the Germans. For the purpose of air support there has been no point of demarcation between the British and American sectors of the Normandy front.

Although administrative and supply considerations have caused American and British air units to be allotted as bases in sectors held by their respective armies, and calls for immediate air support have therefore generally been best answered by air units in the vicinity, pooled-firing RAF Typhoons have destroyed scores of tanks opposed to Americans. Likewise, American P-47 Thunderbolts have done some excellent dive-bombing on parts of the British front.

This joint endeavor has been shown to best advantage in big attacks. For example, recently British heavy and American medium bombers worked together over an area south of Caumont into which the British were about to thrust. In this operation, not only did the Allies co-operate in a joint effort, but also in an exchange of ideas. On this day, there were low clouds making visible bombing dangerous. Therefore the Ninth Air Force's B-26 Marauders used the RAF's Pathfinder method of putting down marker flares over the targets and bombing from the cover of clouds on the markers' glare. Bomber Command's Lancasters and Halifaxes, on the other hand, resorted to the visual method more often employed by the Americans, coming down below the cloud base at 2,000 feet to do their bombing.

Two co-ordinating instruments shape Allied bombing policy. One is a committee composed of equal numbers of American and British Air Force officers who allocate the bigger bombing targets between the two air forces. The other is the frequent meeting of the commanding generals of the American Air Forces with the commanders-in-chief of the R. A. F. Commands, to discuss concerted action in support of the Allied Expeditionary Force.

From these two bodies comes a terrific concentration of air strength when it is needed, and a real economy of air effort, by weighing the target against the weapons available for its reduction. From them also comes the closest possible relation of air strokes to the general situation in Normandy and Germany, and wherever else in the west the seales can be weighed against the enemy.

In France there is now a line of broken bridges, railroad trucks, junctions, and rolling stock, running Ireland from Caen to Paris. Both nations had a hand in that — all types of aircraft from the biggest heavies to the lightest fighter-bombers have taken their share in isolating the battlefield.

Who did it matters less than that it was conceived as a whole and achieved with skill. Tactical and strategic bombing have united in robbing the enemy of his military mobility in the west. And on the proper occasions, tactical and strategic air forces come together over the battlefield to jolt him from his positions.

THE ROCKPHOON— The Latest Tank Buster

BY ALAN RANDAL

The Rocket Projectile, used with such devastating effect against German armor in Normandy, began its service career in Britain as an aerial weapon in the dark days of the great raids.

It ranks today as the Allies No. 1 tank-busting weapon, and Canadian airmen flying rocket-firing Typhoons have found the Germans now hate and fear the 44 pound of all. Group Capt. Pat Daland D.S.O., D.F.C., of Kingston, Ontario, who helped in the early plans for the aerial training in the use of this arm calls it a "cracker-jack weapon against tanks."

The rocket projectile was first produced in Britain by Sir Alwyn Crow, originator of projectile development for the Ministry of Supply in 1940. It was to fill the gap left by Britain's lack of guns to combat the Germans' tanks. The rocket projectiles with which typhoons have destroyed many German tanks, and a great deal of road transport in France, are reported in precisely the same principles as those evolved four years ago by Dr. Crow.

They were a triumphant success in close support of the ground forces in battle on the way day the last Hurricanes were delivered to the R. A. F. from the factory assembly belts almost two years to the day from the moment they were first put into experimental practice on Hurricanes.

Most responsible for the development of the rocket projectile in its present stage is Group Capt. John D'Arcy Baker-Carr, A.F.C. He and his "backroom boys," worked unremittingly to put the weapon across.

Experiments leading up to present R. P. development began in August 1942 when Group Capt. Baker-Carr visualised it as a ground support weapon.

In February 1942 Group Capt Baker-Carr hit a locomotive stand in a desolate part of the English countryside with three out of four R. P. But the operational people were not quite convinced it would be equally efficacious against a fast-moving target.

A Convenater tank was stuck up as a target and the R. P. knocked the turret clean off. Then they knocked the turret off a Churchill and the experts were convinced.

Two weeks after D-Day, a flight of Typhoons on armed reconnaissance over France were given a number of alternative targets.

The Typhoon pilots found none of the targets specified but found three Tiger tanks and knocked them all on their sides out of action.

The 'Rockphoon" had arrived.

The disgruntled shareholder was venting his wrath on the chairman of the company meeting.

"Sir," he said, "I think you're the biggest rascal unhung."

The chairman retained his dignity. "Sir," he said, 'you forget yourself!"

CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR OVERSEAS FORCES SEPT. 15 TO OCT. 25

"Do not open until Christmas."—That exciting phrase should soon be making its appearance on parcel mail despite the fact that many places in Canada are just recovering from the hottest spell on record. Postmaster General William P. Mulock advises that it is time to make plans for Christmas gift parcels to members of the Armed Forces Overseas. The Christmas mailing period this year is

SEPTEMBER 15TH TO OCTOBER 25TH

Naturally parcels sent to those serving in the more remote theatres of war should be sent the earliest. Suggested "deadline" mailing dates are:

September 15 — The Far East, India, Burma, Ceylon, etc.

October 5 — The Middle East area, Egypt, Iran, Iraq, Syria, etc.

October 25 — The United Kingdom and France.

In view of the rapid progress of the war these dates might possibly be subject to change.

Last Christmas (Oct.-Nov.-Dec.) over 12,000,000 lbs. of parcel mail alone were despatched to the Forces Overseas from Canada. This year an even greater volume is expected. . . Therefore, Early Mailing Is Necessary to enable Postal officials to cope with the handling and to carry out arrangements for transportation on trains and ships.

A suggestion to further help our boys and girls on Active Service receive their gifts from home is to voluntarily cut down, as far as possible, on the size of the package, even though the maximum weight at the special rate of 12 cents per pound is 11 lbs. This will enable authorities to ship a greater number of parcels in the cargo space available.

The bitter disappointment caused by late arrival of Christmas gifts can be spared our Fighting Services too, if citizens will give the more careful attention to correct addressing and proper packing.

Each parcel should be carefully packed in corrugated shock proof containers, the contents compact so that they will not shake loose and break out of the package. Then the parcels should be wrapped in several layers of wrapping paper, and securely tide with strong twine.

On no account should "Shoe Boxes" be used as containers — they easily crush and break.

Avoid using fancy coloured Christmas paper as an outside wrapper, or coloured ribbon to tie.

For added security, parcels may be sewn in strong cotton or similar fabric.

Any-substance likely to leak, spread and damage the mails, if sent at all, must be enclosed in sealed metal containers with lids securely soldered on — then surrounded with absorbent material in corrugated cardboard and securely strapped and tied.

Fresh fruits, grapes, pears, etc., or other items likely to spoil are not acceptable.

DO NOT MAIL GLASS JARS OR BOTTLES.

The mailing of matches . . safety matches, lighter fluid or any other inflammable substance is prohibited by law.

A completed Customs Declaration should be attached to each parcel.

All mail should be fully and clearly addressed in ink, without misleading abbreviations. Place a return address on the cover of each parcel and also a slip among the contents giving the name and address of the sender and the complete Armed Forces address that appears on the parcel.

STATEMENT MADE ON U-BOATS

The joint statement on U-boats, recently by the President and the Prime Minister, is given particular significance by the success of the American forces in Brittany.

Not only have the Germans been losing more U-boats than the number of Allied ships they have been sinking but they have also been losing the U-boat ports, or at least having them so isolated that they must become unusable in a very short space of time. For the three most important Bay of Biscay U-boat ports — Brest, Lorient, and St. Nazaire— are within the area of the American cleaning up operations and can no longer be kept supplied by the Germans over land.

Six of the eight U-boat flotillas operating from western France are stationed in these-three ports, which have been elaborately equipped with great concrete shelters and repair equipment specially designed for U-boats, all of which must now be abandoned. The other two U-boat ports in the Bay of Biscay are La Pallice and Bordeaux. If the U-boats from the Brittany ports escape to them to sea they will put very heavy strain on La Pallice and Bordeaux. Furthermore the British Navy has been destroying ships in which the Germans have been trying to take off the highly skilled personnel.

Despite the loss of the U-boats and the loss of these ports, it cannot be assumed that these are the final blows which will end all U-boat activities. It is not impossible that long-range U-boats may still be able to operate from the North Sea and the Baltic, but the fact remains that the U-boat weapon which was to have won the war for the Germans has now been reduced to almost negligible proportions.

JOHN GEALE DALY WARDEN OF COUNTY DIED SUDDENLY

Was President of Daly Tea Company

John Geale Daly, Warden of the County of Lennox and Addington, Reeve of the Town of Napanee and President of The Daly Tea Company, died suddenly at his home, John Street, Napanee, early Sunday morning. He had been at business up to the week end, and although not in the best of health for some time, his death was quite unexpected.

Mr. Daly was one of the best known men in the town and was widely known throughout Ontario and other parts of Canada, because of his long connection with The Daly Tea Co., which was founded by his father, the late George Daly, and Dennis Daly, in 1854. He was the last of the three sons of George Daly and had been connected with the company all their lives. He was predeceased by his brothers, Herbert, some years ago, and William, A. last October.

J. G. Daly was born in Richmond Hill about eighty years ago at his father's home on the Deseronto Road, about four miles west of Napanee. After the death of his father the family moved to Napanee, where Mr. Daly went to the public school and the Collegiate. When a young man he entered the tea business and for fourteen years was Western Canada representative of the firm. He returned to live in Napanee some years ago and for the past fifteen years had taken an active interest in the public life of the town. He entered the Town Council first in 1928 when he was elected by acclamation as Councillor. In 1931 he was elected mayor of the town, which position he held for a year. In 1934 he was again elected as a Councillor and in 1935 and since 1937 had been Reeve. Last January his long municipal career was recognized when he was honored by his colleagues in the County Council by election as Warden, which position he held at the time of his death.

Mr. Daly was a member of Union Lodge, A.F. & A.M., Napanee, for many years. He was a member of Rameses Temple, Toronto, the Scottish Rite of Kingston and the Preceptory in Belleville. For some years he was an active member of the Napanee Rotary Club and was a member of St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church. He is survived by his wife, formerly Susan Florence Richards, one daughter, Anne, Mrs. Fred McCracken, Port Erie and two sisters, Miss Georgia Daly, Napanee and Lady Jessie Twining, London, England.

The funeral was conducted at St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church on Tuesday afternoon, by the rector, Ven. Archdeacon R. J. Somerville. Archdeacon R. J. Somerville. In attendance at the service, besides the members of the family, were the members of the Napanee Council, the County Council, and county officials, members of the Masonic Order and business associates.

Following the church service interment was made at Riverside Cemetery.

The active bearers were Messrs. W. S. Reid, M. P. Graham, George Keller, Rowson Humphrey, Everett Small and A. L. Dafoe. The honorary bearers were Messrs. W. K. Hubbell, W. J. Wiggins, H. L. VanLuven, W. W. McCabe, T. D. Creighton, W. A. McLeod.

COAL CONTROLLER WARNS-'BUY EARLY'

Despite the mildness of last winter, Canada faces the possibility of a shortage of coal again this winter, Coal Controller warned recently. "If ordering is delayed until cold weather sets in, delivery may take days or even weeks.

He suggested that Canadian furnaces be thoroughly cleaned before the fall. It is important that scale be removed from heating surfaces in the furnace or boiler and that chimney and smoke pipes get a good cleaning.

Adequate weather stripping and caulking are necessary reinforcements for first-line defenses against winter weather.

Above all, the Controller warned, buy the coal bins ready for the fuel that has been ordered. If both hard and soft coal are being obtained separately, have the necessary bins ready and cleaned for each.

"Delivery men everywhere are overworked these days," said the Controller, "so do everything to speed up their job. Ask your dealer to deliver your quota and accept whatever suitable fuel he may have available."

HEAVY DAMAGE AT CORNWALL BY EARTHQUAKE

Earth Tremor Felt Throughout Ontario

Dominion Observatory officials said a recheck of records established the epicentre of earth tremors early Tuesday morning about sixty miles southeast of Ottawa, or about eighteen miles northwest of Cornwall, where heavy damage was caused.

Officials said the first tremor, lasting for about an hour, came at 12:39-01 a.m. EDT, and was followed by two after shocks. The first after shock was recorded at 4:31:05 a.m., and a stronger shock at 4:51:22 a.m.

The first tremors were so violent they left only a blurred record on the Dominion seismograph. W. W. Doree, assistant seismotologist said the record "lasted for an hour with the peak disturbance continuing for twenty seconds."

It was at Cornwall the heaviest damage and the longest duration of shock was reported.

Labor Minister Mitchell said that "everything possible" will be done to help Cornwall authorities repair houses and buildings damaged in the earthquake.

So far there are no reports of deaths, but buildings were heavily damaged at Cornwall. While the shocks at 12:40 a.m. EDT struck as far west as London, Ont., and north to Capreol, twenty miles north of Sudbury, the picentre was not far from Cornwall and the manufacturing town forty miles south of Ottawa experienced two other tremors at 4:29 and 4:50 a.m. The last one was said to be "severe."

Residents of Cornwall desbribed the quake as being more than a minute in duration, accompanied by a rumbling sound. Many hundreds of Cornwall citizens fled into the streets in night attire. A number of them fainted and physicians were called out. The walls of buildings were caved in, and heavy concrete blocks were tumbled off some structures into the streets below.

V

FIREMEN LABOR NINE HOURS WITH COAL PILE FIRE

On Friday afternoon the Napanee Pire Brigade had quite a battle with a fire in a large coal pile in the yards of The Napanee Fuel and Supply Company. From about one o'clock in the afternoon until after nine in the evening, the firemen were kept busy playing two streams of water on the smouldering coal pile. After moving quite a lot of the coal the fire, which was smouldering under the surface was checked.

Little Improvement In Supply Situation

Due to the fact that production of war supplies must be maintained without slackening until the last round of the war has been won the civilian supply situation shows no signs of rapid improvement, D. Gordon, chairman of Prices Board, said in the course of a recent national broadcast. Nevertheless, he pointed out, Canadians after more than four years of the most horrible war in human history have not suffered hardship in respect of their standard of living. "We have been provided with almost everything we had in peacetime," he said "Our tables are well supplied. We are well clothed. Our stores are stocked with merchandise. And, above all, our country has been spared the horrors of actual conflict."

Priorities Apply To Canned Vegetables

Distribution of the 1944 pack of canned vegetables has been simplified by issuance of a Prices Board order which requires canners to reserve sufficient stocks for "priority claimants" such as the armed services, Red Cross parcels, ship's stores, etc., and for "preferred users." When these two groups have been looked after, the remainder of the pack will be placed on the general consumer market with, it is hoped, the very minimum of restrictions. Last winter, it will be remembered it was found necessary to restrict general distribution of canned vegetables.

This year's pack, however, is expected to be much larger than that of 1943.

Gibbard - Deseronto Series To Be Replayed

The Bayshore semi-final play-offs between Gibbard and Deseronto, which resulted in a win for each team, last week, have been ordered by members of the executive, to be replayed and the protests lodged by both teams, were thrown out.

The first two games were seven-innings affairs, and protests were lodged on the lateness in starting and the failure to appoint league umpires.

The first of the replays was played at Deseronto on Monday and resulted in a 5 to 3 win for the Redi-Heats. The second game is scheduled to be played Wednesday, in Napanee.

LIEUT. (NURSING SISTER) LAURA BOWEN, (Left), of Deseronto Road, and Lieut. (N.S.) Valerie Hora, of Kingston, are pictured above outside their quarters with the No. 3 Canadian Casualty Clearing Station in Normandy. — Lieut. Bowen is the daughter of Mrs. R. D. Bowen, of the Deseronto Road, and received her education at Deseronto High School and the Napanee Collegiate Institute. She graduated at Kingston General Hospital in 1938 and enlisted with the Canadian Forces in November, 1940. Miss Bowen went overseas in March, 1942, and has the distinction of being among the first eight Nursing Sisters to land in France on July 11th, 1944.

Child Injured By Mowing Machine At Roblin

Harold McFarlane, three-year-old son of Mrs. Gladys McFarlane, of Roblin, was admitted to the Kingston General Hospital Saturday evening, suffering from leg injuries received when he came in contact with the blades of a mowing machine which was operated by his father. It is not thought the child's condition is serious.

NAZI ODDITIES

After the attack on Hitler according to good Swedish sources, disturbances arose on German warships in the harbor of Sonderberg. South Jutland German troops were called in and much shooting was heard. When the roads into the town had been barred and the streets were guarded by the military, the ships sailed off and only smaller ship arrived, but on to two disturbances arose. All was not well among the troops either; the "Heimwehr" of the German minority in South Jutland was called up to search German soldiers in the streets "for their protection." Ten German officers fled that day from Flensborg into Denmark, and the border patrols were considerably increased.

German troops that were going to leave a town in North Jutland for the front were indignant that they were offered cars with straw in them and demanded passenger cars. This delayed their transport for a day.

A still further departure from the spirit of the old German Army was seen at Gladenberg in Jutland where the Germans have taken over an insane asylum for their barracks. The officers were having a drinking bout in the middle of which a committee arrived from the privates with the ultimatum that the party must either stop or the privates be invited to it. After some discussion the officers invited the privates.

During a question period following a lecture a man arose and put a foolish query to the speaker. The latter replied: "The logic of your question makes me think of another Can you tell me why fire engines are always red? You can't. Well, fire engines have four wheels and eight men Four and eight are twelve. Twelve inches make a foot. A foot is a ruler. Queen Elizabeth was a ruler. The Queen Elizabeth is the largest ship that sails the seven seas. Seas have fish. Fish have fins. The Finns fight the Russians. The Russians are Red. Fire engines are always pinkin.' Therefore fire engines are always red. I hope this answers your question also."

JOHN GEALE DALY

The passing of Mr. John Geale Daly removes from our town and community the last of a generation of "Dalys" who made a distinct contribution to its business life. Mr. Herbert Daly, Mr. W A. Daly and Mr. John Geale Daly were men who, having inherited a rather small but prosperous tea business, expanded and developed it until it became one of the best known in the Province. Mr. Herbert Daly died some years ago, Mr. W A. Daly died less than a year ago and now the last partner and brother, has gone.

The late Mr. Daly was prominent in local and municipal affairs. He took a great interest in the Town Council, of which he has been a member for a long time, and in the county, of which he had been elected Warden. To these public offices Mr. Daly gave the same thought and attention he gave to his own business. He was a familiar figure in the town and seemed to be a permanent part of it, so closely was his life integrated in all its affairs.

He will be greatly missed and mourned by all circles in the community.

FEEDING THE PEOPLE

A well devised and carefully planned method of getting the crops in has been undertaken by the Dominion and Provincial Governments. Listening over the radio, we hear, day after day, appeals to men and women, boys and girls to help harvest the crops. Faced with the prospect of the largest crop in her history, Canada is, as well, confronted with an acute labor shortage. What use is raising crops unless they can be successfully harvested and stored away. The Dominion Government and the Provincial Governments are working hand-in-hand on this problem. A campaign to recruit and transport workers is being carried on, the cost borne jointly by the Central Government and the Provincial Governments, on a fifty-fifty basis. Up to a total of $523,000 has been agreed on as the Dominion's share, and in addition an inter-Provincial transfer of farm labor has been arranged for which the Dominion Government has provided $300,000. Thus everything possible is being done to get the big crop harvested. In the final analysis, however, the success of the plan depends on men and women who are able to give some time to this needy work.

The need for food is greater than ever, and Canada is doing something to meet the need. In the August issue of "Canada at War" it is pointed out that since 1939, 400,000 men and 100,000 women have left the farms, about 25 per cent. of the personnel, and yet production has increased 50 per cent. Canada now stands third among the food producing nations of the world.

There are about 2,000,000,000 people on the Globe. Of these, L. B. Pearson, Canadian Minister to the United States says, two-thirds never have enough to eat, of the right sort of food. Then, he went on to say, in an address given over the CBC on Sunday night, that "Production of enough food for all is a simple matter, but there is no use asking farmers on this North American Continent to produce surplus food, and show them how to do it, if we mismanage our economy so that part of this food is thrown down the drain in order not to depress a market which is unable to absorb it." . . . . He said, further, that "We can produce and distribute enough of the right sort of food for every single person in the world, but only if we achieve some freedom from stupidity, prejudice and fear."

Mr. Pearson, who is an expert on the subject, was speaking of the post-war world. At the present time all the food we can produce is urgently needed for our troops, for the Mother Land, and the people in the occupied countries. But in the future, when these countries and other countries now at war settle down to produce their own food, we in Canada will be in a difficult position, having increased production so greatly, unless outlets are found. These can be found if, as Mr. Pearson says, we achieve first some freedom from stupidity, prejudice and fear.

THE AUTUMN TRECK

The opening of the Schools for the Fall and Winter terms is an annual event of more than passing importance. Here, in this country undisturbed by the conditions of war which have changed the life habits of large sections of people on the Globe, the children treck back to the institutions of learning. Browned with the Summer sun and wind and water, full of life and vigor from their vacation or their seasonal occupation, they take up the sterner duties of preparing for the morrow, with zest and enthusiasm.

We, in Ontario, have an excellent educational system. Every opportunity is given for children to get a good grounding in elementary and secondary education at the expense of the State. In recent years, the curricula have undergone radical changes, as the educational leaders and experts have sought to make education less abstract and more closely related to the child's actual life and environment.

In the clash of cultural ideals which has reached its climax in the world-shaking war, the leaders of education in the democracies pushed by public opinion, have had to give consideration to the training of youth in the fundamentals of our democratic way of life. Hitler made his phenomenal success in Germany by getting hold of the German youth and indoctrinating them in the super-race totalitarian ideas. He was successful in securing the almost fanatical allegiance of youth, largely by means of his control of the educational institutions. That he was able to change the whole mind of a nation in less than a generation, speaks volumes for the efficiency of modern means of propaganda and learning.

This success of Hitler has made it necessary to rethink education in this country. It is becoming increasingly recognized that the boys and girls who pass through the schools, should not only be taught the fundamentals of formal education and certain manual acrievements — they must be taught the principles on which democracy rests. They must be taught to believe in democracy, must know what democracy means, why we believe in it, why we fight for it.

This drives us back to the spiritual basis of our way of life. Beginning with certain grades, this year, the children will be taught religion. This will be done by the teachers. Those whose parents object will have the privilege of withdrawing. It is to be hoped that few, if any, will take advantage of this proviso. The Department of Education is busy preparing text books; some of these will be ready in time for work this Fall, others are in process of editing.

If we are to develop a generation of men and women who will have faith in democracy and who will try to make the democracy of the future worthy of all the sacrifices that are being made for it now, they will have to have a firm foundation on which to build their faith. That is the purpose in view in instituting religious education in the schools. It is to be hoped that the whole community and the teachers particularly will give whole-hearted support to this basic advance in our school curriculum.

APT PUPILS

The United Nations have proved themselves apt pupils of the lightning form of warfare inaugurated by the Germans when their mechanized forces sped into France, five years ago. At that time the world was aghast at the speed and definiteness with which the German armies overran France and Poland, Holland and Denmark, crushing all opposition and extending their borders and influence. But the events of the past three weeks have shown how well and how thoroughly the members of the United Nations learned the German technique and improved on it. The terrific speed with which the American, British and Canadian Forces have driven the German armies out of France, has exceeded that with which Germany overran France, five years ago. This sort of warfare is quite to the liking, particularly of the Americans and Canadians, practically all of whom have been brought up in an age of speed and in a country where speed was taken for granted. The young fellows speeding across France in jeeps and motorized vehicles of all kinds, rove cars back home, and often in their own yards, fashioned old cars out of all sorts of spare parts which they salvaged from the "boneyard." They were accustomed to speed, and when the opportunity came for them to satisfy their desire to "get going" they certainly made the most of it, on land, on sea and in the air. These young gaffers who used to make the night hideous with tooting horns, and alarm the older and more sedate members of the community by scooting around corners on two wheels of a rattle-trap tied together with hay wire, are now giving full rein to their desire for speed and incidentally are putting the fear of death into the best the German nation could produce. All wars, it has been said, are fought by the young—this one has been particularly adapted to youth—who are doing the job well, and in doing so, show a complete disregard for personal safety.

The world of justice, order, good government and democracy, is being saved for the future of the race by the youth of our nations.

HITLER'S BUSINESS ALLIES

BY WAVERLEY ROOT

By a curious stroke of irony, the revelations of the under - currents of treachery and plotting by magnates of industry and respected leaders of European countries which the United States, along with Great Britain, seem to prefer to keep secret when she brought pressure on the French National Committee in Algiers to postpone the trials of Marcel Peyrouton, Pierre - Etienne Flandin and Pierre Boisson seem likely to be exposed instead in the United States.

The suicide of Charles Bedaux in Miami Florida, when a court decision that he was an American citizen — he was born French, but had been naturalized, made it certain that he could be tried for treason in that country, can hardly be explained by fear of the verdict. It could be explained by the belief that he was cornered in a situation in which it would be impossible for him to avoid involving others — possibly persons so highly placed that he thought it better to take his own life, and thus remove the possibility of his giving testimony against them, even inadvertently, than to affront a court.

Bedaux was only one of a group of business men who were ambitious to combine their industrial power with political power, and who thereby set in motion forces so strong that their own lives became of minor importance when they came into conflict with them. Like modern Frankensteins, they were destroyed by their own monsters. They died some mysteriously, some by their own hands — and in the latter case, in circumstances which suggested that the idea of suicide might have been suggested to them by others as the only way out, if, indeed, their suicides were not simulated, as there was, in at least one case, a suspicion that it had been.

Why did they have to die? Because they knew too much. So much that they had to die by their own hands, or assent to their own destruction; for what they knew was so dangerous that they realized themselves they dared not tell it. What they could have told would have shaken governments, torn down the social, or economic or political structures which were the whole foundation of the sort of world they believed in. Some of these men could be—and were—traitors to their countries. They could not be traitors to the entire system which had had their lifetime devotion and service. Between moral suicide and physical suicide, they chose physical suicide. In that way they might still protect their families, friends, associates and allies. By failing to close their own mouths forever, they would not save themselves and they would ruin these as well.

Who were some of these other men who wanted to use the power of their money to bend nations to their will?

There was Alfred Loewenstein, of Belgium master of the iron and coal of the Ruhr and the Saar, of Spanish Steel and of Congo Rubber. He made himself a power behind the throne, and reaped the dread reward of holding too much power, and knowing too much about too many important persons. His private plane crossed the English Channel in 1928. He was aboard when it took off. He was not aboard when it landed. That is all that is known of the fate of Alfred Lowenstein.

There was Ivan Kreuger, of Sweden, the "match king." He reached the lordly state where, single-handed, he could issue loans to governments. He thought he held nations in the palm of his hand. Yet the time came when he realized that, inevitably, the fact would have to come out that he had issued duplicate bonds and that his economic empire was bankrupt. In 1932 he chose to commit suicide in Paris, before that revelation.

There was Serge Stavisky, of France. He built up a fortune by widespread corruption of high French officials. When the scandal of his financial manipulations threatened to, in 1934, police pursued him to Chamonix—and reported that he had put a bullet through his own head. Many persons believed differently. They suspected the police had killed him to protect the ministry. I made a careful study of the case at the time and my own conclusion was that Stavisky had committed suicide — but under such strong pressure that it amounted practically to suicide by order.

The pattern of the lives of these three men and of Bedaux was the same. To satisfy their insatiable appetite for money and the power that money gives, they had made guilty compacts with politicians. When their pursuit of gain brought them to grief, the danger arose that the revelation of their dealings would be shattering to the structures of governments. To save the political edifices they had short-sightedly undermined, they had to die by their own hands or otherwise.

But how do their deaths, and Bedaux' death, tie up with the war and with treasonable activity? That is a result of the unholy alliance between totalitarian governments and some big businessmen. . . .

On March 3, 1943, I wrote the first of a series of three columns titled: "Hitler's Business Allies." The second to that column was built on data provided by the suicide in Miami, Florida, of Charles Bedaux.

In the earlier columns I pointed out how certain big businessmen of France had prepared the defeat of their own country, had aided the Germans against their own countrymen, and finally, through the Vichy Government, had collected the reward of their labors — the acquirement of a stranglehold on all French business as the junior partners of the Germans. To these men, patriotism was a juvenile sentiment and democracy a hindrance to their own ambition for unlimited wealth and unlimited power.

Their alliance with totalitarianism against democracy was natural, for once they had reached the point of willingness to sweep aside every barrier to complete satisfaction of their own selfish designs, it was natural for them to find themselves in opposition to any government which had for its aim the protection of the many against the conspiracies of a few and the preservation of equality of opportunity for all. The insatiable greed of these men prompted them to try to impose upon their countrymen the arbitrary oppression of a tyranny which would prevent them from protecting themselves against predatory aims of the friends of the oppressing government — themselves. To create this situation, in which the political power would be employed for their private gain, they were willing, in France ,to allow Germany to defeat their own country.

One of these men was Charles Bedaux.

In how many ways Bedaux' case coincides with the methods used by the Nazis to prepare France for the slaughter can be seen by comparing his specific services to them with the general outlines of the great treachery which succeeded against France.

1 THE PLOT OF THE "SALONNARDS." One of the phenomenon of the pre-war period was the way in which "high society" was used to undermine the democracies with subtle Nazi propaganda. Most of the social luminaries who found excuses for Nazidom were a flutter-headed group without sufficient intelligence to understand what they were doing; but they were skillfully steered by the harder-headed wealthy accomplices of the Germans whose bond with socialities was their common possession of enough money to permit them to frequent the same high-priced surroundings. The French called them the "salonnards," and one of their chief activities, as noted from France was the effort to exploit consciously the long standing friendship between France and America, and use it to impress their peculiar ideas on influential Americans.

We correspondents in Paris used to refer to them as the "Franco-American amity boys." We had no illusions as to the motives which impelled them to put themselves out so regularly to be agreeable to Americans and to flatt themselves off upon American officials as the best French friends the United States had. We knew it was only for what they and their friends could get out of it personally, but the American Embassy didn't and neither did many semi-official and semi-public American groups.

Among this crowd, all very much persona grata at the American Embassy, was Rene de Chambrun, Laval's son-in-law; Professor Bernard Fay whom the Germans helped put into one of the coveted chairs of the College of France after they came in; Fernand de Brinon, who became Vichy's Ambassador to the Germans in Paris; and Senator Henri-Haye, one of the most frequent dinner guests at the Embassy, who became Vichy Ambassador to Washington largely through the personal machinations of American Ambassador William Christian Bullitt.

Another was Charles Bedaux who, as a born Frenchman naturalized American, worked the same game from the other end. (Rene de Chambrun, both French and American, worked it from both ends). Bedaux was at one time chairman of the Washington-Lafayette Institute, devoted to promoting good will between France and the United States—or at least, between Bedaux' friends and the United States. And in 1940, the American Embassy accepted his invitation to establish itself in his chateau near Tours, when the French government left Paris for that city. Yet three years previously, in 1937, as the evidence collected by Attorney Gen. Biddle reveals, Bedaux had already established himself in a summer home at Berchtesgaden, and was performing services for the Nazis.

2 HITLER'S BUSINESS ALLIES. This column has pointed out often in the past how French businessmen worked with the Nazis before, during and after their invasion of France. The facts collected by Biddle show how Bedaux fits perfectly into this pattern also.

In 1937, Bedaux, after consulting with such key Hitlerites as Captain Fiedemann, Otto Abetz Dr. Schacht and others, set up a branch office of his company in Turkey, and named a former officer of Hitler's to head it—thus providing the Germans with a nicely camouflaged espionage outpost there. He was at von Ribbentrop's home when the German Foreign Minister flew to Moscow to sign the 1939 treaty that preceded the war. In 1941, he gave the Germans aid on their project to take the Persian Gulf oil fields. In 1942, he started a pipeline across the Sahara to bring all-important vegetable oils for shipment across the Mediterranean to Germany — a project in which it seems he must have necessarily come into contact with Jacques Lemaigre-Dubreuil. For Lemaigre-Dubreuil was turning North African peanuts into oil for the Germans in his Dunkirk factory, until the writing on the wall impelled him to offer his services to the Allies in order at least to get out from under himself and possibly to salvage a few of the Germans out from under too in case of an Allied victory.

3 VICHY WAS GERMANY'S PUPPET. Finally, the Bedaux case reveals the accuracy of the argument often advanced here that Vichy presumed independence, on which all American policy towards France had been erected, was a fiction, and that Vichy was a tool of the Nazis, one of whose chief services was to provoke the very errors in American policy which were, as a matter of fact, engendered. Bedaux was one of the many links proving the common aims of Germany and Vichy. In the evidence amassed against him by Biddle, the accusation of treason rests not only on his complicity with Germany against the Allies, but also on his complicity with Vichy against them. If it was treason for Charles Bedaux, naturalized American citizen, to co-operate with Vichy, could it have been wisdom for the American State Department to do the same thing?

NOTICE TO EMPLOYERS AND THEIR MALE EMPLOYEES

By an order signed on August 15th, 1944, by the undersigned Minister of Labour under authority of National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations:

1. Commencing August 22nd, 1944, every employer is required to check the documents held by each newly engaged male employee, within 7 days of the employee's engagement, to determine if such employee possess documents to show that he is in good standing under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations (that is, in relation to the Military Call-up);

2. Every employer must report on Schedule 9 to the Registrar for his Mobilization Division, concerning any employee found not to possess documents as referred to;

3. Every employer is required similarly to check the documents held by each male employee newly engaged between May 1st, 1944, and August 22nd, 1944, and to report to the Registrar for his Mobilization Division by August 29th, 1944, on any such employee found not to possess documents as referred to;

4. Any male employee here referred to, is required by the Regulations to present his documents to his employer for purposes of inspection;

5. Penalties are provided for any employer or male employee who fails to comply with these Regulations.

By an earlier order, employers were required to check the documents held by their male employees, and to report by May 1st, 1944, on doubtful cases as well as those employees did not possess documents. The procedure for the present continuing check, although being notified to employers in "Notice to Employers and their Male Employees", which is now being mailed, is identical with that set forth in "Employers' Guide", which covered the check made before May 1st, 1944.

Employers are asked to remember that they do not report on men who do possess the necessary documents—only on those who fail to present documents for examination, or where there is doubt that the document presented actually proves good standing.

The employers of Canada co-operated very satisfactorily on the first check, made up to May 1st last. This co-operation was decidedly helpful, and is very much appreciated. Further co-operation is now earnestly requested.

Schedule 9 and details as to documents which prove good standing, are available through the Employment and Selective Service Offices.

HITLER MAY ATTEMPT TO FLEE FROM THE REICH

BY DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The speed with which the Allied mechanized forces are advancing and cutting the Germans to pieces in France, in a warfare of amazing fluidity, is impressing observers with the possibility that the retreating Nazis may arrive on their own frontiers in such disorganized state as to precipitate chaos within the Reich itself.

This idea fits with the fear among military leaders in Washington that Hitler and his cupains may find refuge in neutral countries. It's a year since the Allies asked neutrals not to give sanctuary to these war criminals, and the subject may be raised with them again now.

Should Hitler and the other Nazi leaders flee in the face of military disaster it would create an unprecedented situation. The vast German public would have little organization and no head, for the dictator and his personally-appointed aides are the sole government over a people who are so utterly regimented that they have no will of their own.

Just suppose that on top of this the disorganized armies should retreat into Germany and carry on the fight in separate units under fanatical Nazi officers — and that's envisaged by some observers. You'd have a fine keg of kraut. There would be no Armistice Day — but the Allied forces would have to go in and clean a mighty dirty house.

The above isn't a prediction. It's a possibility.

We don't get much help in trying to gauge the present climate behind by what happened at the end of the First Great War. There's little similarity. Militarily speaking Hitler is much worse off than was the Kaiser at this stage in the conflict.

In 1918 the Germans were strongly entrenched in the Great Hindenburg line on the British front and its complements along the Belgian, American and French fronts. The Allies had to smash through these powerful defences by frontal attack. We never flanked one of them, and the Germans always maintained a line.

Now however ,the armies haven't gone to ground as they did in those days of trench and concrete warfare. The fighting is largely fluid. This has been a "flanking" war right from the start—racing around your enemy's wings and trapping him. The Germans started it, and even flanked the "impregnable" Maginot Line. The Allies adopted it, improved it, and have used it to slaughter Nazis in Africa, in Russia, and now in France.

The fluidity of the present fighting in France as exemplified by the unprecedented Patton, who encircles 'em so fast that he catches up with himself, renders the future of any army in retreat most uncertain and precarious. Thus, for example, while we know the Germans normally would make a stand on the Somme river in the Northern tip of France, there's no assurance now that they will be able to reorganize on that line in view of the Allied drive which had taken American advance-guards to within less than two score miles of Belgium.

It's possible that when the Germans near their own frontiers we shall see a reversion to static defence in the great Siegfried Line or the Maginot Line, or both. If the Germans can maintain their organization. There may be a similar stand behind the Oder against the Russians. Then we shall see whether the Fuehrer can defend himself against being flanked. Anyway the lines will be taken.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 3RD, 1944

"SAUL REJECTED"
Lesson Text: I Samuel 15: 10-23

Saul did not make much of a job of being King. It looks as though Samuel misfired when he aimed at Saul. In practically all available commentaries and studies on the subject, Saul is held up as the supreme example of a man who failed to measure up to his responsibilities. To be sure he made a mess of things. But it was Samuel who did the chosing. Samuel, a priest, a good man, sought out a king; his choice was Saul. Samuel must bear a large share of responsibility for what happened. So far as we can tell Samuel chose Saul because of his physical stature. He looked the part of a king. Perhaps in Saul's day there was no other way to proceed than to have the priest appoint the king. But the history of clerical domination of political affairs is a sorry one. The clergy had better leave the choosing of kings to the people themselves. They will make a better job of it.

Samuel has another try at it. This time he appoints David. He makes a pilgrimage to the home of Jesse the Bethlehemite, ostensibly to hold sacrifice. As the children present themselves to Samuel, the prophet asks if any are missing. He is told that there is still a young lad watching the flock. So David is summoned and annointed as future king. Just how the choice was made we do not know but once again Samuel seems to be impressed with the physical fitness of the youth. "He was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look upon."

Saul apparently did not know what was going on, though he had some sort of premonition that all was not well in the kingdom, for he had fits of melancholy, or depression, or what have you, which he was hard to live with. The good book says he was troubled with an evel spirit. No doubt he was troubled; we, to-day, would have a different name for it. we might call it "jitters" "nerves" or "depression." Anyway, there were times when he got pretty low and the only remedy seemed to lie in music. The flunkies with whom the King seemed soon to have surrounded himself, scoured the country for a good harpist. They found one, and the one they found was none other than the young lad who was one day to succeed Saul on the throne. Thus the training of David began. He received his introduction to court and court affairs quite early in life; this was a good beginning. Later came the contest between the Shepherd Boy and the Giant Goliath, before being covered with armour put the fear of death into the Israelites. But David discovered a vulnerable spot and smote it with a stone from his sling-shot, which stunned the giant and ended his career. As a result of this Saul got a position of trust and responsibility in the army. Then the trouble began. David rose to popularity and finally was strong enough to challenge the position of Saul.

The golden text sets the lesson for to-day's study. "Man looketh on the outward appearance but the Lord looketh on the heart." This is something the importance of which we cannot overstate. It is so different from the way men make their judgments on their fellows. The world judges as by our looks, by the clothes we wear, the car we drive, where we live on this side of the tracks or the other side. God makes His judgment on another basis. He judges the quality of man's motives, his desires his ambitions. his hopes, his intentions.

Letters which come to us from boys in France and in Italy or other battle zones, who are facing death every day, testify to a complete reversal of the standard of values which they held in times of security, danger. Matters of worldly color, class, fade quite out of the picture as these youngsters face the ultimate questions. Courage, honor, idealism, determination, selflessness, those are the qualities of life which these judges as by our looks, by the clothes we wear, the car we drive, where we live on this side of the tracks or the other side. God makes His judgment on another basis. He judges the quality of man's motives, his desires his ambitions. his hopes, his intentions.

Sending a telegram to his wife reads: "Ambulance has safe arrival at his destination after long train journey — a soldier filled in the telegraph form. "Darling, darling, darling, darling, darling."

"With the address," that makes eleven words," said the Post Office assistant. "You're allowed another word." "But there's nothing else I want to say," said the soldier. "You could always put in another darling," suggested the assistant. The soldier pondered for a spell. "Don't you think that would look rather silly?" he asked.

HOLDEN OF DESERONTO, KEEPS THE SALE GOING MERRILY ON.
Many of the best educated Jews claim there is no truth in the Pentateuch. If the 31st chapter of Numbers, and similar Acts isn't as barbarous, found therein, are untrue, the sooner the Jews eliminate these records from their history the better. These writings have been the cause of more pogroms than all other reasons combined.

These writings may be untrue, but it is a positive fact that our prices on our merchandise are reduced to the minimum.

Pillows, $1.00 each; tin; wheelbarrow; furniture; work bench and vise, $4.00; feathers, 10c.; ice boxes, $8.00; electric stove; cook stoves; pump; electric and engineer's books, and scores of other things. Come in and see. Your money back if not satisfied.

Our boys stood on the shores of France,
Determination showing in every glance;
The Boche had said: "It can't be done",
But, with God's help, they were forced to run. 36a

Watching Nazi Authority Disintegrate

The story of the incredible disintegration of German authority in Paris from the absolute to the point where the Nazi master can no for an armistice before a single Allied soldier entered the city, can be told only by one who was there, Jean de Gandt, a Belgian national and long a distinguished British United Press Staff correspondent, lived out the occupation in Paris and tells that story from the reopened British United Press bureau at 2 Rue des Italiens. De Gandt worked for many years in France and when manager of the B.U.P. Madrid bureau scored a worldwide beat on the abdication of the King Alfonso. He refused to work for the Nazis or their Vichy underlings during the occupation.

The German debacle began in the week of August 12. Throughout that week the hungry, occupation-weary Parisians watched with happy amazement while the Germans filled the streets night and day with vehicles of all kinds packed with men and loot, evacuating eastward.

Part of the administration had gone away by night during July when the Allies were not even close to Paris. Then the factories had closed down, one by one, for lack of fuel and power and the idle workers massed on the sidewalks to watch the flight of the despised Boche.

German commanders told their young subordinates they were going home for a vacation and would return but the older soldiers left in Paris did not lose their pessimism and sold food clothing — even military motorcycles for 800 francs each — to get rid of encumbering baggage.

The first effective blow of the French patriots was a railroad strike on August 13. Four French railroadmen were shot without trial but the Germans suffered a severe blow where it hurt most.

The following day the Germans, suspecting disaffection, disarmed the French police in the suburban towns of Asnieres and Gennevilliers, within 12 hours the police struck all over Paris and released 1,000 political prisoners.

The postal workers then went on strike.

At nightfall on the 15th several hundred civilians gathered outside the Luxembourg palace where the French Senate met, and the Germans used as Luftwaffe headquarters. The jittery civilians opened fire with machine guns without warning, killing and wounding scores.

The Germans then invoked a 9:00 p.m. curfew for all civilians.

The seething city reacted with a general strike of the French General Confederation of Labor and the Confederation of Christian Workers on the 18th.

A German soldier was shot and killed on the Place de la Concorde and in retaliation the Germans indiscriminately shot 31 civilians passing the spot. The bodies were dumped in the Bois de Boulogne.

Despite this the strikes spread. Parisians stormed German warehouses and some of them were set afire by hand grenade bursts in the fighting and citizens were burned to death inside. The Germans began burning all the supplies they could not move.

Throughout the 18th isolated groups of Partisans exchanged shots with German soldiers and that evening we heard the first welcome rumbles of Allied artillery.

On August 19 the rumor spread that there were only a few detachments of Germans left in the city and the Allies might enter any day. Two thousand members of the French Forces of the Interior seized the Prefecture of Police and other public buildings and hoisted the Tricolor over the city hall while crowds outside sang the Marseillaise. Home made Allied flags were flaunted from windows all over the city.

The Germans tore through the streets in armored cars lashing every beflagged window with machine guns. The real battle started around the police buildings on the Isle de la Cite, across the square from Notre Dame Cathedral, with the Germans attacking with tanks and field pieces.

Partisans set two 22-ton tanks on fire with incendiary bombs made of champagne bottles filled with gasoline. They then sallied out and captured 53 German prisoners, including a major, 20 trucks and 30 automobiles.

Then to the amazement even of the most rabid Parisians, the Germans sued for a truce. It was arranged for 9 p.m. on August 20th By that time the Germans had had 40 men killed, and 27 wounded; the French five killed and 35 wounded.

Even now there is some question as to the exact nature of that truce but a communique issued by the French forces of the Interior indicated the agreement was that the German command would not attack public buildings occupied by French troops and would treat all Frenchmen taken prisoners under the laws of war. The French on their part agreed to suspend fire against the forces of occupation "until the promised evacuation of Paris is completed."

The German Commander, Gen. Dietrich von Choltitz released three Partisan prisoners. The truce began well but it was only to last a few hours before both sides were charging violations and shooting at one another.

The Germans entrenched themselves at strategic points from which they took pot shots at anyone passing.

The French colonel commanding the F. F. I. ordered the whole city turned into a guerilla centre with organized defences in every street and on the roofs.

"In order to protect the population against reprisals," his order read, "the civilians must transform Paris into an entrenched camp. All means are good such as incendiary bottles, poles and any arm that can be made in factories that are still available."

On the 21st the walls of the city were plastered with posters asking the people to prepare for the triumphal entry of Allied troops which was "imminent." The flag of France fluttered over many buildings including the Bank of France the Louvre and the towers of Notre Dame.

That began 48 hours of momentous events. At noon delegates of the Committee of Liberation in various departments took over, ousting Vichy men. A general strike was fully effective. German trucks dashed wildly through the streets.

On the morning of the 22nd shops of collaborationists were plastered with warnings: "This man is a well known collaborationist. He is on the death list."

On the 24th the first Allied tanks rolled into Paris and our deliverance began.

WEDDING BELLS

SHERMAN - WARTMAN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, August 26, at three o'clock, in Trinity United Church, when Josephine Elizabeth Wartman, second eldest daughter of Mrs. H. S. Wartman and the late Mr. Wartman, of Napanee, became the bride of James A. Sherman son of Mrs. F. Davy, and grandson of Mr. Frank Sherman, also of Napanee. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Dinsman. The altar was prettily decorated with ferns and summer flowers.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Byron Perry, to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. James Robson, cousin of the bride. The bride was charming in a wedding gown of white sheer over taffeta, with fingertip veil, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath. Miss Violet Wartman, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, was gowned in a floor-length dress of turquoise sheer over taffeta, with matching turban, and carried a bouquet of pink asters and ferns.

The groom was attended by Mr. Hubert Dillenbeck, and the ushers were Robert Sweet and Oakie Correy. During the signing of the register, Miss Betty Robson sang very sweetly, "I Love You Truly."

Following the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served to about fifty guests, at the home of the bride. Mrs. Wartman, mother of the bride, received the guests, wearing black crepe, with white trim, and a corsage of delphinium. Mrs. Davy, mother of the groom, was attired in a gown of black crepe, trimmed with rose, and wore a corsage of roses. Those who assisted in serving were: Mrs. Gordon Hunter Mrs. Frank Clarke, Misses Betty Robson, Dorothy Snider, Betty McCready, and Myrtle Kinkley. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. J. P. Dingman and was responded to by the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a lovely plastic three-piece dresser set. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid and the groom's gift to the best man were identification bracelets. The groom's gifts to the ushers were billfolds, and to the pianist, a silver relish dish.

The happy couple left amid showers of rice and confetti on a trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and other points west. For travelling the bride wore a navy tailored suit with matching accessories. On their return they will reside in Napanee.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman were the recipients of a large number of lovely wedding gifts as well as a substantial sum of money.

WEDDING BELLS

WANNAMAKER - WALLACE

A quiet but pretty summer wedding was solemnized at the United Church parsonage in Seaforth, Wednesday, August 23rd, at twelve o'clock noon. The Rev. H. V. Workman officiated. Miss Jessie Isobel Wallace the daughter of Mrs. Wallace and the late Alexander Wallace of Tuckersmith, became the bride of Mr. Leland Burl Wannamaker son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wannamaker, of Napanee.

The bride looked charming in a street-length dress of turquoise blue with white accessories and carried Better Time roses with Statice. The bride's attendant was Miss Marjorie Wannamaker, sister of the groom. She was dressed in pink sheer with white accessories and carried pale pink asters with baby's breath.

The groom was assisted by McDonald Wallace brother of the bride.

After the ceremony dinner was served to the immediate families, at the home of the bride's mother. The table was decorated with pink and white streamers and centred with the bride's three-tier wedding cake. The room was prettily decorated with gladiolus and phox. The dinner was served by two girl friends of the bride, Mrs. Margaret Stephenson and Miss Anna Watson assisted by Miss Mabel Cameron in the kitchen.

The happy couple left by motor to southwestern points of Ontario amid showers of confetti and good wishes. On their return they will reside near Napanee. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold wrist watch, to the bridesmaid a gold identification bracelet and to the best man a black leather billfold.

BRITAIN'S SACRIFICE

For the first time, figures have been published showing the extent to which Britain has ruthlessly sacrificed her export trade for the sake of her war effort. President Roosevelt's Sixteenth Report to Congress on Lend-Lease Operations contrasts changes in British and United States exports during the war in the following passage:

"In the four pre-war years 1935-1938, total United States exports averaged less than $2,800,000,000 a year. In the first six month of 1944 our cash exports, exclusive of lend-lease were at an annual rate in excess of $2,600,000 000.

"Even after allowance is made for differences in price levels, this is a surprising record. It is in sharp contrast to the experience of the United Kingdom, for example, whose exports excluding munitions, have declined by more than 50 percent in value and by 70 percent in volume since the war began."

These figures alone, however, do not reveal the full meaning of the sacrifice to Britain. Because of her need to import vast quantities of food and raw materials, it has always been a matter of life and death to Britain to maintain her exports to pay for these imports. In 1935 for example, the value of British exports was one-quarter of her total and agricultural output.

After the war, exports will be even more essential to Britain, because she has ruthlessly sacrificed her foreign investments during the war, and incurred huge indebtedness, to pay for war goods. Yet her export trade, built up over generations and vital to her future has been cut down and converted to war production, in the same spirit in which everything that Britain has has been poured into her war effort.

The fact that victory is now assured is not affecting British determination to go on sacrificing and enduring hardships and tragedy in order to bring the war to an end sooner. This again was brought out by a significant passage in the Lend-Lease Report:

"By June 30, 1944, over 50,000 British civilians—men, women and children — had been killed by Nazi bombs and this was before the robot bombs had done most of their damage. Since then the robot bombs destroyed or damaged an average of 700 houses every hour of the day and night in England."

Jam On Their Bread For Thousands In Britain

Toronto, August 25 — There will be jam on their bread for thousands in Britain this year, through work and organization of women in Ontario. Under the "Jam for Britain" project sponsored by the Women's Institutes and Canadian Red Cross Society, tons of jam will be shipped to Great Britain in the next few months.

Donations of money, jam and honey have already been sent from more than 90 Red Cross Branches and practically every Women's Institute in the province. Money contributed thus far—$3,800— is used for the purchase of factory made jam for areas where it is not practical to prepare home-made jam.

The government is allowing sugar for this project which it is expected will supply 400,000 pounds of jam from Canada for the civilian victims of war in Britain, Canadian troops in hospitals and British wartime nurseries. Ontario's share in the amount will be 250 000 pounds.

Further information about Ontario's jam project may be had from Miss Nesta Hinton, supervisor of Nutrition Ontario Division of Red Cross, 621 Jarvis Street, Toronto 5.

The older man sighed. "Well," he said at last, "if you are going to use any, you may as well go the limit."

Apple Recipes Tested And Approved by Dom. Experimental Kitchen

BY LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief Consumer Section
Dominion Dept. of Agriculture

Remember how the first crunchy August apple tasted when you were a youngster . . . warm from the sun, its juice running down your chin?

These early apples, Yellow Transparent, Red Astrachans, best for eating, and Duchess and Gravensteins, best for cooking, have a short season and don't store well. They do, however, make a wonderful canned applesauce, while and fluffy.

They are not good bakers, for it is almost impossible to keep them whole. In making sauce from early apples less water is required than with the later varieties according to the home economists of the Consumer Section Dominion Department of Agriculture. Just enough water should be added to keep the apples from sticking until their own juice cooks out. Add a few grains of salt to bring out the flavor and cover closely to keep the color and prevent the juice from evaporating. Only a few minutes cooking is needed. When the apples are soft add the sugar—one teaspoonful per apple. Put the cover on again and let the sauce stand until sugar dissolves.

Fairy Apple Pie

Six medium apples, two tablespoons water, four tablespoons of sugar, two egg whites.

Peel, core and slice apples. Add water, cover and cook until soft. Add sugar, cool. Beat egg whites until stiff, fold in apple sauce. Pour into a baked pie shell. Bake at 300 degrees F. for fifteen minutes.

Apple Snow

Six medium apples, two tablespoons water, two tablespoons of sugar, two egg whites.

Peel, core and slice apples. Add the water, cover and cook until soft. Add sugar, and stir until smooth and light and sugar is dissolved. Chill thoroughly. Beat egg whites until stiff. Fold in the apple sauce. Pile lightly in a serving dish. Serve at once with Custard Sauce. Six servings.

Custard Sauce

One and one-half cups of milk, two tablespoons sugar, pinch of salt, one teaspoonful cornstarch, two egg yolks, half-teaspoon of lemon extract.

Heat one cup milk in double boiler. Mix sugar, salt, cornstarch, with half-cup cold milk. Add to hot milk. Stir until slightly thickened. Beat egg yolks and pour hot milk mixture over eggs. Return to double boiler. Cook stirring continuously, until mixtdire is thick enough to coat a spoon. Add flavouring and chill. Six servings.

Apple Ginger Upside-Down Cake

Three tablespoons butter, one-third cup brown sugar, three apples, one-quarter cup mild-flavoured fat, three tablespoons of white sugar, one egg, one-third cup molasses, one cup sifted pastry flour, or one cup less two tablespoons sifted all - purpose flour, one teaspoon baking powder half-teaspoon baking soda one-eighth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon ginger, half-teaspoon of cinnamon, one-third cup boiling water.

Melt butter in baking dish. Add the brown sugar and cook together for two or three minutes. Peel, core and slice apples. Arrange apple slices in butter and sugar mixture. Cream fat and white sugar together. Add well-beaten egg and molasses. Beat thoroughly. Sift dry ingredients and add to mixture. Lastly add boiling water, mixing quickly. Pour over apples in baking dish and bake in moderate oven, 325 deg. F., about forty minutes. Six servings.

about the things you buy in wartime

Milk IS NOT ELASTIC

Milk is our most valuable food. It must provide us with milk to drink, with butter, cheese, evaporated and concentrated milk and a score of other products.

Canadian farmers have done a magnificent job. They have increased milk production in 1943 by more than 540 million quarts over 1939.

They have done this in the face of a 25% reduction in farm help, equipment shortages, and the fact that it takes two to three years to bring a calf into milk production.

The production of milk and milk products in Canada has achieved a notable record. Careful planning makes the best use of every quart. But we must all recognize the conditions imposed by war and realize that in these times we can't get all we want.

Chairman, Wartime Prices & Trade Board

WHAT HAPPENS TO ALL THIS MILK?

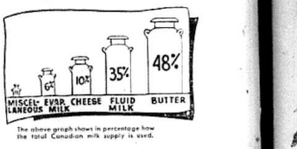
In spite of greater production, the demand for milk and milk products has risen even more, because—

(a) There's more money to spend;

(b) More people are working, with changed food habits and increased food needs;

(c) Our Armed Forces and Allies make heavy demands.

It has therefore been necessary by rationing, by subsidies, by careful planning and by other controls—to divert our milk supply into channels most suited to our various food needs.



The above graph shown in percentage how the total Canadian milk supply is used.

FLUID MILK

TAKES 35% OF OUR MILK

Because fluid milk is regarded by nutritionists as the most nearly perfect food, nothing has been allowed to interfere with its sale. Today, Canadians are drinking more milk and a greater percentage of our milk supply is being consumed as fluid milk—than ever before. Fluid milk has the right of way, but don't waste a drop of it.

CHEESE

TAKES 10% OF OUR MILK

Canada's annual cheese production is now up by about 27 million pounds since the war.

Cheese is a concentrated food product easily shipped and stored. That is one reason why we send large quantities to Great Britain to help meet its present food needs. While in the last year we exported four of every five pounds of cheese we made, our production has been increased that we have left for ourselves about three million pounds a year more than before the war.

BUTTER

TAKES 48% OF OUR MILK

IT TAKES 9 QUARTS OF MILK TO MAKE ONE POUND OF BUTTER

The only Canadian-made butter not consumed in Canada is that sent by the Red Cross in prisoner-of-war parcels, each of which contains a 1 lb. tin.

In the first three years of war, our butter consumption increased 10.9%. So, rationing was established to prevent too much milk going into butter, at the expense of other important milk products, and to insure a fair share to everyone.

The rationing of butter was influenced by the fact that it has less nutritive value than some other milk products, and because we get a generous supply of fats or their food equivalent in other forms.

To maintain a proper balance of consumption between various milk products and to ensure that butter is put into storage for winter use—when production drops—it is necessary to reduce the ration from time to time.

EVAPORATED MILK

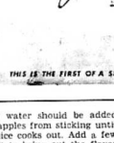
TAKES 6% OF OUR MILK

More than twice as much (352 million lbs.) was used by Canadians (as last year as in 1938 (171 million lbs.). And yet, there has not been enough.

Where has it all gone? It's an important food for babies—and there are 240,000 more of them a year. Larger quantities have gone to areas where fresh milk is not available. Armed Services have added new demands. In spite of this, our exports of evaporated milk to Great Britain, Newfoundland and the West Indies, etc., are maintained at pre-war level.

ICE CREAM AND OTHER MILK PRODUCTS

TAKE ABOUT 1½% OF OUR MILK



The manufacture of ice cream is restricted to the 1941 level because milk is needed for other purposes.

Milk Powder and Condensed Milk are taking more milk. Milk sugar is used in the manufacture of Penicillin and for other wartime purposes. Casein (a milk by-product) is used in making glue for aeroplanes.

90% OF THE MILK PRODUCED IN CANADA IS CONSUMED IN CANADA

Sabotage

The Germans cannot find a quiet moment anywhere in Festung Europe these days. From Oslo, Norway comes the report that the city was rocked by an explosion recently. The explosion occurred in the large workshops belonging to municipality-owned Oslo Tramcars Company. The shops had been taken over by the Germans and large quantities of valuable war material were stored there, including 50 aeroplanes, over a hundred aeroplane engines, stores of spare parts and special instruments which are difficult to replace.

The destruction was complete in all practical purposes as seen from the point of view of the Nazi Home Front. They are adding their list another successful act of sabotage.

A little boy surprised his parents by refusing to be scared into being good: It's no use telling him angels will write down in their book if I'm naughty, he said I might as well tell you they think up in Boston that I'm dead.

But why should they think that? — Because I haven't said my prayers for a fortnight.

Hello Homemakers. We have been refunded that we did not publish an article on Dutch oven cookery last year, as we promised. Again, it is the time of year when mother does not want too much heat in the kitchen and using a Dutch oven is certainly an advantage. In it you can cook a roast, meat pie, or chicken as well as vegetables all from the heat of one element. Since the Dutch oven is a dark, heavy kettle with a heavy metal, close-fitting lid there is very little electricity used after the product reaches simmering point. It maintains that heat and keeps in the steam.

If you buy a Dutch oven season before you use it. Use about one-half cup of salt-free fat, rubbing it around the sides and on the bottom. Heat until it begins to smoke, take off quickly and rub with a piece of paper. When cool, wash it well.

This method of cookery lessens food costs, too. You use cheaper cuts of meat, such as boned shoulder pieces and stewing fowl. The grate is taken out of the iron pot, then it is heated with a small amount of fat in it. Brown the meat leaving the cover off, then lift it out until you put in the grate and pour in a small amount of water. When it begins to boil put on the cover and turn the electric element to Low. No further attention is required to regulate the heat, and the cooking period is calculated according to the size of the piece of meat — about 35 minutes per pound.

Dutch Pot Roast

Four lbs. beef (blade, chuck or short rib), 3 tablespoons baking fat, one cup tomato juice, one bay leaf, one teaspoon chili sauce three stalks celery, three tablespoons flour, salt and pepper half-cup water, one onion, four carrots grated, six potatoes diced.

Sprinkle flour lightly over meat. Brown meat on both sides in hot fat. Place the grate under the meat; add water, tomato juice and seasonings. Cover, heat to boiling, then turn low simmering, for two hours. Scrub potatoes and prepare carrots and celery. Add 40 minutes before the cooking period is finished.

Braised Chicken

Stewing fowl, one-quarter cup of flour, one-quarter cup baking fat, salt and pepper, one cup water, one cup milk, one green pepper, sliced, two cups carrots, diced, one-quarter cup onions, diced, half cup cut beans.

Dress chicken and cut in pieces suitable for serving, sprinkle with flour and brown in hot baking fat in the Dutch oven. Place the grate under brown meat, add water and seasonings. Cook at Low. The milk and vegetables should be added 40 minutes before the cooking period is finished (one-quarter cup minced parsley may be added.)

THE QUESTION BOX:

Mr. A. B. asks: What are the proportions of salt and water to use in pickling brine?

Answer: Brine for preliminary salting should not be more than one-quarter cup of common salt to one quart of cold water. Too much salt shrivels the vegetables instead of crisping them.

Mr. R. B. asks: Is it possible to steam a dessert over the Dutch oven stews?

Answer: Yes, if you have a steamer to fit the kettle. If it does not fit, the food may stop simmering on low heat and become soggy.

You may cook a custard bread pudding or steam pudding if you make a small quantity in a covered casserole and put on top of meat bones.

TAKE A TIP:

On the use of processing food in tin cans:

1. We do not recommend processing food in tin cans placed in the oven.

2. There are three types of tin cans available. The plain can is a general purpose can which may be used for all foods. R enamelled cans have a special coating which assists in maintaining the normal colouring of red berries and beets. C enamelled cans have a special coating to prevent discoloration of corn. They are also suggested for processing green beans, peas and kidney beans. C enamelled cans are not recommended for acid fruits or tomatoes.

3. If the food is not precooked cover with hot syrup. The contents of the can should be processed according to the following method:

Place covered cans on a rack in processor with boiling water about two inches from the top of the cans. Keep the water boiling during the processing period, but do not let it bubble over into the cans. Seal with sealing machine according to the manufacturers directions.

ANNE ALLAN invites you to write her in care of The Napanee Beaver. Send in your suggestions on homemaking problems and watch this column for replies.

"ANY GUM CHUM?"

Overseas Plan Welcomed

One of the most popular slogans heard overseas by Canada's armed forces — in Africa, Italy and France — is "Any Gum, Chum?"

Sailors, soldiers and airmen have filled their letters home about how doubly welcome they are wherever they go if they have some chewing gum. The demand became so great on Canadian manufacturers, that the Wrigley Company started a plan some months ago to ship our boys and girls in the Armed Forces Overseas, all of their production of chewing gum as ordered by friends and relatives in Canada. They have already shipped tens of thousands of boxes overseas on this plan and hundreds of acknowledgments have been received by the folks at home.

Retailers throughout Canada are co-operating by handling the order forms which enable their customers to conveniently place orders for immediate shipment to the loved ones overseas.

If the Government would act, the plan could be extended to include shipments direct to Canadian prisoners of war.

The passenger leaned out of the taxi window. "What on earth are you doing?" he shouted to the driver. "I asked you to drive me from Victoria to Leicester Square, and this is the fourth time we've passed St. Paul's."

"I'm sorry, sir," replied the driver, "I thought you were an American."

This is a Goodyear Synthetic Rubber Tire!
Goodyear dealers have it . . . for eligible drivers only. It is the result of Goodyear's forty years' experience in tire-building plus Goodyear's specialized knowledge of synthetic rubber . . . gained through unceasing research and testing.
GOODYEAR
THE GREATEST NAME IN RUBBER

IT'S WHAT YOU DON'T SEE THAT COUNTS!

It's the knowledge, skill and experience which go into the building that make a tire great

● All tires, except for tread, look alike. But wise buyers never judge value on superficial appearance alone. They want mileage . . . performance . . . safety. That's why Goodyear is the popular choice in tires.

Goodyear believes, and rightly so, that it isn't so much the materials used, but how those materials are used, that make a tire great.

For example: all tires contain rubber, cotton, steel and other essential ingredients. But Goodyear tires contain the most important ingredients of all . . . the experience, engineering skill, craftsmanship, and research that for more than 28 years have made Goodyears the first choice of tire-wise motorists.

Into and under the tread of every Goodyear tire go the factors that provide the wide margin of superiority in Goodyears . . . the factors that make Goodyears first in mileage . . . first in trouble-free performance . . . first in safety.

Let the experience of the majority be your guide. If you are eligible for new tires use your permit wisely . . . for value-proved Goodyears.

TYPICAL PRODUCTS OF GOODYEAR RESEARCH

Rubberized Life Rafts, developed by Goodyear, save the lives of aircrews when planes are forced down at sea. These rafts inflate in seconds with chemical gas released by a rip cord.

Bullet-puncture-sealing fuel tanks for warplanes are another product of Goodyear research. When a bullet pierces the tank the puncture is automatically sealed, to eliminate the hazard of fire and loss of fuel.

LifeGuards, another Goodyear exclusive development, replace ordinary inner tubes, provide positive blow-out prevention. If a blow-out occurs, the LifeGuard carries the load, allows the driver to steer to a safe, sure stop.

Dekrad is a new Goodyear "war paint" that provides a flameproof, sun-skin, weather-resistant floor and deck covering for ships, trucks and aeroplanes. It has many potential civilian uses where safe flooring is required.

THE TOUGHEST JOBS IN ROYAL NAVY

BY FOSTER BARCLAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"Tin Fish Aces"—that's the name given Britain's daring submarine commanders, men who have one of the toughest, loneliest and most dangerous jobs in the Royal Navy.

Announcements of their adventures are rare, bare and terse. You can't tell the complete story of a submarine's exploits in wartime, but every night, dotted over the seven seas, British submarines come up for air and perhaps have another symbol, denoting victories over enemy shipping, tacked around the grinning skull and crossbones of their "Jolly Roger" flags.

The blue waters of the Mediterranean, virtually a "picnic ground" for these silent death-dealing raiders. Know them well. Italian warships fear them and Axis armies in North Africa have felt the disastrous impact of torpedoes against ships attempting to cross Mussolini's "mare nostrum" with men and material.

They are engraving an important and vital chapter in Britain's naval history and it's men like Lt.-Cmdr. R. D. Caley, who knocked off an Italian cruiser of Trieste class when he commanded the famous Utmost, recently announced as overdue and presumed lost, who are doing the job. He wasn't in command of the Utmost on her fatal voyage.

A quiet grey-eyed 35-year-old son of a general, Caley ranks high among the navy's "tin-fish aces." He's in good company for others at the top include Cmdr. Ben Brayant, Lieut.-Cmdr. H. A. V. Haggard, Cmdr. A. C. G. Miers, Cmdr. H. F. Bone and Cmdr. J. W. Linton, each with an impressive bag of "kills", not to mention thrills.

Bryant, a bearded dare-devil in his middle thirties and holder of the Distinguished Service Cross, hit the headlines when he brought the Sea Lion home after a voyage half-way round the world with its "Jolly Roger" almost filled with white bars.

During one hectic trip he Sea Lion was forced to stay under water for nearly two days, with her oxygen supplies rapidly dwindling, while enemy aircraft and nine anti-submarine boats tried to destroy her with depth charges. Another time, Bryant, a wiry and energetic six-footer, and his crew got home after the periscope of their submarine had been smashed when an enemy ship rammed it.

Lt.-Cmdr. Haggard, who stands six feet five inches in his stocking feet commanded the great submarine Truant during an astonishing voyage lasting nearly three years. He sank ships in almost every part of the world with a regularity which became almost boring at times.

Once he took his submarine into a shallow enemy harbor on the Dynaeaica coast and surprised two Axis vessels. The water was too shallow so Haggard surfaced, steamed in, released his torpedoes and scooted away before shore batteries could be brought into play.

Cmdr. Linton skipper of the submarine Turbulent, has about twenty "kills" to his credit, but he will never forget a "night out" in the Mediterranean when he sank four supply vessels and a destroyer. He raced abreast the convoy, pumped as many torpedoes as he could into targets and then got away.

Cmdr. Miers, a stocky veteran of eighteen years in the navy, won the Victoria Cross last year for one of the most daring submarine exploits of the war. It came just three months after he had been awarded the bar to the Distinguished Service Order for his part in the sinking of eleven ships in the Mediterranean.

For nearly seventeen hours he trailed an enemy troop convoy, but was never able to get into position to release his torpedoes. At last the convoy reached harbor and Miers followed it in during a glassy calm and torpedoed two ships.

TANGIER : 'Town Of All-Nations'

BY HENRY J. TAYLOR

Tangier. — This internationalized hot-spot, polyglot town-of-all-nations is the toughest, most treacherous place I reached during my travels. Here and Algiers are making 300 per cent. on their dealing in French francs — if their contacts work out. "But they're always trying something new," the American captain of a Greek coastwise tramp steamer told me, on the docks. He then brought out a thousand gleaming "Swiss" watches. "The boys are putting a lot of these into Tangier," he said. "They were stored in Naples before the Americans attacked, and they come very cheap. They were made in Osaka, Japan."

IN ANCIENT DAMASCUS

A Salvation Army padre with the New Zealand forces, Major W. Thompson describes a visit to the ancient city of Damascus.

"At the foot of stark sunbitten hills and in the midst of arid desert, lies Damascus, the oldest continuously inhabited city in the world. When he first saw the white city surrounded by magnificent gardens and orchards, Mohammed described it as 'A pearl set within an emerald.' Its source of life is the river Barada (the Abana of Naaman's day), which, flowing eastward through the centre of the city, divides its gurgling snow-fed waters into countless gardens, baths and fountains.

"From a high balcony one looks in fancy upon the ceaseless pageantry of the centuries in which has been felt the influence of Egypt and Israel of Persia and Rome, Turkey and France. Today the streets are filled with Moslems, Christians, Jews, Druzes, Afghans, Kurds, Persians and Armenians, all their trades at least apparently peacefully, though through the ages Damas — as it is locally known — has a history of many strife and bloodshed. In the time of Titus, the Jews in revolt lost 10,000 slain. Eighty years ago some 6,000 Christians perished in the Druze massacres.

"We spent some time in the expansive bazaars where Damascus artisans of astounding cleverness execute handiwork of the utmost beauty.

Damascus brocade is world-famous while other hand-looms in most unlikely places turn out carpets and silks of unbelievable loveliness. As there are no Factory Acts here, thousands of boys begin an early apprenticeship in rolling gold and drawing silver for the exquisite workmanship of the smiths.

"Alongside workers in ivory, engravers of brass and makers of inlaid furniture, design their much-sought goods. Leather workers produce hand-made shoes of the finest quality as well as cheap sandals and wooden clogs in endless confusion. War has closed world markets and stifled tourist trade, but soldier clientele from all nations brings adequate compensation.

"To Christians, Damas has special interest in its association with the dramatic conversion to Christianity of Saul of Tarsus. The long, crooked street called Straight, the house of Ananias, and the wall where Paul escaped give clear reality to the story which, from its precise detail must have been personally related by him to the physician, Luke.

"On our last evening in Damascus we had the honor of being introduced to Sheikh Mohammed Fayed Id el-Safarjalani, the King of the Dervishes who is also, through the interpreter, to take coffee with him on the morrow. We expressed our gratitude but explained that our taxi had been booked for 8 a.m. for the long drive over the Lebanods to Beirut. To our amazement he replied 'The King of the Dervishes rises at 5 a.m. every day and would be delighted to see you at that hour.' So to-day at 6 o'clock we are drinking coffee, very hot, 'very black and very sweet,' in his 'palace' — once the harem of an earlier ruler. This palace in keeping with most Damascene buildings, has an unpretentious exterior but the fine and brilliantly painted ceilings, the walls and the furniture of hand-carved cedar wood —have to be seen to be believed. A portrait of his remarkably interesting confederate, Lawrence of Arabia, hangs in the London gallery.

THE COMMON COLD AND PNEUMONIA

The common cold is one of man's most bothersome ailments and one which may lead to serious complications if not properly treated. Now that winter is here we have our usual quota of throat tickling, coughs and sniffles. But if medical science makes good its promise, the common cold will soon be relegated to the side lines as an illness of little consequence.

Over the radio recently it was stated that after the war is won there will be made available for public use the means by which even the most severe cold may be brought under control in a matter of twenty-four hours.

This will be a boon to mankind. For the time being, however, keep warm to keep fit. Avoid chills at all costs and get lots of rest; at the same time avoid contact with those who may already be infected with cold germs.

One disease closely related to the common cold is pneumonia. It is one of the most prevalent and fatal diseases. It is listed seventh among the leading causes of death in Canada a year or two ago.

Pneumonia is peculiar to no climate but shows a distinct tendency to seasonal prevalence. It is most frequent in Canada, as in the United States during the winter and early spring months. Neither is pneumonia a respecter of ages, as it attacks young and old, rich and poor with equal severity, but the incidence is more marked at the extremes of life.

Pneumonia is seldom epidemic of its own volition, but as a secondary condition the disease may become epidemic when influenzas, measles, whooping cough, etc., are prevalent in widespread proportions. Overcrowding as in barracks and industrial plants etc., is said to develop a susceptibility to an excessive prevalence of pneumonia, especially when a specific type of infection is present.

MANIFESTO ON BRITISH LIBERTY

The Individualist Group which issues the manifesto consists of members of different political parties who are united in the desire to restore to British public life that spirit of individual liberty and responsibility which characterized its period of greatness and which is, today, gravely threatened. It is of potent interest to Canadians.

1. We reject the notion, common to all totalitarian systems, whether Communist, Fascist, or National Socialist (Nazi), that the State is a supreme monopoly super-entity, the sole source of authority and morality. "Power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely"; the omnipotent State lacks the moral elements inherent in the individual; it not only devours its own creators, but becomes a force for evil both inside and outside its own boundaries. The unit of existence is the natural human being, and his or her natural extension in the family, not the artificial personality of the State. This is true whether the approach be religious, biological or political. In the words of J. S. Mill: "The worth of the State, in the long run, is the worth of the individuals composing it."

2. State interference with the liberty of the subject should be reduced to a minimum. It is difficult, in complex modern societies, and in a world ravaged by war, to define the minimum with precision; but it is clear that of late years it has been vastly exceeded by the inordinate growth of executive powers at the expense of the legislature and the judicature.

Our constitutional system needs a return to Parliamentary responsibility. There must be a lopping off of the ever-spreading tentacles of bureaucracy.

If bureaucracy is to be restrained decentralization of administrative powers must be encouraged.

The successful operation of democracy depends upon the highest possible degree of responsibility and intelligence in the electorate so that intellectually debauching influences, whether by written, spoken or broadcast word, may be seen in their true light and resisted accordingly. To this end the educational system should aim at true mental discipline, independence of judgment and the awakening of interest, curiosity and enterprise.

Equality of opportunity and the encouragement of promise and ambition, should be an important aim not only of education but of social policy generally, but this should not be allowed, in the minds of the young, to degenerate into a belief that they can rely for a secure existence, not upon their own efforts, but upon the State.

3. State organization, as opposed to individual enterprise, suffers from grave inherent defects. Certain essential public services must be organized and controlled by the State, but it is not the true function of government to manage private life. Bureaucratic control is invariably accompanied by lack of flexibility and initiative, and by waste of time, effort, personnel and public money. It therefore inevitably fails of the very object for which it is supposed to exist—efficiency.

Trade, whether domestic or international should be freed from unnecessary restrictions and profits regarded as a premium on economy and efficiency should be regarded as a proper motive of commerce. Individual initiative, independence and enterprise within the limits of legitimate competition, should be regarded as virtues in the citizen. This applies especially at the present time to the small trader, for long our economic infantryman, but now threatened with extinction.

4. The sense of individual responsibility, which former generations regarded as a characteristically British quality, has been systematically undermined by many influences. The swamping of self-help by State-help has resulted in regimentation of opinions and in a tendency on the part of the average citizen to regard measures of which he disapproves as inevitable, and thus not worth the trouble of opposing.

The assertion of individual right has been regarded as hopelessly reactionary, and its advocacy by any public man as equivalent to a political suicide. That sentiment persists, and, despite the so-called political truce, innumerable efforts are being made to persuade our people that social salvation is to be found only in millenial plans which involve vast expansion of the functions of the State and corresponding limitations of the rights of the individual. This spirit, unless it is fought promptly and resolutely, can only result in the country's lapsing into one or other of the forms of totalitarian government.

ROME AND PARIS —AN IMPRESSION—

.... BY SHOLTO WATT...

One of the few correspondents to enter Rome and Paris immediately after their capture by the Allies, Sholto Watt, The Montreal Star's war correspondent, gives interesting impressions of the world capitals, the aspirations and hopes of the people there, in the following cable:

(With the Allied Armies in France, (Delayed) — I thought I could not be surprised at anything after the liberation of Rome with its carnival of excitement and pleasure and wild improbabilities when the Romans recognized without hesitation the long absent spirit of freedom. But it was overwhelmed by Paris where there was a so much intenser job, where recent years had been so much more onerous, where freedom had been remembered every day and so ardently longed for. Above all the incomparable and unforced grace with which the Parisians expressed their gratitude is something which no one who saw it will ever forget.

The Romans clustered around our cars and they brought flowers and wine They waved out of every window. Parisians did all this and much more. In the first place they all said "Thank you." Children — the beautiful and well behaved children of France — stepped up and shook the soldiers by the hand shyly smiling; then the women would greet their Allies with traditional kiss on both cheeks, the gesture reserved for close friends. Never again will any of us be kissed in one day by so many pretty girls. And it may sound embarrassing, perhaps even ludicrous to be enfolded in a motherly embrace by a stout and agitated middle aged woman who says "C'est pour toute la France" — That is for all France. And then breaks into tears. But the sweetness and dignity of this gesture made the moment imperishable and invests a flamboyant phrase with the assurance of truth.

Seventeen Romans would chatter happily and interminably. Parisians would break off their sentences to listen, hushed, to the slightest words of the troops. Roman children would clamber all over the vehicles; French children would not touch them at all unless invited. Italians would ask for cigarettes and chocolate before three minutes had passed; I have never yet been asked by a single Frenchman for a cigarette even although they know that we have plenty and they have practically none.

Italians have a very special admiration for the Americans and Romans in particular responded jubilantly to the faculty of Americans to have a good time. In France the prestige of the Americans is at an all time high but Parisians have also very deep feelings for their earlier Allies of this war. Travelling in a British uniform we provoked continual cries of "Voila les Anglais!" and an evident desire to make a special demonstration. Then the word "Canada" on our uniforms would be recognized and an even warmer note would come; someone would say "Then you speak French?" and someone else would remember the Canadians in the last war. But the questions they asked about the outer world nearly always began with London and how the Londoners had stood these bad years.

Both Rome and Paris are practically intact and nearly as lovely as in peace time. But Paris has become darker and shabbier in the war and its buildings are not painted and cleaned as they once were. I had the feeling about both cities that I might find them both as it were metaphorically tarnished as being the scene of very unhappy history during the late years. In neither city was my premonition fulfilled but my reactions were different in each.

Rome, though it was a great European city to which liberty was returning with intoxicating swiftness seemed as yet to have very little place in the world's future. It was still a marvelous storehouse of art and history and beauty but inhabited by a population as yet essentially indifferent to events.

Twenty years of Fascism had stultified the naturally generous and adventurous spirit of youth; the young men cared for the cinemas and dances but not for the intellectual discovery and they hardly had begun to wonder if intellectual freedom even was of value to them. Politics were in the hands of the remnants of old time democrats. It seemed to me that Italy would have a long way to go before she could offer anything much to the world but relics of a wonderful past.

Paris was different. Even in the young Those who were in Paris when the war began, seized and held [illegible] Paris as it was before the war and Americans [illegible] were as elegant [illegible] as they were before the war. Paris [illegible] witty of the most [illegible] out now to pursue [illegible] there is not a Parisian [illegible] vigorous conviction [illegible] be the future of France and of the world. SUMMER HEAT IN THE COLD OF WINTER

The Coal Administrator asks you to "save coal for the Weapons of War" — and what more practical method than thoroughly insulating your home with Rock Wool. It will save coal (and, incidentally, cut down on your fuel bill) because proper insulation holds heat in; helps to prevent heat escaping through walls and ceiling. With Rock Wool insulation, less heat is needed to maintain a comfortable temperature. Rock Wool insulation also helps to decrease fire hazard and to keep your home cooler in summer.

UNITED CHURCH ELECTS DR. ARNUP NEW MODERATOR

Church Council Now in Session at London

London, Ont., Sept. 12. — The Eleventh General Council of The United Church of Canada, meeting at St. Andrew's United Church, elected Rev. Jesse H. Arnup of Toronto, Moderator of The United Church of Canada, succeeding the Right Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater. Dr. Arnup, who is Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, will serve for two years. The post is without salary. Dr. Arnup was elected on the second ballot. Others nominated were Rev. Dr. E. Leslie Pidgeon of Montreal; Principal Halifax; Russell W. Treleaven, K.C. of Hamilton and Rev. Dr. H. G. Forster, of Welland, Ontario.

In his retiring address, the Right Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, made an impassioned plea for church unity as a pre-eminent need of Canadian Christianity. He pleaded for "co-operative unity," urging a federation of various communions, honoring one another in love and held together in unity of spirit. He challenged The United church to be "generous, loyal, bold and prudent." He made numerous striking suggestions for the church of the future, among them the use of airplanes and air-ministers —sky pilots he called them; for ministers who might use technical-knowledge of farming and economics; a revived ministry of song which would exalt the choirmaster and organist to posts with ordination; and a closer working fellowship between medical doctors and clergy as those caring for body and soul.

Pledge of loyalty of The United Church to the King was presented by Principal George Trueman, President of Mount Allison Academy, and unanimously passed by standing vote and the singing of "God Save the King."

A design for a permanent seal for The United Church of Canada was given approval. The design is to be embroidered on a scarf to be worn by the Moderator during his term of office. A crest of the seal is to be made available for the use of conferences, presbyteries and congregations.

Support to the church has increased and the entire deficit of $1,700,000 has been underwritten and will be liquidated in 70 months, Rev. Dr. E. Leslie Pidgeon, Chairman of the Board of Finance told General Council. He was followed by Rev. Dr. Victor Mooney, Treasurer, who reported church finances were in excellent condition. Rev. Dr. J. E. Coehrane, Secretary of the Pension Fund, pleaded for adequate pensions for retired ministers. Rev. Dr. J. C. Goodfellow, retiring Secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee, predicted that "there's a great day coming for the church." Rev. Denzil G. BD. OF EDUCATION CONSIDERS REQUEST TO CONVEY PUPILS

Special Committee Delegated to Seek Transportation

At the regular meeting of the Napanee Board of Education, held on Monday evening in the Town Hall, a deputation from the Roblin district addressed the Board in reference to securing some means of transportation for students from the district who desire to attend the Napanee Collegiate and Vocational School. The Board was informed there were at least twenty young people from the Roblin area who would come to the Napanee school if a means of transportation was provided.

The deputation was assured that the Napanee Board would do everything possible to meet the need and a committee composed of W. G. Paul, J. M. Simpson and D. R. Sharpe was named to co-operate with the Roblin district deputation in attempting to secure a bus or other means of travel to and from the school, for the students.

C. E. Jamieson, Principal of the N.C.V.I., reported a net increase in the number of students enrolled in the Collegiate and Vocational School, of 35. The attendance in the Upper School this year is 45, whereas last year it was 30. Middle School enrollment was 11 less than last year, Lower School 44 more, and the Vocational School, down 14.

The increased attendance, Mr. Jamieson said, was causing some time table problems. Other timetable problems had been created by late changes in Department regulations.

Mr. Jamieson brought to the attention of the Board the fact that there is now a revised schedule of grants for schools with a Department of Agriculture in which 15 per cent. to 20 per cent. of the time for instruction in Grades IX and X is given to the teaching of Home Economics for girls, and shop work and agriculture for boys. The members of the Board discussed the matter and the secretary was instructed to write the Department of Education at Toronto, regarding the grants and also to request that the director, Mr. Davies, be asked to come to Napanee and explain the proposition to the board members.

Mr. Albert Hill, Acting Principal of the Public Schools, reported an enrollment of 478 in the two schools. He informed the Board that the kindergarten-primary classes were in operation with the 5-year-olds attending in the afternoon and the six-year-olds in the morning.

The secretary read a report from Miss DeLaporte, special inspector with regard to the Opportunity Class at the West Ward School. She reported the accommodation was approved, the equipment satisfactory, the teacher, Miss Way, excellent and that it was a pleasing room to visit.

The resignation of the attendance officer, Mr. Matthew Taylor, effective September 30th, was accepted and the appointment of a new officer was left with the management committee to report at the next meeting.

Mr. H. L. VanLuven, chairman of the Property Committee, reported that some improvements had been made in the East Ward School and that the laboratory in the Collegiate had been redecorated and new fluorescent lights were in the process of being installed.

The Board decided to re-engage Mrs. Shetler as music teacher in the public schools and the Collegiate, at the rate of $6.00 per day for the Public Schools and $10.00 per day for the Collegiate.

A grant of $350 was made to the Collegiate for classroom equipment and books.

The Board recommended that the Collegiate Commencements be held as soon as possible and that the Principal endeavour to secure a speaker for the occasion.

UNITED STATES TO FREE INDUSTRIES ON PEACE DAY

Washington — The United States War Production Board, with the unanimous consent of the Army, Navy, War Manpower Commission and other major war agencies in effect told industry last week to convert itself to whatever it wants to make upon the defeat of Germany.

Virtually all controls on all production will be dropped immediately on X-day — the day the Nazis surrender — it was announced by J. A. Krug, acting W. P. B. chairman, in order to permit industry "in its own way to do the swiftest and most effective job possible in the reconversion making whatever people want, and affording maximum employment, just as quickly as possible."

The W.P.B. found at a full meeting of the board, he said, that 4,000,000 workers will be freed from war production within three months after the defeat of Germany with a reduction of 40 per cent in war production. Labor and industry will be freed to such an extent by the cutback that "Maximum civilian output can be achieved without detailed priorities regulation from Washington."

SALVATION ARMY HOME FRONT APPEAL OPENS SEPTEMBER 18TH

The opening gun of The Salvation Army Home Front Appeal will be fired on September 18th, 1944, and for twelve days thereafter a concentrated campaign will be conducted to raise one million dollars.

In 400 towns, cities and villages, 30,000 volunteers will gear themselves to all-out co-operation with 1,500 Salvation Army Officers in making the appeal a success. Every Corps in Canada is taking part in this national endeavour, except those centres where The Army is a participating unit in a local community chest or united appeal.

While world battle-fronts are resounding to the fierce shrill notes of war, the battle against poverty, ignorance and fear continues apace at home. To wage this campaign against man's insidious enemies which fight and destroy without weapons, and cringe before enlightenment, a vast sum of money is needed.

Not only is the Army of Mercy hoping to carry on its many-sided program of helping poor folk — reestablishing ex-prisoners to normal—visiting the sick — and guiding the steps of erring women back to the ways of righteousness; it also plans a vast and far-reaching program of rehabilitation for returned men when the war is over.

To quote Commissioner Benjamin Orames, Territorial Commander:

"The Salvation Army believes that every man's soul is worth saving; similarly it believes that spiritual help and practical aid go hand in hand. Wherever there is a need, there is an answering call from one of the blue-garbed soldiers of Salvation.

"The Home Front Appeal is a splendid opportunity for all at home to prove to our fighting men that we are continuing to keep the home fires burning brightly here in Canada."

Deseronto Eliminate Gibbard's From Play-Offs

The Deseronto Redi-Heats, last week eliminated the local Gibbard softball squad from the Bayshore fastball play-offs in two straight games.

The first game of the series resulted in a win for the Deseronto team and the second was won by Gibbards. Protests were lodged over infractions of the league by-laws and the games were ordered replayed.

The first game of the replay was well attended and quite a large following of fans from Napanee were in Deseronto to see the struggle, which ended in a 5 to 3 score.

The second game also drew a large crowd at Napanee, when the locals went down to a 6 to 3 defeat.

The Redi-Heats now meet their last season's rivals the Mohawk Reds" and if past performances repeat themselves the local fans are going to see some real ball games.

The series, we understand, is to be a three out of five affair.

LARGE BEQUEST FOR CARE OF DOGS MADE TO MRS. MAGUIRE

Over $200.00 Month to Maintain Over 20 Dogs

Long Beach, N.Y. — The $200 monthly income from a $100,000 trust fund will be "no more than enough" to care for 23 Pekingese dogs, one Brussels Griffin, one Dachshund and one black Persian cat, Mrs. Ita Mae Maguire of Napanee, R.R. 1 Ontario, said.

Mrs. Maguire who operates the Pekin Inn Kennels at Napanee, was named the beneficiary for life of a $100,000 trust fund by Mrs. May Marguerite Shaw, widow of a biscuit company founder, who died last August 31st.

"Of course I will take the dogs as Mrs. Shaw wanted." Mrs. Maguire said in an interview at the Shaw home, "but the money is no more than enough. For instance, when I take the dogs to Canada with me I'll need a small moving van or station wagon.

"Each one will travel, of course, with his box, his bed, his leash and his toys."

BEQUEST IS OUTCOME OF PROMISE

Mrs. Maguire disclosed that the bequest was the result of a promise I made Mrs. Shaw a long time ago.

"She was very fond of her Pekes which she had on her estate in New York, and I promised that if anything happened to her I would look after them as long as they lived," she added.

Mrs. Shaw's pets, all of which she either bought or received as gifts from Mrs. Maguire, range from a 12-year-old Peke named Baby Doo to a year-old miniature Pekinese named Junior, and include others known as Puzz-Wuzz, Cuddles and Ding Dong. The dachshund is Poopchin.

Mrs. Maguire said that although she kept her own 60 dogs in a kennel she had agreed to allow Mrs. Shaw's dogs and cat to live in her house.

"I am very happy about it," she said. "I hope to continue my life just the same, with happy memories of my dogs."

Mrs. Maguire has been operating the Pekin Inn Kennels five miles east of Napanee on No. 2 Highway for eight years. In that time Mrs. Shaw was a regular visitor and customer. It is believed likely that many of the dogs which Mrs. Maguire will bring back to Canada under the terms of the will were originally bred at her own kennels.

Mrs. Maguire started in the dog breeding business in Kingston, but later moved to Napanee. When she learned of Mrs. Shaw's illness she left Napanee for Mineola, N.Y., where she helped look after her. Mrs. Shaw's husband accompanied her on her trips to the Napanee kennels from time to time. Both were intensely interested in the dogs, and Mrs. Shaw used to pay a visit to the kennels "every month of the year" before gas and rubber restrictions made it impossible.—Toronto Globe.

Ask Children Pick Milkweed To Save Servicemen's Lives

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Federal officials burdened with the cares of war said today children returning to school in Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba had added life-saving to readin' writin' and 'rithmetic.

They said the safety of tens of thousands of fighting men might depend on the vigor with which children in these Provinces collect milkweed pods this month. Floss in the pods is needed to pack lifebelts worn by men at sea, replacing kapok, which used to be obtained from Far Eastern areas now occupied by the Japanese.

"We're depending on the children for they are the ones who have the time and the aptitude for the job," said one official "The pods usually are ready for collection in the first and second weeks of September.

"One bushel bag will hold about 800 pods, and it is estimated that in Southwestern Ontario alone there are sufficient pods to fill about 235,000 bags. If all these are gathered there will be enough floss to make more than 100,000 life-jackets."

Arrangements for collection of pods have been made in detail by the Agricultural Supplies Board under an appropriation of some $50,000 for the work, and it was expected that children returning to school in the Provinces where milkweed grows would receive open mesh bags in which the pods will be collected. In some areas distribution of the bags already has been undertaken. For a filled bag a child will receive 20 cents at the school The same price is available to any collector.

TRINITY CHURCH NEWS

Last Sunday morning Rev F. J. Armitage, B.A. minister of the Bay Circuit of The United Church, conducted the service at Trinity United Church and preached an eloquent sermon on the text "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary and they shall walk and not faint". In his closing remarks Mr. Armitage used as an example of the danger of faltering and losing faith the ill-fated attitude of many people toward the liquor situation. He deplored the condition in Napanee with regard to liquor and the beverage rooms and urged people not to accept the propaganda spread by the liquor interests that people have always drunk intoxicating beverages and always will.

In the evening the service was withdrawn in Trinity Church

Next Sunday Rev. E.W. Stapleford of Toronto will be the preacher at both morning and evening services.

The condition of Rev. G. M. Child by remains much the same as during the past week.

A CHURCH COURT MEETS

Religion plays a large part in our whole personal, national, social and economic life. The Church, which is organized religion, is basic to our democratic way of life. Whenever a great Church meets in its Supreme Councils, it demands attention. The United Church General Council is meeting in London, Ontario. Representing the largest Protestant Denomination in Canada, its deliberations have a national interest. An evidence of the world-wide scope of the Church's enterprise was the election to the Moderatorship of Dr. Jessie H. Arnup, the Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions.

Dr. Arnup is well known in this section of the country. He has visited our town many times and his addresses have always been marked by a wide knowledge of world movements and of the way in which the Church seeks to influence them for good. The world-wide scope of the Church is thus given fitting recognition by the election of a missionary leader as head of The United Church of Canada for the next two years, which may well be two of the most critical years in the history both of the Nation and the Church.

In the Council now meeting, great issues, besides that of missions, will, undoubtedly, be discussed. The United Church has, since its inception, been known as a progressive church. Indeed, there have been those who thought the church too progressive. But, it religion has to do with all life, then the church has justification for dealing with such problems as labor and capital, and race relations, which may sometimes seem to be outside the orbit of the church's work.

One of the subjects with which the Council has dealt and which gives a great deal of encouragement to the layman, has been that of closer co-operation between The United Church and The Anglican Church. The layman who is not skilled in the nicety of theological differences, finds it hard, on occasion, to understand why denominations holding allegiance to the same Founder of their faith, have to keep so definitely apart. There are reasons, it seems to us, that all Christian bodies should be united in their common task. The fact that progress has been made in this direction will cheer the hearts of great numbers of Canadians.

The most pathetic figure in all the world to-day, can surely be none other than the aged Marshal Petain. The Hero of Verdun, the man who won the plaudits of the world in the First Great War, is now a virtual prisoner in the hands of the Germans. When the Nazi hordes overran France, and the once great Democracy capitulated, the people turned to Petain. At any rate, he seemed to be the one man whom the people respected, and trusted. It was not an enviable position for the once proud leader to assume. Whether he was still a believer in the independence of France, and sought to make the best of a bad job, or whether he was an out-and-out collaborationist, probably will not be known until all the records are available.

Whatever may have been Petain's motives at the time of the fall of France, his position as the scroll of history unrolled, became more difficult. As the grip of Germany tightened around the throat of France, Petain became a leader in name only. Laval, the military tool of Germany, assumed the actual control of the State. But the aged Marshal had to accept responsibility for all the acts of the Vichy Government, in spite of the fact that he became a ruler in name only.

Then, when the common people rose in anger and demanded their rights as citizens of France, they turned to Petain. They demanded his resignation as head of the puppet government. At the same time, his German overlords, true to their principles, controlled his actions, threatening to shoot a hundred Frenchmen should he resign to his own people. With that, Petain submitted to the pressure of the Nazis and was taken, by them, a virtual prisoner, to Germany. History has rarely, if ever, revealed a more pathetic figure than the Marshal, now eighty-six years of age, a prisoner in the hands of those he once trusted, held, as they no doubt fondly hope, as a hostage against future events.

A MOMENTOUS CONFERENCE

Among all the great gatherings of these world-shaking years, none will exceed, in importance, the one to be held at Quebec. Germany is facing defeat. What is to be done with her, what shall be done to prevent Germany from precipitating another war when she feels strong enough to do so? How are the causes of all war to be removed from our world. These are some of the problems which those at Quebec will have to face. It is quite likely that a general plan in answer to these questions has been worked out. But now the issue becomes pressing and acute. The time for debate and discussion of theories and principles has passed. The time to apply principles to an actual world situation can be no longer delayed. All the United Nations are agreed that Nazi principles must go. There is no place for them in an ordered society of people. To believe that, proclaim it, and insist on it, is one thing, to apply the belief is quite another. Just how is the whole mentality of a people to be changed? How are the Nazis to be taught a new way of life? How are they to become willing partners in a world order built on co-operation, and the welfare of the people? These are the details that demand a clear-cut, definite programme of action for their achievement. At Quebec it is safe to predict this situation will be met, and plans formulated.

The importance of this cannot be overestimated. Hitler, when he launched his attack on France, told his men that the course of history for the next thousand years would be determined by their success or failure. It is, of course, unwise to make such long-term predictions, and such sweeping generalizations, and yet the situation to be faced at Quebec is such that the history of mankind will be reflected in its decisions.

What to do with Europe is one issue, but it is not the only one with which Quebec will have to deal. Having settled that, the question of the Orient will remain to be answered. Japan is having her own way pretty much in China. While Japan has been defeated in many areas of the Pacific, she has had time to consolidate her gains in China proper. Every day that she continues her hold of China, makes the task of ousting her more difficult. With the European War at an end, the whole might of Great Britain and the United States will have to be turned against Japan. The strategy along general lines for dealing with Japan will, no doubt, be the other major problem at Quebec.

V

FALL FAIRS

The time of the Fall Fairs has rolled around again. How quickly the seasons come and go. It seemed only a few days ago we were getting the land ready for seeding and now the Fall Fairs are on us. There is nothing quite like a Fall Fair. In the early days they were started to improve, by competition, the condition of the crops. In that direction, they have fulfilled a great function—improving the stock and the field crops. But they were more than educational institutions, they provided a great time for community reunions. In the days when transportation was difficult, and work on the farm more isolated than it is now, these gatherings were great events in the life of the community.

Recently, the trend has been towards more entertainment at the fairs. At first there were baseball games, pitching horseshoes and the tug-o'-war. But as we became more sophisticated ,professional entertainers were brought in and with that came games of chance and gambling by means of which the community is illegally drained of thousands of dollars by those who prey on human weakness.

The current issue of "The New Yorker" makes a suggestion with respect to Fall Fairs which is worth considering. A Senator in the United States was taking the Food Administrator to task for purchasing a lot of eggs for which there was no use, and the following is the record as reported in The New Yorker:—

"Do you mean to say," asked Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, Michigan, "that the American taxpayers have invested between $100,000,000 and $150,000,000 on eggs we have no use for?"

"That's right," the witness replied.

"What are you going to do with all those eggs?" inquired the Senator.

"I wish I knew," said the witness.

"Well, perhaps in that case the witness won't object if we make a suggestion. That money can easily be got back and the eggs disposed of. Let's go about it logically. First of all, where is that $150,000,000? Obviously, it is in the pockets of farmers. Where are farmers these days? Everybody knows that they are at state and county fairs, engaged in high jinks, or will be soon. The simple course of action would be for the Government to play the fairs. You take a big white sheet and cut a hole in it large enough for the chairman of the War Food Administration to stick his head through, and you have the eggs sitting in baskets, with a fellow to take in the dimes—three shots for a dime. Why, it wouldn't be any time at all . . . ."

Of course, if such a form of recreation were introduced here, we would have to find our own objects of the people's aim. We can think of several who might qualify. We rather think that such an innovation would attract so much attention that the professional gamblers would have to fold up. It's worth a try any way.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 17TH, 1944

THE KINGDOM STRONGLY ESTABLISHED
Lesson Text: II Samuel 2: 4-7; 5, 1-10

David has always been regarded by the Jewish people as their great King. They look back to his reign as the high water mark in their political history. There is much justification for this. He was a young lad when he was first marked out for leadership among his people. His rise to power was not by the easy path. He had to prove his worth. He had to win his way against strong and bitter opposition. It is a mistake to idealize him and regard him as a perfect man who was chosen for a position because of his perfection. He made plenty of mistakes. There are some actions in his life that cannot be glossed over nor ignored. And yet, in spite of these, he was a great man, and a great king.

At first, David was a sort of adventurous outlaw, surrounded by a lot of young dashing, vigorous young men. They went about catching sheep thieves and protecting the property of wealthy men. His qualities of leadership, his ability to win friends and hold them his capacity to secure the loyalty and devotion of men of action were just those that were needed in a king for the times. He was first made King of Juda, only. The country was divided. There were those loyal to Saul and his family, and those loyal to the new King, David. Something like civil war prevailed in the country for two years, accompanied by all the bitterness, cruelty and assassination we know to follow in the wake of an armed clash within a nation.

Finally, however, David succeeded in uniting the diverse elements in the country and in organizing the whole nation on the basis of a strong unified programme of expansion and development. The incident recorded in the first part of the lesson displays one of the qualities in his character which made him great. He had heard that the people of Jabish-Gilead had shown kindness to Saul. He might have been excused had he shown some resentment against those who had supported his rival. Instead he sent them a message of appreciation of the respect they had shown Saul in giving him a proper burial. They had done a respectful and kindly thing in burying Saul. The message recognizing this was an act of great tact. David won the loyalty and devotion of those who had opposed him, not by punishing them but by congratulating them on the kindness they had exercised towards their dead leader. By this magnanimous gesture he won the people of Jabesh-Gilead, overcame all opposition to his own rule and united the nation.

There was still the problem of Israel, however. David had succeeded in Juda. He now repeated in the larger arena what he had done in the smaller one. The tribes of Israel came to him, to Hebron. There, through their appointed elders, they acknowledged his leadership. David made a covenant with them and he became their king, as well.

All that was necessary now to secure the complete union of the diverse elements of the nation, was to overcome the only other centre of opposition that of the Jebusites. The Jebusites with their headquarters at Jerusalem, held out to the last. Finally, David organized a military expedition against the city, defeated the Jebusites, took the city and established it as the capital of the united action. This was a great achievement. Not only did it wipe out all remaining opposition in the country, but it gave the people a new centre of interest, a city about which there could be no local prejudices and on the conquest of which all could agree, and on the development of which all unitedly and wholeheartedly could give their devotion and loyalty.

David was a great man, great because of his tact ,his military prowess his ability to win friends, and above all his willingness to admit his faults and seek forgiveness. No man can be perfect. Those who would gloss over David's sins on the grounds they were common to the day, do him less than justice. It is a mark of his greatness that he acknowledged his sins, sought God's forgiveness and we have faith to believe, secured it.

What a time there has been over Jerusalem ever since David made it the centre of their religious and national life. Much water has passed under the bridge since then. But the issue is not yet settled. What to do with Jerusalem and Palestine is still one of the most vexed problems of our day. The Jews demand a national home. The plight of the Jews in our day is one of the most tragic episodes of all history. The effort has been made to exterminate them from Europe—it has all but succeeded. They need a home of their own, it was promised them by Great Britain. but for the time being. that promise is unfulfilled.

PRRESENTATION MADE TO MR. AND MRS. BLAKE ALLEN BY CAMDEN EAST FRIENDS

On the evening of Friday, September 1st, the friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Allen met at their home and presented them with three very appropriate and serviceable gifts. The presentations were made by Mr. Bert Martin, Mr. Donald Aikenbrack, and Miss Marion Dunn, as the following address was read by Mrs. Bruce Allen:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Allen.

'Fern and Curtis:—

We, your neighbours and friends of Bethel and River Streets have gathered here to-night to send with you our best wishes for health, happiness and good fortune in your new home in Napanee.

We will certainly miss your untiring efforts in helping in every way you could in the interests of the community, especially at our happy gatherings in 'the Little Red School House.' We feel that the Allens were always willing to help in every heavy loads of life that neighbours often bear. We hope that you will like your new home and will always remember your old friends and neighbours and visit us often.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen, we ask you to accept this chair from your friends. To Fern, whose studies are becoming more difficult, we wish to present this sturdy table for your room. And Curtis, we also wish to lighten your studies with this desk lamp.

We hope that these gifts will find a useful place in your home and serve as a remembrance of your friends on Bethel and River Streets.

LEADERS' SCHOOL OPENS SESSIONS WHITBY COLLEGE

BY CORA NILL

Ten years ago the School for Leaders of the W. M. S. of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch of The United Church of Canada was organized. The anniversary was particularly referred to Monday night at the Ontario Ladies' College when the school opened for its tenth session, with upwards of 140 delegates registered — women from all parts of the Conference interested in the missionary program of the church. The College has always been an ideal place for the school, all facilities being placed at the disposal of the delegates.

It was owing to the united efforts of this branch in establishing this School that other schools were established throughout the branches. This was revealed by Mrs. W. L. Smythe, dean of the school for several years, as she welcomed the delegates to the tenth anniversary. The story of the anniversary will develop and unfold as the school proceeds.

Dr. C. R. Carscallen, principal, reviewed the history of the college from its first name, 'Trafalgar Castle,' to its present name.

One of the highlights of the School was a series of three lectures delivered by Rev. C. G. Park, M.A., Whitby. Mr. Park's subject was "The Church and Post War Problems," under three headings, "The Church Shall Live," "The Artisans of Peace" and "The Clash of Race." Startling facts were revealed and solutions offered for many problems that a peace world will face. There must be a co-operating church; the artisans, or common toilers of the world must have a part in building the edifice of peace and the realization that true Christian consciousness constitutes a bond of unity which transcends all the barriers of race and class and culture were points dealt with in detail.

Canada with her 70 nationalities has a unique opportunity to build a truly cosmopolitan Christian nation. Let us be done with racial discrimination and animosity in this fair land. Let us build here the true family of God, said Mr. Park in conclusion.

As in previous years, each day's session opened with worship and Bible study conducted by the Dean, Mrs. W. L. Smythe's subject was "The One Way of Hope" wherein she revealed to her audience and convinced them that not through politics or economics would the new way of life arise out of the destruction of the post-war world, but only as the love of God is lived out through the lives and practices of Christian men and women.

Each day from five to six "Our Study Books and how to use Them" was ably conducted by specialists in each class, namely Mrs. Carscallen for auxiliaries, C.G.I.T. groups, Mrs. N. H. Butcher, and Mission Bands, Mrs. Gilmore and Mrs. Harrison. Miss C. Wagar guided her department, Mission Circles, through a two-fold course of study, enriching the personal Christian experience and developing a knowledge and understanding of races and nationalities.

An enlarged attendance at the Handicraft classes under the direction of Miss Margaret Seymour, and the keen interest displayed by the students indicated the popularity of this department.

Each day from 2:00 to 3:30 the Branch executive met to transact routine business. Organized Recreation from 3:30 to 4:30 each day under Mrs. R. M. Seymour's direction is one of the enjoyable features of the school. The early afternoon discussions under the direction of Miss C. Chappell were arranged on the principle that nothing is more interesting than people and that it is most worth while to meet and hear directly from them of other countries and races. Therefore to her discussion groups as special guests of the School came Miss Clare Sloane Seale of Trinidad, and two Canadians of Japanese ancestry. They were Miss Nora Fujita and Miss Muijo (Peggy) Goromaru, from the evacuation area in British Columbia. In addition to receiving first-hand knowledge of problems and conditions through discussion, Miss Chappell illustrated through chart and poster the weakest link in the W. M. S. chain, the decreasing missionary staff.

Even a condensed story of the school would not be complete without mention of the features of the 10th anniversary, Tuesday night, at dinner the festivities were launched when a three-storey birthday cake, complete with candles graced the head table. This was followed by an evening of gay and hilarious entertainment arranged and conducted by Mrs. Seymour, a specialist in this department. Incidentally, all received a piece of birthday cake as a fitting conclusion. More serious features were a candle-lighting service presented on opening night, written by Mrs. E. J. Wagar and her daughter, Constance, and directed by the former, portraying the educational value and high ideals of the School down through its ten years of life; and on Thursday night a dramatization "A Pageant of the Years" by the same authors. The interesting narrative was unfolded by 'the five ladies taking part: Miss Wagar, Mrs. F. Bannister, Mrs. S. W. Spafford, Mrs. Gordon Adams, and Mrs. R. M. Seymour.' Mrs. Crawford acted as soloist and sang as a fitting finale "The Whole Wide World for Jesus."

On Wednesday night Rev. Jesse H. Arnupp, D.D., and Miss Caroline Wellwood, Reg. N., presented lights and shadows on the foreign missions department.

TO HOLD ANOTHER EXPORT FOOD SHOW OTTAWA, NOV. 21, 22

Another Eastern Ontario Export Food Show is to be held in Ottawa this year. The dates are November 21st and 22nd and it is again to be held in the Engineering Building Central Experimental Farm, where the three similar previous shows were held.

In addition to exhibits of cheese, bacon, eggs and poultry, there will be this year exhibits of honey and apples, with entries from the eleven counties in Eastern Ontario, namely, Carleton, Lanark, Leeds, Renfrew, Grenville, Dundas, Stormont, Glengarry, Prescott, Russell and Frontenac. Adjacent counties in the Province of Quebec are also invited to make entries in honey and eggs.

Consideration for the entries in the honey and apple exhibits will have to be given now as harvest time in both these products is at hand. There is a junior class in the apple exhibit, open to boys and girls up to sixteen years of age. The entries need not necessarily be grown on the farm of the exhibitor, but the selecting and exhibiting must be by the boy or girl entering.

In the cheese exhibit there will be an open class for June cheese, another for July and August cheese and one for cheese made in September. Competition in the county class will be among cheesemakers in their own county Entries in this class will be with October cheese.

Keen interest is being shown in the egg and poultry classes. As in other years there will be educational and special exhibits of food products as well as a display of labor saving devices for the farm.

W. M. Croskery, the Agricultural Representative for Carleton County, 295 Albert Street, Ottawa, is again the Manager of the Show.

Why Conservation Of Milk Is Urged

The great reason why conservation of milk is being urged by the Prices Board lies in the fact that total demand for milk in its various forms now exceeds supply. Moreover, out of every gallon of milk that is produced, a variety of essential foods must be supplied. These include fluid milk, the most valuable of all from the standpoint of nutrition; cheese, for our own supply and to yield the 125,000,000 pounds we have agreed to send the United Kingdom; butter, to meet the coupon ration and to send to prisoners-of-war; evaporated milk, for babies and those living in remote areas where fresh milk is not obtainable; and powdered milk a pound of which is included in every prisoner-of-war parcel.

Time For Application Expires September 30

Hunters are reminded that to obtain small arms ammunition under the relaxation of the rationing regulations recently announced they must apply to their Local Ration Board before September 30, bringing with them their gun registration certificates and ration books. The permits thus obtained may be used for the purchase of the ammunition specified until December 31 next. It is brought to notice that non-residents without guns registered in this country are not entitled to buy ammunition here, although those who receive permission from the R.C.M.P. may import ammunition for sporting purposes. However, Americans who regularly visit Canada and who already have guns registered in this country will be treated the same as any other applicant upon presentation of their gun registration certificates.

WEDDING BELLS

KIDD - BYRNE

On Monday September 4th, 1944 a pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of the Assumption, Erinsville, by Rev. John A. Powell, when Anna Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Byrne became the bride of John Archibald, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kidd.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a long gown of white broadcloth satin, made on princess lines, with finger-pointed sleeves and sweetheart neckline, finger-tip veil with sweetheart coronet, and carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and maiden-hair-fern. She wore the groom's gift, a string of pearls.

The bridesmaid, Gertrude Kidd, Reg. N. of Utica, New York sister of the groom, looked charming in a floor-length gown of pink faille trimmed with lace and blue accessories. She carried a nosegay of mixed flowers with fern.

The groom was ably assisted by Gerald Lollar of Odessa, cousin of the bride. Ambrose Kidd, brother of the groom, presided at the organ and, assisted by the choir, rendered appropriate music. The ushers were Mr. Joseph Fobert, of Tweed, Ont., and Eugene Donohue, of Toronto.

After the buffet luncheon at the home of the bride's parents, the bride and groom left for Toronto and points west. For traveling the bride donned a beige wool suit with brown accessories.

V. O. N. BOARD MEETING

The September Board meeting of the Victorian Order Nurses was held on Monday evening, September 11, Mrs. T. Hunt, the president, presided. Mrs. W. S. Phippen, the secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting and the correspondence. Mrs. Medd, the treasurer, read her report.

It was decided at this meeting to ask co-operation from the Town Council, to hold a V. O. N. Tag Day on Saturday, September 30th.

The next meeting of the V. O. N. will be an open meeting, and will be held on October 11th. This date was decided on as Thanksgiving Day comes, this year, on the day the meetings should have been held.

The following is the nursing report for the months June, July and August. The work was quite heavy during June and July but was quiet during August. There were eight confinements, which made the nursing heavy during this period. During the three-month period 365 visits were made and 103 cases carried. 176 visits were made in June 184 in July and 23 in August.

In June the Annual Diptheria Toxoid Clinic under the Board of Health was completed with 24 children completing the course of three inoculations. About 357 of the children entering school in September registered in June and were inspected by the nurse. There were four Child Welfare Conferences held during June, which were well attended. Due to alterations at the Armouries and vacation, the conferences were not held during July and August. Now, with the vacation over, we should be looking forward to a fresh start in our work. At present the nursing service is busy and promises to continue so.

WEDDING BELLS

WOODCOCK—McFARLANE

Selby, Sept. 7. — A very pretty wedding was solemnized at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, September 2nd, by Rev. W. R. Merrick, in Selby United Church parsonage, when Vera Naomi McFarlane, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McFarlane, became the bride of Donald Lorne Woodcock, youngest son of Mrs. Woodcock and the late Ezra Woodcock, of Napanee. The youthful bride was very dainty and winsome in a floor-length gown of white sheer crepe with lace bodice, shoulder-length veil and long lace mitts. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Miss Ruby McFarlane, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, wore a smart street-length gown of blush pink jersey with corsage of American Beauty roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Clifford Pinken. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. McFarlane, mother of the bride, received in a gown of lavender crepe fetted with white. Mrs. Woodcock, mother of the groom, wore a frock of black crepe. Standards of gladioli and bouquets of asters were used as decoration throughout the house. In the dininroom the table was attractive, centred with the wedding cake and tall pink tapers. Three cousins of the bride, Mesdames Sanford Russell, Ward Hodgston and Joe Duggeon, catered refreshments to about 50 guests. The bride's gift to the bridesmaids was a compact. The groom's gift to the groomsman was a tie pin and clip. Friends of the bride who served refreshments to the guests each received a box of chocolates. In the late afternoon the happy couple left for a motor trip through the United States, calling on the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Charlotte Bradshaw, who is resting in Miami, New York. The bride travelled in mauve crepe with brown accessories. On their return the young couple will reside on the groom's farm in the Mount Pleasant district.

CASUALTIES TOTAL 33,239

Ottawa, (CP) — Canadian army casualties at July 31 had increased 3,768 over the previous announced total of 29,471 which included figures for all theatres up to June 30 and the Normandy campaign to July 20, the Defence Department disclosed last Friday.

The department announced that since the war started up to July 21 army casualties totalled 33,239, composed of 9 501 killed in action, 3387 presumed dead, 1,309 missing, 3,809 prisoners of war and interned and 18 343 wounded.

The latest figures showed an increase over the previous figures of 1,601 of those killed in action and presumed dead, a decrease of 418 of those missing, an increase of 69 of those held as prisoners of war and interned, and an increase of 2,516 of those wounded.

The department explained that the figure of 3,800 prisoners and internees included 108 who had been repatriated or escaped. The decrease in the number of missing came about as a result of soldiers being reclassified under other categories.

SWEDEN CLOSES FRONTIERS TO WAR GUILTY

Stockholm, (B.U.P.) — Sweden will not grant asylum to war criminals, Minister of Social Affairs Gustav Moeller said last week.

Outlining his government's policy for the first time, Moeller pointed out Sweden kept her frontiers open to all seeking refuge and 61,000 refugees are now in the country.

"During the war, however," he continued, "there have been committed terrible deeds of such nature that hardly anybody would have thought possible in a world calling itself civilized. Such deeds were committed, above all, in occupied countries."

"Many people knowing they are responsible for actions which shocked the mind and sense of justice of ordinary people and which can not be justified by requirements of war, will try to escape to neutral countries in order to elude punishment.

"Thus far it has been our policy to keep our frontiers open for refugees, but it should not be concluded we will grant asylum to those who by their action defied the conscience of a civilized world or betrayed their own country.

"It can be taken for granted that Sweden will close its frontiers against any large or small invasion of such 'political' refugees and should anyone slip through he will be returned to his own country."

ALWAYS DEPENDABLE!

A man who is periodically arrested and fined for over-convivial behavior in his native town recently got into similar trouble in London and was fined forty shillings.

"Your worship," he protested, "may I point out that at home I am fined only ten shillings for this offence."

"You can hardly expect," replied the magistrate, "to have a London celebration at provincial prices."
